

BRITAIN WARNED BY MACDONALD TO STEM PANIC

Pleads for Establishment of Stable Rule as Election
Nears.

By HARRY L. PERCY
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON, Oct. 8.—Great Britain turned toward a general election today, warned by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald that a stable government must be established to avoid financial panics, social distress, "and perhaps even revolution."

MacDonald included in his warning "other nations as well as ourselves," and added, "there is no reason for this happening except flustering hearts."

He appealed for support of the national government in a radio address rebroadcast to the United States.

The prime minister accused the late Labor government, which he headed, of carrying out "what it admitted to be its duty."

Points to Navy Strike
He said that prospects for the national government to finish the "deserted work" were promising at first, but "when certain naval incidents, exaggerated and misrepresented, were known all over the world, the task for which the government was formed could not succeed."

The "certain naval incidents" were disorders in the Atlantic fleet, due to reduction of enlisted men's pay, which caused a "passive strike" of sailors and cancellation of fleet maneuvers.

MacDonald said the national government's economy bill and supplementary budget prevented a catastrophe when sterling went off the gold standard. A cut in the value of money, he said, would be far more disastrous than cuts in pay made in the economy bill.

Warns of Bankruptcy
He warned that the state would become bankrupt unless imports and exports were balanced, then said the government would try to decrease imports through "some form of prohibition of certain luxuries and other unnecessary things, or it might mean a tariff which would act as an impediment to imports coming into the country."

The "socialist opposition," the Labor party now headed by Arthur Henderson, lost no time in defying MacDonald and his alliance with sections of Labor's political enemies. Henderson addressed the annual conference of the Labor party at Scarborough, and declared "the mean, sordid period of intrigue has ended and revealed to the nation the complete lack of insight the government has shown."

PHONE MERGER ASKED

Approval Sought for Joining 14
Small Indiana Companies.

Petition for formation of the United Telephone Company from fourteen small companies in Indiana was filed with the public service commission Wednesday by the United Telephone Company of Abilene, Kas., recent purchaser of the James P. Goodrich phone interests. Companies involved in the proposed merger:

Amboy Home Telephone Company; Baker's Corner-Ellettsville Company; Browns Valley-Newton Company; Center Telephone Company; Citizens Co-operative Company; Ekin Mutual Company; and Greentown, Mott, Mooresville, Morocco, Newton, State Line, Veederburg and Waynetown companies.

TRUCK SUIT IS FILED

Action Started to Mandate Mayr to Order "Foreigners" Arrested.

Legal action was started in circuit court Wednesday to mandate Frank Mayr Jr., secretary of state, to order the arrest of persons driving trucks and automobiles in Florida, Oklahoma and Tennessee within the boundaries of Indiana.

Those states require Indiana vehicles to buy licenses when driving within their territories. Indiana does not exact license fees from cars from outside the state.

The complaint was filed by Ward B. Hiner, bus line operator.

ATTACKS LICENSE LAW

City Counsel Believes Ban on Free
Permits Illegal.

Edward H. Knight, city corporation counsel, believes that Indiana's 1931 statute abolishing free automobile licenses for cities, school cities, and other similar corporations, is invalid, he told the works board today in a lengthy opinion.

To buy licenses for city-operated vehicles in Indianapolis would require about $4,000 annually.

Knight said he has conferred with a deputy attorney-general and had arranged with Grover C. Garrott, state police chief, to obtain an opinion on the new law from Attorney-General James M. Ogden.

Second Love Shattered, Aimee Emerges on Road to Success

This is the third of six stories on the amazing events in the love story of Aimee Semple McPherson. The Los Angeles evangelist, who recently embarked on her third honeymoon.

By LAURA LOU BROOKMAN
NEA Service Writer
(Copyright, 1931, by NEA Service, Inc.)

WHEN love came to Aimee McPherson for the second time no one had yet heard of "companionate marriage."

There is reason, however, to regard Aimee's marriage to Harold McPherson as one of the first companionate marriages. It followed the principles of a trial union to be terminated by mutual agreement should it prove unsatisfactory.

Harold was a grocery clerk in Providence, R. I. He attended a tent revival in East Providence one night, was attracted by the flaming-haired young woman who so fervently urged sinners to repent, remained after the meeting to talk with her, and subsequently made a "date."

A few weeks later he asked Aimee to be his wife.

Before she said "Yes," it was understood between the two that should the evangelist receive the call to missionary service she would heed it if it took her to the ends of the earth.

AND so they were married.

Aimee says: "I took up my household duties with the understanding that I should go back to the Lord's work if ever the call came." The quotation is from her published life story, "In the Service of the King."

