MANNERS AND MORALS By JANE JORDAN

Do not think for a moment that Jane Jordan's interest in you ends with your first letter. Write as many as you choose, just as long as you need help. If you have had an experience which might help any of the correspondents, send it in for publication in this column.

Unrequited love is one of the great tragedies of existence, but few people ever die of it. In spite of the fact that many think they are going to die and many wish that they would, the casualties from broken hearts are relatively few. This tender organ can suffer the most crushing blows, only to spring up again as good as new, and ready for business.

Love sickness is something like sea sickness. It is horribly uncomfortable, but when you recover you forget all about it.

The majority of sufferers from unrequited love are women. Men seldom waste time in fretting when a woman rejects him. They hop up cheerfully and hunt another. When women are deserted, they can not grab the telephone and make a date with a new man. All they can do is to sit around and nurse their wounds until another suitor appears.

I have before me ten letters from women asking how to win the love of an indifferent man, and only two from men wishing to warm up an indifferent woman. If these ten over-anxious women just would take a leaf from the book of the indifferent girls, they might have more success.

Wants the Unobtainable

The persistence with which a man will pursue the woman who does not want him is food for reflection. There may be girls to the right of him and girls to the left of him who would give their eye-teeth for the love and devotion that he bestows on the woman who will have none of him. But he has eyes for no one but the unobtainable!

These two indifferent girls hold out just enough hope to keep their lovers dancing. They promise to "try" to love them, which, if the men only knew, it is a ridiculous statement. Whenever you have to "try" to love someone, you are doomed to failure, for love is a spontaneous emotion.

These young men have asked me whether I think a girl is justified in delaying her answer to his proposal. That depends on why she does it. If she says: "I do not know you well enough to be able to tell whether I want to live with you or not . . . I do not know your tastes or desires . . . I can not tell whether the slight attraction I feel for you is permanent or passing . . . only association will teach me whether or not we are congenial
