

OGDEN DEFINES 'STORES' UNDER NEW TAX LAW

Newsstands Must Pay, but Utilities Are Exempt, Says Attorney-General.

Newsboys who operate street corner stands must pay the chain store tax, but banks and utilities are exempt.

Farm bureau stores are assessed, but farmers who sell their products from roadside stands are not.

These are some of the answers to the chain store puzzle worked out by Attorney-General James M. Ogden in answering a series of questions propounded by the state tax board.

These Are Exempt

The following are exempt from the tax payment, under the attorney-general's ruling:

Addressing business letter service, mimeographing, selling mailing lists.
Agricultural stores.
Advertising agencies, unless they sell merchandise.
Auctioneers, unless they maintain a store in which they sell at auction.
Automobile renters.
Banks.
Blacksmiths.
Dentists.
Engravers, unless a store is kept in connection.
Farmers who peddle their products or maintain roadside stands for selling their own produce only.
Hospitals, unless they operate public drug stores in connection.
Hotels.
Investment houses.
Mercantile agencies which supply financial reports.
Oculists, unless they carry on a sales business in connection with their professional services.
Oil trucks.
Photographers, so long as they sell only upon order and not from a general stock.
Receivers for bankrupts, unless they operate a store to dispose of wares in their custody.
Real estate dealers, building and loan associations and cemetery companies.
Restaurants, cafes and chicken dinner establishments, unless they also sell cigars, cigarettes and candies, in which case they become stores.
Specialized services, including painters, contractors, printers, laundries, repairmen, upholsterers, cleaners, barbers and beauty shops.
Shoe repairers, unless they sell merchandise as well as do repairing.
Sundries and private schools, which sell supplies to patients or students.
Tourist rooms.
Train "bunches."
Tailors who sell suits to order.

These Must Pay

But these businesses must pay. Ogden declares:
Agents representing home or foreign concerns, having offices and taking orders.
Butchers.
Companies selling water in containers.
Creameries.
Farm bureau stores.
Funeral directors, unless they carry no merchandise in stock.
Florida.
Grain elevators.
Greenhouses.
House wreckers who sell salvaged materials.
Lake resort stores.
Nurseries.
Poultry dealers.
Newspaper, magazine and book publishers.
Saw and gravel dealers.
Stock yards and commission merchants.
Street stands.
Stores owning their own vending machines, need not pay for them, but if operated on lease the owner of the lease must pay a chain store tax.

Fees are $3 for an individual store per year, two to five stores, $10 for each additional store; five to ten, $15 for each additional; ten to twenty, $20, and over twenty $25 each.

SWINDLE IN FLOWERS

Two Girls Wanted for New Kind of Racket at Evansville.

By United Press.
EVANSVILLE, Ind., Dec. 18.—A "sympathy racket" was disclosed here as police sought two girls, both appearing to be under 20 years old, charged with making fake collections for purchase of flowers for deceased persons.

Police were told that the girls have made a practice of going into neighborhoods where some one has died, and taking up collections for the purported purpose of buying flowers. The latest collection reported was contributed by eighteen persons who gave sums ranging from 10 to 25 cents.

PRISONER CONTENTED

Evansville Man Prefers Staying in Jail to Paying Alimony.

By Times Special.
EVANSVILLE, Ind., Dec. 18.—Edgar T. Corn says life in jail is preferable to payment of alimony, he informed Judge Benjamin E. Buente in Superior court.

Judge Buente had Corn confined Saturday on a contempt of court charge, for failure to keep up alimony payments.
"I'm perfectly contented in jail, and would rather stay there than keep paying my wife alimony all the time," Corn informed the judge, when brought into court again. He was returned to jail.

CAMERON STILL MINUS BAILIFF

Refuses to Accept Logan for Court Post.

"I'm all at sea, but I'll get along." And so, Municipal Judge Clifton R. Cameron sums up the situation of having a court without a bailiff. Cameron clings to his resolution that he will not accept the services of Marty Logan, former gamewell operator, named by the safety board to succeed Howard Sanders, shifted to the detective department.

"Of course, not having a bailiff makes more work for me, but I stick it out," he said. "I'm going to keep this court of mine clean of politics."

Sanders regularly is assigned to the detective department and, from last reports, Logan still is a man without a job.

Although Cameron has insisted he has "nothing against" Logan, he demanded Sanders be retained as bailiff.

When courts upheld the safety board's authority to name the bailiff, Cameron refused to accept Logan. "Sanders or nobody," he said.