There is no doubt that true love for a time graced this marriage, but eventually the pair became uncongenial.

The other day in discussing her wedding life with McPherson, Aimee—now blond and once more a bride—said:

"Harold McPherson divorced me seventeen years ago. He had been married prior to the time he married me. The Bible—Matthew 19:9—states plainly the rule of the Lord in such a case: 'The words, except it be clear me in the eyes of God and in my conscience, I don't believe in divorce on a slight pretext. The color of a man's necktie or the way he talks are not excuses for severing the holy bonds of wedlock.'"

HER new husband had little money. Three different times he established homes for his preacher-wife, but they were not very comfortable.

McPherson was easy-going. He preferred the quiet, orderly routine of filling grocery orders to soul-saving and hand-to-hand pulpit encounters with Lucifer.

The couple went to live with the husband's mother, Mrs. Annie McPherson, at her boarding house soon after their son, Rolf, was born.

Together Aimee and Harold edited a religious publication known as "The Bridal Call."

Gradually the rift between the two widened. The young wife became seriously ill and, when she believed herself at death's door, received what seemed a divine message, instructing her to devote herself to religious work.

Health returned and immediately Aimee set forth on the career that was to make her world famous. She left her two children with her mother and gave her full time to evangelistic revivals.

McPherson sued for divorce and it was granted. Aimee—in accord with the pre-nuptial pact—did not contest the suit. Later McPherson married again and removed to Florida.

TOURING the country in a battered automobile which carried a ramshackle tent, Aimee began to attract attention as a divine healer. She traveled throughout the south, east and New England.

In 1918, she was first heard in New York City at Old John Street M. E. church.

By this time her mother had joined her. "Ma" Kennedy, whose marriage, separation and remarriage to Guy Edward (What-a-Man) Hudson has furnished newspaper headlines throughout recent months, became the business manager of the McPherson troupe.

Together mother and daughter set out for the Pacific coast and there established a tent-church. Aimee's extraordinary style of preaching and her vivid, dynamic personality attracted literally thousands to the fold. In 1922 Angelus temple was built—magnificent evidence of her congregation's faith and loyalty.

HER sermons were "different." She preached once attired as a traffic policeman astride a motorcycle. Another time she appeared as a fireman.

The world read such reports of Mrs. McPherson's religious power as the following newspaper account:

"When she wears her flowing white robes and descends the long staircase that leads to the pulpit, her arms filled with roses, her hair beautifully dressed, she appears as an angel to her devoted audience. She radiates athletic vigor. Her eyes are large and brown and a smile plays on her full lips. She carries a Bible in her left hand. Her voice is powerful—magically sweet and loving with a lilt that sets one tingling."

Aimee in the pulpit at Angelus Temple

Enshrined in this structure, equipped with a radio and an entirely modern stage Aimee soared to heights never before surpassed in her field. Converts came to her in endless succession.

In the midst of this sunshine came storm clouds.

Next: Aimee meets Kenneth Ormiston, radio operator at the temple. Their names are linked in gossip. Aimee disappears from Los Angeles beach and returns a month later and tells of being kidnapped. Police are informed she was at a cottage with Ormiston.

CHINA MISSIONARY WILL SPEAK HERE

The Rev. John D. James to Be Heard at Gospel
Tabernacle.

Floods, revolutions and starvation raging in China are well known to the Rev. John D. James, for nineteen years a missionary in the Orient and a cousin of the notorious outlaw, Jesse James.

Friday night at 7:45 he will address members of the Indianapolis Gospel tabernacle, North and Alabama streets, of which the Rev. H. V. Cook is pastor.

Mr. James, his wife and two children, Ruby May, 10, and Paul B., 9, are en route to their home in Evergreen, Ala., to visit Mrs. James' father.

The children are said to be the "youngest missionaries in the world." They are musicians, sing in three languages, and have appeared before 10,000 persons in churches.

Together Aimee and Harold planned to return to China early next year.

VOTE FOR 5-DAY WEEK

Pressmen's Union First Here to Put Idea Into Effect.

Adoption of the five-day week immediately as a means of meeting the unemployment situation was voted by the Indianapolis Newspaper Pressmen's Union, No. 37, Monday night.

"The union feels that its action, followed generally throughout all industry, is the only real solution of the unemployment problem," Secretary Fred Lutz said.

While a number of organizations have adopted resolutions favoring the five-day week, the pressmen's union is the first of the local printing trades unions to place the idea in effect.

INSTRUCT TEACHERS

Music Fundamentals to Be Taught in Special Class.

