Jack Bernstein to Serve 2 to 14-Year Term for Embezzlement.

Shade of that master of high finance, the fabulous "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," walked in the Marion criminal court late Wednesday, when the man of an alleged dozen aliases and a million ideas, Jack Bernstein, had his suspended sentence of two to fourteen years revoked by Judge Frank Baker.

Paul G. Davis

Testimony of a score of witnesses brought from all parts of the state indicated to Judge Baker that Bernstein could give "cards and spades" to the easy-wealth maestro and still beat him.

The parole revocation hearing was held as a result of a grand jury indictment charging that Bernstein embezzled $400,000 from the Commercial Auctioneers, Inc., of which he had been president.

Sentence Enforceable

Because the suspended sentence passed on him in January, 1930, of two to fourteen years, still was enforceable, Judge Baker ordered the hearing.

Four fruit growers from Decker, Ind., testified that Bernstein, representing himself to be a buyer for the Kroger Grocery and Baking Company, had ordered hundreds of bushels and railroad carloads of peaches shipped over the country.

Another said that upon Bernstein's unguaranteed order, he had shipped a carload of watermelons to one point, and later had learned that it had been diverted to another city.

Other witnesses charged that Bernstein, while auctioneering of a fur stock in Ft. Wayne, had obtained some silver fox furs for his wife.

Still another man from Ft. Wayne asserted Bernstein had pocketed the proceeds from a furniture auction.

Here in Indianapolis he had obtained a car, traded it in for a bigger one and his firm did not know of his deals, witnesses said.

Collected for Ads

Testimony disclosed that he collected money for purported auction sale advertisements which never were printed.

Judge Baker read from the record to show that Bernstein was known and wanted in Milwaukee, Kansas City and other cities as Tommy Burns, John Kelley, Jack Silberstein and a score of other names.

Bernstein denied the charges and declared that he was the victim of a conspiracy on the part of a former partner, Abe Greenwald.

"Ever since my conviction a year ago I have been pursued by every one," he said.

"Give them my pound of flesh," he cried to Baker.

10-Ton Auction

SALEM, Ore., Nov. 5.—Tusko, the largest captive elephant that ever lived, rattled his heavy chains today as he waited for Sheriff Bower to auction him to the highest bidder.

A minimum bid of $300 will be required. Tusko is being "sold down the river" to satisfy a hay bill of $900. At an auction Tuesday, the best offer—from a fertilizer manufacturer—was $1 a ton, or $10 for the giant pachyderm.

Salemites who have grown fond of the once-proud star of the Al G. Barnes circus, were anxious today to see whether an exhibitor would buy Tusko, or whether he would go to some one who planned to kill him.

KING AND QUEEN RECEIVE GANDHI

Mahatma, Scantly Clad, Has Tea at Palace.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—The Mahatma M. K. Gandhi, leader of India's millions in their passive fight against Great Britain for independence, was received by the king and queen at a Buckingham Palace tea party today. He was bare-legged and wore his native costume, including a loin cloth.

The party was a reception to the delegates to the Indian round table conference, now going on in London, and about 400 guests attended. Gandhi mingled with guests who wore the conventional formal morning garb and Indian potentes in turbans and western clothes.

Gandhi, sitting between his secretary, Mahadeo Desai, and Mrs. Sarojini Naidu, one of his ardent supporters, entered the gates of Buckingham Palace in the back seat of a small salon car. He was bare-headed and wore the same sandals he had on when he started his famous "salt march" of disobedience eighteen months ago, for which he was imprisoned.

He had on a similar although slightly more voluminous loin cloth and a full-length white shawl, through which his bare, thin legs showed when he walked.
