

WINTER SPORTS GAINING IN POPULARITY WITH WOMEN

New Styles in Clothing Are Simpler

BY JEAN PATOU
(Written for Natio)

PARIS, Jan. 4.—Winter sports are a comparatively recent pastime with smart women, but it is one that is increasing in popularity with each succeeding season.

It therefore was only natural that at first, when the mode was confronted with this entirely new category of clothes, the results were purely experimental. Looking back on them, the creations offered then would be termed entirely too extravagant and bizarre and the women who did wear them obviously knew nothing of winter sports and their exigencies.

Faced with all these eccentric styles, however, the woman with an innate dress sense reacted very shrewdly and adopted an ultra-simple fashion which, by the way, I had favored from the very first.

Eccentric Styles Vanish
All these fantastic creations, many of them in doubtful taste, were merely an opportunity for decorative excess for a certain category of style creators. Fortunately these were short-lived.

If at the outset more than one woman was somewhat at a loss to know what to wear very rapidly became initiated to the rhythm of winter sports and soon realized what was the correct way.

The result is that any fancy outfit today would stand little if any chance of success.

As a matter of fact, it is in this, the most simple of woman's clothes, that you can trace the most rapid progress.

By progress I mean of course the constitution of new and more practical qualities, without any thought of fashions proper. A new style is not always synonymous of evolution, but rather a series of changes.

Whipcord Is Favored
The theme of the winter sports outfit is unchangeable. It comprises what is known as a pair of Norwegian trousers—caught in at the ankles—sufficiently but not exaggeratedly wide, and a belted jacket, both fashioned in a tightly woven, waterproof fabric, preferably whipcord.

It is in the garment worn underneath the jacket that the most rapid evolution can be traced. The high-necked sweater definitely has been abandoned.

The most practical and comfortable is the open-necked variety and the necessary protection for the throat is found in the scarf which invariably forms part of a skiing outfit.

Most of a woman's personality can be expressed, too, in the way in which she wears this indispensable accessory.

If, on the other hand, the temperature is unusually mild, the costume can include a tailored blouse of heavy crepe or fine flannel. This often is sufficiently warm for a sunny day.

Allowing for Movement
Thick, muffled effects around the neck have completely disappeared from the winter sports fashion scene and I think the present-day formula is perfect, combining all the practical qualities with freedom of movement and the maximum of elegance allowed.

The smart sports suit must necessarily be dark, the darker the better. Black, dark green, and red browns are always a wise choice. The only touch of bright color allowed is confined to the sweater, scarf and sometimes the cap, taking care, however, never to indulge in anything too fantastical or decorative.

SKIING OUTFIT MADE OF WHIPCORD

A Jean Patou skiing outfit (left) is made up of black whipcord. The cap is black astrakhan with a black and white feathered motif; the scarf is flannel, a black and gray design on a white ground. Another of the couturier's skiing costumes (right) has trousers and jacket in dark brown whipcord and a blouse of yellow crepe. The pullover is in brown and yellow wool with stockings to match, and the cap is of matching brown and yellow felt.

WHAT'S IN FASHION?

Gay Semi-Sports Costumes

Directed By AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Going somewhere? Doing something? It's a great reason for being active—for getting into sport costumes and enjoying yourself.

You don't have to go far to do it, either, though lots of folks are traveling . . . north for winter sports, south for winter swims . . . on boats and on trains.

There are plenty of places to go and things to do wearing sport costumes clothes right in your own home town this winter.

Because semi-sports clothes—which are the kind we're talking about—look so much like regular daytime tailored costumes that they're fast becoming a most important addition to the informal daytime wardrobe.

Whether you're going or staying the type of costume remains the same. And the same whether your climate is warm or cold. The materials change, of course.

If you're outfitting for real winter, you'll want warm materials. But the costumes themselves will look just about like the lighter weight ones for the south.

Knitted Suits Practical

Knitted suits are both smart and practical for sporting events or for such simple going about as shopping. A jacket and skirt with sweater blouse. And of course you'll want some extra sweaters to make a change.

The half-and-half costume is another that's being active this winter. A wool skirt with blouse and jacket contrasting in color and fabric.