Under the supervision of Ralph W. Wright, director of music for Indianapolis public schools, 147 teachers will meet every Monday at Benjamin Harrison school No. 2, at 700 North Delaware street, for instruction in fundamentals of music, community singing, song interpretation, and methods of teaching music.

Classes will continue until shortly after Christmas.

The group is made up of seventy-two intermediate teachers, sixty-one primary, thirteen department, and one adjustment teacher.

Why Have Corns?
I Did, But I Don't

"I suffered torture from corns. Tried everything, but got no real relief. Then a friend told me of Shur-Off. Got a package at my druggist and used as directed. Pain disappeared instantly and that awful corn was gone in 4 minutes. Don't have corns. Get Shur-Off today from Hook's Dependable Drug Stores or any other good druggist and be corn-free and care-free."

Shur-Off means corns off in 3 minutes or money back.—Advertisement.

ATHEARN MAKES PLEA FOR NEW EDUCATION GOAL

Addresses 200 at C. of C.
Dinner on Problems of Teaching.

"The present problem in American education is not how many things we can create, but the type of people we can develop," Dr. Walter Scott Athearn, president of Butler university, told more than 200 at the dinner Wednesday night in the Chamber of Commerce.

With 28,000,000 children now enrolled annually in the public schools of America, Dr. Athearn predicts that within ten years, two out of every three persons of high school age will be enrolled in secondary schools.

This new movement toward higher education for the masses is expressing itself in the rapid growth of junior colleges, Dr. Athearn asserted.

Present day trends outlined by President Athearn are towards: Making both elementary and higher education the possession of the masses of the American people, partly through the junior college and the city university.

Making the social sciences rather than the physical sciences the core of the curriculum in all schools. "While other cities are experimenting with mass education on

Ye Olde Scold

By United Press
SAYRE, Pa., Oct. 8.—The ancient law providing punishment for a "common scold"—older than any Pennsylvania statute—was held over Mrs. Frances Rosengrant, 75, today to silence her allegedly abusive tongue.

After nine neighbors told Justice George Bonfoey of back fence arguments and of an incident in which Mrs. Rosengrant drenched her with a hose, the justice assessed the aged woman $14 in costs, but continued the case until April.

Various theories of organization, administration and control, Indianapolis, by the wise and sympathetic co-operation of all existing agencies, may contribute to the nation an unique and valuable form of urban education," Dr. Athearn declared. "We shall be co-workers with you for a common end."

ROWBOTTOM PAROLE UP

Federal Board Soon to Weigh Ex-Congressman's Plea.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The federal parole board will consider at its general meeting in a few days the parole application of former Representative Harry E. Rowbottom, (Rep., Ind.), who was convicted on charges of selling postmaster appointments.

A representative of the board recently heard Rowbottom's case at Leavenworth penitentiary where the former congressman is serving a year's sentence.

PYTHIAN WOMEN OPEN SESSIONS

'Love Feast' on Program of Forty-Third Convention.

Pythian Sisters from all sections of Indiana are gathering in Indianapolis today for the forty-third annual session of the order.

Presiding over business meetings, which formally opened this morning, is Mrs. Nell C. McCurry of Goodland, grand chief. She will remain in office until Friday afternoon when installation of officers elected this afternoon will take place.

A "love feast" at the Spink Arms will precede ritualistic work to be given in the Denison headquarters for Pythian Sisters. Officers of Mars Temple No. 125 of Goodland, will exemplify the ballot and, with the degree staff of Morocco Temple No. 326 of Morocco, will give the initiatory ceremony.

At an informal welcoming reception in the Denison Wednesday night, Banner temple No. 37 presented bouquets of roses to grand chiefs and past grand officers of both the Knights of Pythias and its auxiliary order.

Mrs. Minnie Johnson, drill mistress, and Mrs. Hettie McKittick, district deputy of Indianapolis, were presented with twenty-five-year service pins. Mrs. McKittick, royal advisor of Sunshine girls, junior order of Pythian Sisters, also was presented a bouquet by council No. 10.

In the name of the mayor of Indianapolis, Mrs. Lyda T. Roser of Richmond, welcomed officers and Pythian Sisters to the city.

How Do
Chorus Girls Manage?

The theater knows no "sick list." Chorus girls just can't be "absent." Regardless of the "time of month," they must be in line, on time, on their toes, and smiling. How do they do it? Nature doesn't spare them. They are always smiling and active because they have learned to stop all periodic pain for hours at a stretch, by the use of a perfectly harmless medicine called Midol.

It acts in seven minutes. Relief is complete. The pain is gone. You work or play in comfort. Midol is not a narcotic and offers no interference with nature. All druggists; ask simply for Midol.—Advertisement.
