

EASIER DIVORCE IS URGED BY FAMED WOMAN NOVELIST

3 Marital Routes Are Pointed Out

BY DEXTER H. TEED, NEA Service Writer.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Faith Baldwin, the woman novelist who for years has been turning out books about the love life of youth struggling to live naturally and happily in the complexity of modern cities, is convinced that there would be fewer divorces if people only would admit the true facts about marriage.

"Marriage isn't ordained in heaven, let them say what they will," she declares. "It's an unnatural relationship and there is proof that it was started as an institution to protect property."

"It was necessary, for it was essential to determine parents to dispose of property."

And then she even goes so far as to say that men and women are natural enemies, that she doesn't believe in the idea of comradeship between husband and wife—and that, well, it doesn't work out anyway.

Sees Three Marital Courses

What does she believe? She believes this: That there are only three things that may happen in marriage. Eventually a working partnership may be established or a degree of tolerance may be reached or the marriage partnership may be broken.

Of course the working partnership is nearest the ideal. It is achieved only when there is real compatibility and similarity in tastes.

"She believes that lack of compatibility is enough reason for a divorce and that divorces should be easier—yet marriage should be made harder. And she censures modern men."

"Men classify women in only two ways," says she. "They are either good or bad, as they see it. They still have the 'Madonna' idea. They idealize their women too much and when they learn actuality they are disappointed."

"Really they should not put their women on such a high plane. And they do that—for, after all, men are more sentimental than women."

Doesn't Favor Clinics

She doesn't favor the marital clinics suggested by Dr. William R. Tenthren, associate medical director of the Austen Riggs Foundation, for she believes that the timid, who need advice most, would not attend such clinics.

Mrs. Baldwin, who has children of her own, contends that most of the problems of marriage are emotional and that happiness will not be achieved until people are more frank in discussing their own problems and working out solutions.

Thus she continues writing books about young men and women who solve their problems. That's her fictional method—and she believes that it will work out in real life.

Mrs. Groves Is Named Leader of Committee

Mrs. Frederick J. Balz, chairman of the Seventh District Federation of Clubs, appointed Mrs. D. A. Groves chairman of a transportation committee at a meeting Monday at the Severn.

Mrs. Groves will arrange transportation for delegates to the state convention of the Indiana Federation of Clubs at West Baden, Oct. 20, 21 and 22, and has asked those who are driving and will share the trip to let her know the number of passengers their cars will accommodate.

Plans for furthering Mrs. Edward Franklin White's campaign for the office of state president were discussed. Mrs. White was endorsed by the Seventh district in the spring. Mrs. Balz announced that any delegate who wishes to vote in the election Thursday of the convention must register Wednesday, Oct. 21, at headquarters.

Turbans With a Tilt

Directed By AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—"The turban is dead. Long live the turban!"

Thousands of well-dressed women have flung to the four fall winds their battle cry against the invasion of new derbies, toques and sailors.

What! Give up the turban—its neat, trim look . . . its comfortable fitting with the big fur collars on coats? Not on your life, they say.

But, even though they may not be willing to admit it, these turban devotees have yielded to the lure of the new. For the old turban is dead—the one that sat on the back of the head showing lots of hair in the front.

New Turban Tilted

It's the new turban, worn with the famous right-side tilt of these other new hats which they scorn, that's so very much alive on their fashion-knowing heads.

Just as comfortable, trim and neat as the old. But much more of a hat. More important looking. More sophisticated. Makes its wearers look just as dignified, modern and up-and-coming as the most extreme one-sided toque or diminutive derby. Matrons are wearing them—fitted well down on the head in a dignified way. Youth adores them—perched high and coquettish.

Quaint Fur-Banded Turban

Despite cries of protest from the extremists, these turban-ites can quote as their authority for smartness no lesser names than those of the Paris couturiers.

Variety in Styles

Patou is making turbans—intricately draped affairs with feathers or bows high at the back. Mme. Agnes swears by them, with ribbon bows at the nape of the neck.

Alphonse puts a twist of material along the edge of hers and sticks a feather in the right side. Descat designs them with a beret-like drape and an ostrich tip over the left eye.

Maria Guy takes a bit of material and turns it into an affair that looks like a soldier's fatigue cap. Le Monnier puts pleatings of velvet wide around the edge. Made likes cog feathers flat on the left to cover a part of the hair.

