

MARKET RUINED BY TOWING IN, DEALERS CLAIM

Safety Board's Policies Are Assailed Bitterly After Ouster Order.

Policies of the safety board in regulating the city market were attacked today as "killing business at the market" when the board started enforcement of an order ousting forty-three stand operators for non-payment of rent.

Although it was rumored that several operators might disregard the ouster order until "thrown out by the safety board," Harry R. Springsteen, market master, said he anticipated little difficulty in vacating stands.

Several stand operators blamed the safety board for the "lax business," declaring that adoption of the tow-in traffic ordinance by the board has driven customers away from the market.

A few of the stand operators included in the ousting order were doing business this morning. Some of these have been selling at the market for six and seven years.

"The safety board never has cooperated to help business at the market," J. F. O'Mahoney, City Market Association president, declared.

He contends that business has decreased since passage of the tow-in ordinance and that many operators were unable to pay rent for this reason.

City officials pointed out the rent was cheaper than any other place in the city and that operators could pay if they desired.

Safe board members were supported by Francis Coleman, deputy controller, in their contention that the tow-in argument merely is an excuse for not paying rent, delinquent several months.

Stand operators charged that scores of women, who formerly traded at the market, now are trading in out-town sections of the city because of strict enforcement of the tow-in law downtown.

AKRON BACK IN HANGAR AFTER LONG JOURNEY

Dirigible Hovers Over Station for Hours Before Landing.

By United Press

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—Anson Mark 60, member of the firm of Clayton Mark & Co., steel manufacturers, was found dead today in a closet of his office in the Civic Opera building, apparently a suicide.

His body was discovered by office employees some time after Mark had been visited by his son, Anson Mark Jr. The employees had heard no shot, they said. Young Mark was questioned by detectives.

The closet door was closed and the manufacturer's body was slumped inside. A pistol was found on the floor.

Detectives believed that Mark went into the closet to kill himself in order that the sound of the shot might not alarm other tenants in the building. They were unable, however, to learn immediately any motive for suicide.

The Civic Opera building is on Wacker drive, overlooking the Chicago river. Though built primarily as a home for the Chicago Civic Opera, it leases space to business offices. A number of large corporations have headquarters in it.
