Be on Guard to Erase Habit of Self-Pity in Disposition

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"Come here, darling, and let me feel your head."

Patsy came over and offered her flushed little face to her mother. "You do feel hot, honey; are you sure you feel all right?"

"Oh, for goodness sake, let her alone, Mary. There's nothing wrong with her. She's been out in the sun."

"Don't be heartless, Joe. You're always saying there's nothing wrong with the children. If you'd had your way they would have been dead long ago."

"Am I sick, mama?"

"No, I guess not. You're just pretty hot. But let Lucy not to give you any cakes or bananas; you might get sick when you're so warm."

"I did have a cake and I had a banana, too, just now."

"Heavens! Well, you will be sick if I know anything. That's just too bad. Are you perfectly sure you don't have a pain anywhere?"

Discovers a Pain

"I've got a little pain—right here," said Patsy, laying her hand on her stomach. "It hurts pretty bad."

"She wasn't sick till you told her she was," remarked Patsy's father impatiently. But his wife withered him with a look. "Stick out your tongue, dear," she said to the small sufferer.

"Coated! I knew it. I'll go and get the thermometer. I'm so afraid you're going to be sick in bed. No—no temperature, I guess," she admitted almost grandly, "but it's too soon to tell. Come upstairs and I'll give you some of those nice pills the doctor left last time you had a stomach upset."

Mother Is Alarmed

"Mary, you just make me boil," persisted Joe. "Of course any one will be sick if you tell him he is going to be." But Mary passed him swiftly with Patsy in tow. Going upstairs Patsy tripped and rolled down two or three stairs.

Her mother shrieked. "Darling! My poor baby!" And stooping she gathered up the chubby body in her arms, her own face the picture of tragedy.

WHAT'S IN FASHION?

Dresses Worn Without Coats Directed By AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—You've the right idea all right if you choose a street dress for your first fall costume. With clothes so good looking and so different, you want to get out on the street and show the world you have something new.

And of course you don't want to cover it up with last spring's coat—and it's still too warm most days to wear a fall coat. So the clever thing to do is to choose a dress that's appropriate to wear on the street without a coat.

That means one that has a crisp, tailored, business-like look. One that gives you the same finished air a coat gives.

Obviously one of the best dresses to wear without a coat on fashionable fall avenues is the dress that looks like a coat—the coat-dress.

The Coat Dress

It's called coat dress because it goes on like a coat. You open it—put your arms in the sleeves—wrap it together and fasten it. . . just as you do a coat.

It has details, too, such as a coat might have. The button—or buttons—that fasten it over at the left side.

The diagonal closing line. A flat shawl collar effect. Sometimes a scarf that can be fastened close around the throat or left falling open.

Often it has fur trimming as coats have. Not the fluffy, long-haired furs, of course, because those wouldn't be practical to wear under a coat later on when coat-wearing weather arrives. But the flat soft furs.

Slightly Raised Line

We've had a coat dress sketched—the first of the three figures—that shows this use of fur on the wide revers that make it look very much like a coat.

The skirt has the slightly raised line in the hem, of the wrap-over that lots of coats have, too.

As a matter of fact, a dress like this could be mistaken very easily for a coat. Could be worn as one, too, except for the fact that the material is the lightweight, sheer wool that's so fashionable, and so comfortable for these in-between season dresses.

New Woollens Smart

These new woollens are quite the smartest thing you can choose for your dress that's to be worn coatless.

And they're practical. Good-wearing and a weight to tailor well. Warm enough for crisp days but not too warm for those last Indian summer ones.

Heavy, rougher-surfaced silks are good materials for these early fall street dresses, too. Some of them have almost a wool look in the grainy texture of their surface.

The dress sketched at the center is another type fine for street wear. The wide, notched lapels have a suit-like look. It has pockets in the skirt, placed just about where suit pockets would be.

Good Type to Choose

This is a good type to choose if you have a fur scarf of fox or marten or sable that you're planning to wear, since scarfs like those always look so well with suits.

The third sketch shows a slightly more formal dress, but one that's still tailored enough to make it quite appropriate for street wear. It's one of the modern versions of that old fashion, the basque dress, so smart in the last decade of the 1800's.

The basque takes the place the jacket would take in a suit. Indeed, it looks quite like a jacket with its wide revers.

These revers, incidentally, can be closed—the right one over the left—to close up the neckline when the wind blows.

Beat Frost to That Late Tomato Crop

BY SISTER MARY NEA Service Writer

If you have your own garden you can salvage those late tomatoes before danger of frost becomes imminent by making green tomato mince meat.

Many consider this mince meat quite as good as "regular" mince meat. Mock mince meat is not as rich and difficult to digest as the regular variety and it's more economical to make.

There are two good rules for green tomato mince meat. One uses suet and the other does not.

Of course, the one with suet is richer than the one without. The suetless mixture is rather like a preservative highly spiced and piquant. Nuts can be added to either recipe when the pies are baked.

MOCK MINE MEAT

One peck green tomatoes, 3 lemons, 1 cup chopped suet, 2 cups seeded raisins, 4 pounds light brown sugar, 1½ cups vinegar, 2 tablespoons cinnamon, 2 tablespoon nutmeg, 1 tablespoon cloves, 1 tablespoon allspice, 1 tablespoon salt.

Wash tomatoes and cut out the stem ends and any blemishes. Put through food chopper. Place in a large crock, sprinkling 1 cup salt through them. Let stand three hours. Drain over night through a colander and discard juice.

Squeeze juice from lemons and put rind through food chopper. Add juice, lemon rind, vinegar and suet to tomatoes in preserving kettle, bring to the boiling point and cook fifteen minutes.

Add sugar, raisins and spices and bring again to boiling point. Simmer until thick and seal in hot sterilized jars. When pies are baked, chopped apple can be added as liked.

The second rule is made without suet and vinegar.

TOMATO MINCE MEAT

Four pounds green tomatoes, 4 pounds sugar, 2 pounds raisins, 4 lemons, 2 tablespoons cinnamon, 2 tablespoons cloves, 2 tablespoons salt.

Wash and slice tomatoes. Sprinkle with salt and let stand three hours. Drain over night and discard juice as in preceding recipe. Weigh tomatoes after draining.

Put sugar, tomatoes, thinly sliced lemon and a little water into preserving kettle and cook until tomatoes are tender. Add raisins and spices and cook ten minutes longer. Seal in sterilized cans.

Green tomato pickles are good with winter stews and roasts and are very easily made.

GREEN TOMATO PICKLES

Wash and cut stems from tomatoes. Cut in slices about three-eighths inch thick and let stand in salt and water for one hour. Use ½ cup salt to three cups water to make the brine. Drain thoroughly and add to the following pickling syrup.

Three cups vinegar, 1 cup water, 2 pounds light brown sugar, ¼ cup whole pickling spices.

This is enough syrup for six to eight pounds of tomatoes. Bring the syrup to the boiling point. Put at once into hot sterilized cans and seal.
