THREE STATES SWEEPED BY FIRE

Flames Raze Forests and Menace Villages.

DENVER, July 28.—Fires raged today through thousands of acres of virgin timber and brush lands in Montana, Idaho and California and defied efforts of several thousand men to stop them.

Two historic mining towns, Red Dog and You Bet, in California, were threatened by one huge blaze which 400 men were fighting in Grass Valley.

The worst fire of the season roared through a white pine forest near Missoula, Mont. Herds of deer, bears and other beasts fled. The lives of more than 1,000 men fighting the blaze were in constant danger because high winds carried embers miles ahead of the front line.

Flames had leveled 30,000 acres of forest in that vicinity, raced through the Pend Oreille forest in Idaho, and across the state line into the Yaak river section of the Kootenai forest, in Montana.

Fires were sweeping unchecked up all sides of Mount Diablo, destroying a state park and many valuable trees. Scores of men, including all prisoners from the Contra Costa jail, were fighting there.

The burglars covered their work on the safe with soap. They had drilled two small holes in which the "soup" was poured for the explosion that blew the front door off the strong box.

INSULL PETITION ASKS OUSTER IN POWER SERVICE

However, Decatur Says
O. K. Was Given by Chief of Utility Group.

A new angle on what might be termed "entrapment" was charged at a hearing before the public service commission today.

The hearing is on the Insull petition to oust the Decatur municipal electric lines from the unincorporated town of Monmouth in Adams county and keep them from extending into Allen county.

This district is served by the Insull-owned Indiana Service Corporation and the municipal lines have been extended illegally without commission order, the petitioners contend.

But Arthur L. Gilliom, attorney for the city of Decatur, brought out that the line to Monmouth had been extended only after Chairman John W. McCordie of the commission had told a Decatur delegation that the extension was O. K.

Commissioner Jere West, conducting the case, continued the hearing until after noon so that this point might be investigated.

McCordie told The Times that he did assure Decatur city officials that it was all right to proceed. He said a permit for a rural extension had been approved by the commission and that it is common practice to permit further extensions in the same direction without a commission order.

Twenty residents of the territory served are on hand to testify that they want the municipal service from the small Decatur plant rather than the huge Insull power, because the municipal service is cheaper and there is no $100 connection charge, as levied by the power magnate.

The morning was devoted to arguments by attorneys on commission jurisdiction, Gilliom having offered a motion to dismiss the case because of lack of commission power to rule in the matter.
