Just Every Day Sense

THE battle between mother-in-law and daughter-in-law is one in which no truce ever is signed. The conflict rages perennially, with the older woman coming off in somewhat battered condition.

Psychologists have made maternitity a bitter thing by their insistence that most marital disasters may be traced to inefficient or meddling mothers. Never before, therefore, has mamma come in for so much hissing from the grandstand and never has daughter-in-law been quite so high-handed and arrogant and sure of herself.

In most of these bouts she wins all the rounds, because practically all the advantages lie with the younger person. Yet she seldom is ready to give quarter and is not satisfied unless she can knock her opponent out completely.

Now I can't see why a man's wife and a man's mother may not sign a peace pact. And to do so, it's up to the former to make the overtures.

—WHAT'S IN FASHION?—

Piquant Pique a Summer Winner

Directed By AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, July 7.—When you see an eager young person dash onto the tennis courts dressed in pique, you can lay your money on her to win.

She wins, even if she loses the match. Because pique is a summer fashion winner.

Why is it? Certainly not because it's new. You've seen pique ever since you wore it in the grade schools, though of course it's being used today in ways you'd never have thought of them. (Pique gloves, for instance.)

It's more because of the air it has. Fresh as a daisy, always. Spick-and-span-lish (and we don't mean Spanish, because there's nothing less Spanish than crisp pique).

All you need is to put a collar and cuff set of pique on your street dress or suit to get the idea. It has a piquancy that transforms the simplest outfit into an exciting costume.

To put on a complete tailored suit of pique—and it's fashionable to do so—is as good for the summer morale as a gift of a million . . . nearly. It sets you up—makes you feel ready to go places and do things.

Suit piques are usually the fine wale French type. But wide wales are smart, too, and you'll find lots of them in separate skirts and jackets that can be combined into a suit.

Yes—if it weren't for the fact that variety is the spice of life, you could just about make up a complete summer sports wardrobe from pique and be as fashionable as anybody.

But at least have a touch of it somewhere . . . one costume that makes you as piquant as the pique itself.