Turbans of Fur Reappear

Goupy fashions turbans of fur. And there's an old-fashioned idea come back to life. Makes you think of sleighing parties or a drowsy ride on the Russian steppes.

Patou's New Draped Turban

And Talbot cuts a piece of felt like a skull cap with a point over the right eye and drops a flirtatious veil down to the nose.

Out an egg in half lengthwise and you have the shape of the new fall turban. Long from back to front. Shallow from side to side. Individual drapings can make it look rounder, if that shape proves more becoming.

But examine the basic lines and most 'always' you'll find them ovoid. Pick up these turbans and you'll find them soft. And they look soft when they're on. They're made of velvet, very fine felt, broadcloth, knit chenille, corded wool, wool plique.

The fur ones are of flat and soft furs, some made entirely of fur and some simply lined with it. Curly furs like astrakhan and persian are smartest.

The smaller and softer, the newer and smarter. Wear them as high up on the left side of the head as you can, but no higher than is becoming.

Recent Bride Will Be Given Linen Shower

Mrs. Ezra Hill and Mrs. Allen Morgan will entertain tonight at Mrs. Morgan's home, 4058 Byram avenue, with a linen shower and bridge party in honor of Mrs. Norman Schulmeyer, who was Miss Grace Thomas before her recent marriage.

Decorations will consist of fall flowers and lighted tapers. The hostesses will be assisted by Mrs. Morgan's mother, Mrs. W. R. Deal of Kokomo. Guests will include:

Mesdames Marvin Rouch, John Riley and Miss Helen Brown, Kokomo; Miss Frances Jellison, Dayton; Mesdames Richard Hennessey, W. B. Thomas, Herbert Woodard, Carl Quastner, Louis Thomas, Lant Clark, Gilbert Small, Brandt Steele and Miss Deane Russ.

Mrs. Toner Honored by Press Club

Mrs. Edward C. Toner, Anderson, was honored Tuesday at the President's day luncheon of the Woman's Press Club of Indiana at the Columbia Club.

She was introduced by Mrs. Blanche Foster Boruff, Bedford, at whose instigation the Press Club was organized nineteen years ago. Mrs. Boruff presided in the absence of Mrs. Kate Milner Rabb, retiring president.

The program included greetings from the following past presidents, all of whom named high lights of their terms of office: Mrs. Florence Webster Long and Sara Messing Stern of Terre Haute, who spoke, and Hester Alverson Moffett, Mindwell Crampton Wilson, William Herschel, C. G. Fenton and Julian Hogate who, unable to be present, wired or wrote.

Miss Janet Cuthill, Bedford, following the president's message, presented the "Violet Scene," from Romance, and also read a Scotch poem in dialect. The program committee for the day included Mesdames Boruff, chairman; Susan McWhirter Ostrom, Florence Webster Long and Mindwell Crampton Wilson.

Miss Catherine Butler of Bedford was introduced as a new member. Among out-of-town guests at the meeting were: Mrs. Constance Bross, Eckley, Stamford, Conn.; Glenn Gates, Oswald Ryan, Fred Urban and C. B. Wilder, Anderson; Earl Shagley, Terre Haute, and Miss Donna Harter, Anderson.

SHOWER IS GIVEN FOR RECENT BRIDE

Mr. William W. Garstang, who was Miss Mary Fulton before her recent marriage, was honored at a luncheon bridge given Tuesday by Mrs. Obie J. Smith Jr. at her home, 1 East Thirty-sixth street. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Obie J. Smith Sr. The luncheon table was decorated with white-clothed roses and greenery. Other guests were: Mesdames Norman Baxter, Wilbur Carter, George Maynard Halverson, Benjamin Turner, Pearson Smith, John Roberts, Misses Edith Fulton, Eleanor Anne Barrett, Florence Barrett and Helen Shepard.

DELEGATES NAMED BY WAR MOTHERS

Following delegates were elected Tuesday at a meeting of Marion county chapter, American War Mothers, for the state convention here Nov. 18-19: Mesdames E. May Hahn, Mayne Berry and Clara Pohlman. Alternates are Mesdames Ella Aker, Martha Costin and J. P. Cochran.

The chapter is sponsoring a concert Oct. 21.