For instance, if you're going—or staying—where it's warm this costume might be a meshy wool skirt, a tailored sleeveless blouse of shantung or rough silk and a long-sleeved box jacket of the same material as the blouse.

Jersey Blouse Good

But if you want a half-and-half costume for northern wear, a wool skirt combined with jersey blouse and one of the horizontally striped jackets of the type Chanel makes would make you right in fashion.

Ribbed materials are some of the most fashionable of all for these semi-sports costumes. Ribbed cottons and silks for the south. Ribbed wools for the north. And often these dresses have a contrasting jacket of their own . . . another half-and-half idea.

In fact any simply tailored dress of light wool with a gay scarf is a correct addition to this activity wardrobe. Choose white or light colors for warm climates, with short sleeves. And for cool zones, the darker colors and long sleeves.

Polo Coat Is Smart

The polo coat is one that looks fine over such costumes. Single or double-breasted with military looking revers and button trimming.

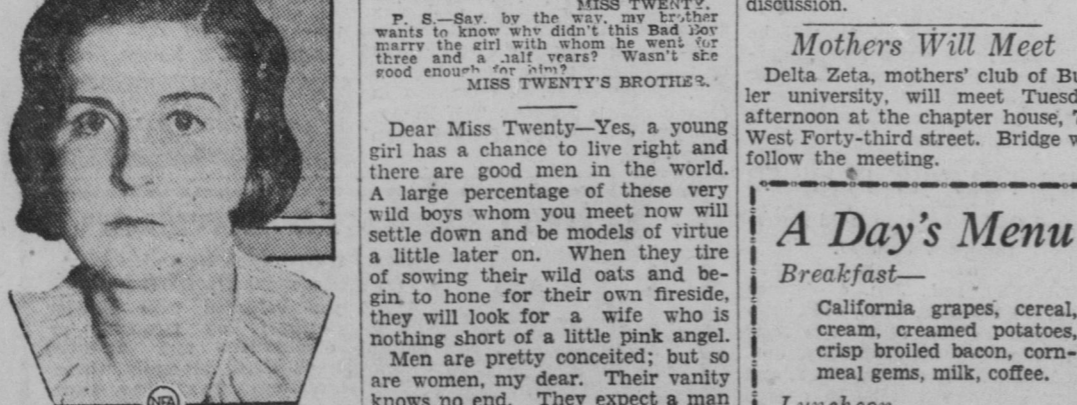

And again, the difference in color. Light or white for the south; darker for the north.

But never though, is the broad, padded-shoulder coat designed by Schiaparelli, Paris sports costume designer. This coat has either a narrow collar that rolls back on a slant, or no collar at all.

Rises in Law

Miss Edith House, above, has been appointed an assistant United States district attorney in Florida—an honor held by only seven other women in the country. She studied law at the University of Georgia, and served an apprenticeship as chief clerk in the Jacksonville office of the Florida federal attorney whose assistant she now becomes. She's 28.

Release of Policewomen Is Criticized

Protests against releasing policewomen from the Indianapolis police force have been sent by the civic committee of the Indianapolis Council of Women to members of the safety board and Mayor Reginald Sullivan.

According to the committee report, policewomen have been detailed in outlying districts instead of the downtown districts, where they are most needed, and the work for which the women originally were appointed has been neglected.

Also, the letter states, women of the organization feel it important that various places of amusement should be visited, as well as the Union and Terminal stations, and that such places should be under constant surveillance of experienced policewomen.

The work of policewomen, according to police rules, shall be the protection and reformation of girls and women; their policy in dealing with them shall be quiet and inconspicuous. Insofar as possible, arrests shall be avoided, and shall be made only under the direction of the supervisor.

With conditions as they exist today and with steadily growing population the committee feels a need for more policewomen, instead of as Chief Police Morrissey believes "the present roster of eighteen is too large for the amount of work required."

Mrs. Mary E. Kynett is chairman of the civic committee, which includes Mesdames Lulu H. Harvey, Bloomfield Moore, Bert Gadd, B. McDonald, E. W. Cowley, Irene Reeves Moore, Wilhelmina K. Smith, Frank E. Weimer and H. B. Kettler. Mrs. Frank Symmes is president of the council.

