

FORMAL FROCKS NOW HAVE THE YOUTH OF SPORTS WEAR

New Gowns Are Marvel of Designing

BY ROSETTE HARGROVE
NEA Service Writer

PARIS, July 6.—Undoubtedly the reason why women hesitated so long before abandoning the youthful simplicity of morning styles was their fear that a more complicated cut, longer skirts and other so-called "feminine" details would add to their years.

The formal afternoon frock now being an essential number of the summer wardrobe, however, the couturiers have accomplished a near miracle this season by creating at once the most youthful and most feminine of gowns destined for all formal summer festivities.

Slim Silhouette

Whether fashioned of georgette, chiffon, lace or crepe de chine, whether in plain colors or gay with floral designs, the new afternoon gowns show the same slim silhouette as the informal morning or sports suit.

Despite the sheerness of some of the fabrics employed there is no unnecessary fullness at the neckline in the most recent models.

Skirts are form-fitting to well below the hip line, and width is introduced by godets or pleats.

Extreme Femininity

The femininity of these dresses is expressed in scalloped hems, berths and wide, bell sleeves. A channel flowered chiffon garden party dress, for example, will have its hemline showing a cut-out of the pattern.

A dotted mousseline de soie created by Jenny has its hem, neckline and bottom of its sleeves daintily scalloped.

Still another attractive model created by Madame Jenny—who always has excelled in this type of afternoon dress—shows a double apron effect on a narrow foundation slip, both edged with a tightly pleated edging of the same fabric.

The cap sleeves also are edged with the same edging, and the flatness of the bodice is relieved by three of the frills separated down the middle by a flat band which is made to button with three large nacre buttons.

Accessories Lend Contrast

Many of the new afternoon frocks show some sort of jacket, as the majority of women feel more adequately dressed this way.

Moreover, they easily can be worn for dinner at a smart open-air restaurant on hot summer evenings, and this is where the wrap, however fragile, is very useful.

Black, green, yellow, blue and brown on a white ground, or vice versa, are fashionable color combinations for the printed fabrics.

Accessories offer a colorful contrast this season in the form of long gloves and shoes, and usually are of the same color as the hat.

Black, brown and white are the most fashionable in the order named.

Both small and large hats accompany these afternoon frocks, but later on in the season the picture hat is sure to be worn almost exclusively at the fashionable seaside resorts and watering places.

SUMMER CHIC MADE EASY BY FLOWERY GOWNS

There are many ways of achieving chic via the summery flowered frock. Quaint charm is seen in the navy blue and white printed frock at left, from Jenny, with the tiny cap sleeves, double tunic, and the front of the bodice trimmed with finely pleated ruffles. Alexandrine makes gloves of blue and white to go with it.

Jenny uses big light blue polka dots on a white ground for the next afternoon frock, which is topped by a blue visor hat from Lemmonier.

The formal black and white printed afternoon ensemble from Worth has a reversible black coat lined with the print, and a black pique hat with white velvet crown, from Gaby Mono.

Several shades of yellow make tiny nosegays on the black crepe de chine jacket ensemble from Jenny, shown at right. The organdie collar, the Alexandrine gloves and the jersey straw Lemmonier hat all are of chalk white.

—WHAT'S IN FASHION?— Men's Vacation Clothes

Directed By AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, July 6.—What are good clothes for a man to take on his vacation?

Motorists and golfers are wearing two-button, notch lapel coats of tweedy materials with plus-four knickers or gray flannel slacks.

Usually a plain, slipover, V-neck sweater goes with this outfit—made of lightweight, loosely woven wool in a light color like yellow, green, tan, blue or gray. Hose are usually plain, too, matching the sweater, or at least going with it.

Sports Jackets Popular

Ocean-going and boardwalk-strolling men wear sports jackets of flannel, tweed, camel's hair, shetland or linen with flannel or serge trousers.

The jackets are two or three-button, single-breasted ones, with a plain or half-breasted and stitched back, patch pockets and notched lapels.

The trousers are usually white, with narrow stripes for a second choice and the new all-over bird's eye designs if you want a third. Striped trousers generally match the blue, gray, brown or tan of the jacket.

Light Weights Needed

Two-piece linen suits and double or single breasted flannel suits are good for any vacationist to have along. Lightweight worsteds are liked particularly for train travel.

At night the most fashionable combination is the blue coat and white trousers.

Soft, cool hats and caps are better for vacations than the stiffer kinds. Which means Panama hats, light-weight felts, linen and tweed caps that shade the face, can be folded up into the pocket and don't blow off.

Boater straws, though stiff, are good looking, especially with the jaunty outfits. But heavy felts certainly don't belong in the vacation picture.

Foulards and other lightweight silks tell the necktie story, in small all-over patterns of every description and in spaced figures, too.

"White-and" Shoes

As for shoes, black-and-white and brown-and-white buck and calf combinations are first choice of vacationing men wherever they are going. All white buckers with black soles are newer, though.

Socks as light as they can get them are what most men take—silk, linen and featherweight woolens. Plain bright colors, clocks, all-over patterns and stripes are the usual order of choice.

Pack a pair of tennis shoes if you play—a bathing suit if you swim—and the necessary accessories for whatever is your favorite vacation pastime—and you're ready from a clothes standpoint for the time of your life.

Cabana Club Will Issue Invitations

Invitations will be issued this week to Indianapolis society for membership in the Cabana Bath Club of Indianapolis, which, when completed, will be one of the city's most exclusive and fashionable clubs. Announcement of the building plan has just been made. Option has been taken on three sites north of the city limits, with the final selection to be made later.

The proposed plan is copied from the ultra-fashionable bath clubs at Palm Beach and Miami, Fla. Building will start when membership has reached fifty-five. There will be two classes of memberships, Cabana members and non-Cabana members.

Cost Set at $100,000

Cabana members will own in fee their individual Cabana, which is a small structure, containing a large room; with dressing room, shower bath, lavatory and wardrobe, with a patio or porch in front, covered with awning, and finished with a porch glider. The Cabana will be built around three sides of a large swimming pool, with a filter which will change the water completely every eight hours. The pool will be bordered with white sand and a board walk.

A large club house will be erected at the fourth side of the pool, for the use of non-Cabana members. There will be lockers and lounges here for men and women, with a tea room, and open air dance pavilion on the roof. Non-Cabana members will have full privileges of the club. The club will be built of colored stucco and tile in Spanish design, at an approximate cost of $100,000.

Apartment Depository

A depository will be appointed to pay on construction costs and managerial expenses at the approval of the president and treasurer to be elected by the membership when it reaches fifty-five. A membership committee to be elected by the members and directors will have the power to reject or approve the sale or rental of a Cabana by a club member.

Each member of the family of a club member will be issued an associate membership card without charge, which will entitle him to an individual locker, and other privileges of the club. No guest card will admit any guest unless escorted by a member or associate member of the club.

A Cabana club of similar plan and design was recently constructed at Bexley, a fashionable suburb of Columbus, O., and has been very popular.

Just Every Day Sense

BY MRS. WALTER FERGUSON

WHEN the worst is over, we probably shall look back and see that the depression was in some ways a friend in disguise.

Organizations, for instance, are having the hardest kind of sledding. It has become almost impossible to raise half of the vast sums that once were so easy to obtain and that went into all kinds of uplift movements.

Making over our brother, putting pep into the community, and dispensing "service" all over the place, is becoming increasingly difficult. A good many giant organizations that flourished in the prosperous past may expire from lack of funds.

And that might not be so bad as it sounds. There is no doubt that over-organization is one of the serious ills from which we suffer. Probably less than 1/4 of 1 per cent of the entire population belongs to no national society.

Multitudes of us have names on numerous membership rolls and very little for our money. Clubs, societies, national this, and the other have cluttered up our lives until we can't think straight. If we have a conviction, we feel we must go and join something.

AND while much good has been done by certain of these organizations, it is not to be denied that we have failed to get our money's worth when we consider the expense of most of them. There is a topsy-turvy about their management that offsets most of the benefits they can bestow.

Consider for a moment the money that is spent in this country on the single item of sending delegates to conventions. It could pay off the soldiers' bonus with it in a few years. And if all the dues put out annually were collected in one sum, it would feed all the hungry mouths in the world.

I am convinced that one of the reasons for this depression is that we have let the delegates do our thinking for so long.

Sorority to Meet

Alpha chapter, Pi Sigma Tau sorority, will meet Tuesday night at the home of Miss Mary Ann Quigley, 343 North Leslie avenue. Plans for the sorority camping trip will be completed.

Your Child—Nobody Likes Spoiled Child, Don't Hang Handicap on Him

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

Don't give a child everything he wants. It is about the cruellest thing we can do. Cruel, not because life is a rather average affair, and the law of compensation is bound to be in evidence at some periods in his life, handing him disappointments that he can't cope with, but because people aren't going to like him.

Nobody likes a spoiled child when he is little. They will like him less when he is big.

Nor is it fair by mere weakness on our part and sheer spinelessness inability to say "no," to allow him to grow up into a miserable, unhappy being, ruined by his own sense of expectancy.

This habit of wanting things and getting them grows. It gets to the point where there is no satisfaction. What then?

I know a family with two children who handed their youngsters the earth with their monograms on it.

They were lovely, normal, lovable children when they were little—this boy and girl. I predicted trouble when their mistaken parents insisted on making them receiving stations for everything they could scrape up money to buy.

Not only that, but they couldn't and wouldn't say "no." The word "must" was torn out of their dictionary. They were regular "yes" parents.

I hadn't seen either of the children for several years—then I saw them one day this spring. The history of these years was written all over their faces. The boy fang in with an open letter in his hand. He is to go to college in the fall and had learned that he couldn't have a room to himself.

"I won't go a step to the old college!"