Marriage of Esther Green Is Announced

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Esther Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Lewis Green, 3902 North Delaware street, to John Donovan Menke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Menke, 719 East Minnesota street, at 5:30 New Year's day, at the home of the bride's parents. The Rev. W. W. Wiant of the North M. E. church officiated.

Miss Betty Green was her sister's only attendant. She wore a gown of black velvet and lace and carried American Beauty roses. The bride wore a gown of white tulle, and carried a shower bouquet of Johanna Hill roses and lilies of the valley. Harry Bailey was the best man.

After a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Menke will reside at 3466 Carrollton avenue.

EXHIBITION OF OILS CLOSED BY ARTIST

Homer G. Davison, Ft. Wayne artist, closed his exhibition of oil paintings, which has hung in the oriental room at the Spink Arms, with a program and tea Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Davison spoke on "Artists in a British Fishing Village," illustrating her talk with a group of paintings done by Mr. Davison in Brittany.

During the afternoon, Mr. Davison painted a landscape from memory. Tea and a reception followed the program.

Mrs. Taylor to Address Art Group

"The Hoosier Group" will be the subject of a talk by Mrs. Susan Stark Taylor at 2 today before the art department of the Woman's Department Club.

Mrs. Taylor is the daughter of the late Otto Stark, one of the artists included in the group chosen by Wayman Adams as the four outstanding Indiana artists of their time. T. C. Steele, J. Otis Adams and William Forsyth are other members of the group immortalized by Mr. Adams in his famous painting, "The Hoosier Group."

The art department numbers in its permanent collections a painting by each member of the group, having completed the group with a recent Adams' purchase. This collection, with a loan exhibit of their works, will be on display.

A musical program will precede Mrs. Taylor's talk.

Mrs. Frank F. Brandt is chairman of the tea to follow the program and will be assisted by Mesdames Laura Blanton, H. L. Brown, Orion B. Ent, F. E. Gates, W. D. Long, Julius E. Tindler and Percy A. Woods. Mrs. W. D. Hamer, chairman of the department, will preside.

P.T. Federation to Sponsor Thrift Week Observance

Observance of National Thrift Week, from Jan. 12 to 23, will be sponsored by the Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations. The week opens on the anniversary of Benjamin Franklin's birth, and each day has been designated for a special observance.

The state chairman in charge of the movement in Indiana is Mrs. Carol Everman, Twelve Mile. The program is built around a new concept of thrift, based on the following principles:

Work and earn, make a budget, have a bank account, give more thought to the life insurance now owned, own your own home, safeguard present investment in home or building, make a will, prepare now for prosperity, pay bills promptly, and share with others.

Days set aside for particular programs are:

Sunday, Jan. 17, "Share With Others Sunday"; Jan. 18, national thrift day; Jan. 19, national budget day; Jan. 20, national make a will day; Jan. 21, national life insurance day; Jan. 22, own your own home day; and Jan. 23, safe investment day.

Plans for Indiana are being made through the bureau of Parent-Teacher Associations at Indiana university.

GROUP TO OBSERVE 54TH ANNIVERSARY

Mu chapter of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority will celebrate its fifty-fourth birthday anniversary Wednesday night at the chapter house, 821 Hampton drive. Mu alumnae club will join the active chapter in dinner and a white elephant sale.

Reservations may be made until Tuesday with Mrs. Philip L. Johnson or Miss Jean Coval.

Daily Recipe

LIVER WITH ONIONS
1 1/2 pounds liver cut in slices 1-4 inch thick

Salt
Pepper
Butter, margarine or other fat

4 cups thinly sliced onions

Wipe slices of liver with damp cloth. Place on lightly greased griddle or skillet and cook slowly from 8 to 10 minutes over a low fire, turning frequently. When done the liver will have lost its red color and be lightly browned. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and serve with or without onions.

To prepare the onions, melt about a tablespoon of fat in a frying pan. Add onions, sprinkle with salt and pepper, cover and cook slowly until onions are tender. Stir frequently. Serve over the liver.
