

Hoosier Art Salon Will Open Jan. 23

Hoosier salon, for encouragement and appreciation of work of Indiana artists and general appreciation of American art, will open its eighth season Jan. 23 in the Marshall Field picture galleries, in Chicago, and continue through Feb. 6.

Mrs. H. B. Burnet of Indianapolis, fine arts chairman for the Century of Progress for Indiana, will choose from the assembled pictures a group to be considered for the final selection of Indiana's art exhibit at the 1933 world fair. Mrs. Burnet is chairman of the art department of the Indianapolis Women's Department Club.

The feature room this year will have an exhibition of the work of J. W. Vawter of Nashville in Brown county, formerly of Indianapolis, who for many years was illustrator of the James Whitcomb Riley books. He is considered one of the outstanding men of the Brown county art colony.

Jury Selected

The jury of awards was selected during the summer by a vote of artist members, but names of the jury will not be announced until the day on which picture judging begins.

Mrs. Thomas Meek Butler, Tulsa, Okla., and Mrs. J. F. Beuret of Chicago, will act as salon hostesses, assisted by a committee.

Mrs. Charles C. Curry, president of the Daughters of Indiana of Chicago, will act as club hostess, assisted by the board of club trustees.

Mrs. Frank P. Hummel, Chicago, will be in charge of special club days assisted by her committee.

Mrs. Clarence Bruce King, and Mrs. Edward C. Twells will be in charge of registration assisted by members of the registration committee.

Special Days Arranged

Mrs. James L. Saylor, assisted by the college committee, will arrange special college days.

Mrs. G. Byron Killem, Mrs. Carl P. Hubbard, Mrs. Charles Roth and Mrs. Carl J. Schulz are in charge of publicity.

A special secretarial committee, headed by Mrs. A. J. Tobey, will assist various committees in sending out special notices preliminary to, and during the salon.

Groups will be greeted by special hostesses and gallery tours will be conducted in the mornings and afternoons.

Daughters to Aid

The Hoosier Salon Patrons Association, sponsoring the salon, will be assisted during the entire exhibition by the art committee of the Daughters of Indiana of Chicago, composed of Mesdames Carl F. Wolcott, chairman; Charles F. Amacker, vice-chairman; Charles F. Baggs, Robert J. Beatty, Anna C. Conger, William D. Coon, W. T. Danewood, William F. Fenton, E. M. Graves, R. W. Martindale, Elmer E. Sanders, Otto C. F. Seehase, Fred M. Somes, William M. Sparks, Hubert C. Taylor, L. R. Thomas, and H. G. White.

Mission Omits Luncheon Part of Conference

Because of economic conditions, the luncheon planned in connection with the annual meeting of the Indianapolis Flower Mission Thursday, will be omitted, according to an announcement by Mrs. David Ross, president of the board of directors. The meeting will be held at 10 in the Architects and Builders building.

Officers will be elected for the coming year, and officers will make their annual reports. The annual luncheon or dinner of the Mission was an annual event for many years, but was given up last year for the first time, because of the many demands made upon the Mission's social workers. The Flower Mission has played an outstanding role in philanthropic activities of Indianapolis for more than fifty years.

Dainty Shoes That Tread Southern Shores Throughout the Woman's Day!

CINDERELLA'S glass slippers could have had no more glamor about them than the new line of Palm Beach footwear. From golf shoes to toeclass dance sandals, they have gorgeous materials, are ravishing in their color and trim, and are designed as custom-made dresses. They use silk and satin, leather, cotton materials, novelty woven rayons, bouclés, and they take to color like a duck to water. There's a shoe for every event of the day and evening. Left to right: The new unlined golf shoe, in white buck, has a unique perforated banding of brown calf. With the beach pajamas, a white linen bare-toe sandal, with kid bandings, is ready to take your pajama's rich blue, or red, orange or other colorings. For the daytime dress of crepe or linen, there is a new woven fabric pasteltone which makes a two-eyelet tie, with criss-cross openwork. Or, with this costume you can wear an effective opera pump of white suede with perforated details and black patent side bowknot trim. When it comes to organdy afternoon things, there is a new open quarter, open vamp dyeable linen sandal that is next to nothing in the way of weight. Or you can have something chic and novel, a pump made of pink blue, lavender and white kid joined to look lovely as a flower. For evening there is an exquisite brocade and satin slipper, dyed to match your gown, and an almost nude gold lined and pipe sandal which is toolless and composed almost entirely of a few exquisite criss-cross strips.

—WHAT'S IN FASHION—

Lingerie to Improve Your Figure

Directed by AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—If you're one of those fashionable women who take this month each year to lay in a good supply of lingerie, don't buy all your chemises and slips and panties just for their pretty color or lace trimmings. These are important... but only after you consider their waistlines. The way the waistline section of

IMPROVE YOUR LOOKS

The kind of lingerie you wear makes a difference in the way you look. The right kind turns you out twice as smart. Amos Parrish will send you a free bulletin on "Things You Should Know About Lingerie," if you write him care of The Times' Fashion Bureau, 500 Fifth avenue, New York. Inclose stamped, addressed return envelope.

lingerie is cut is more important than any other part of it right now. It must fit your waist snugly and make a smooth, unbroken line right down the bodice to the hips.

Why? Because that's the way dresses are cut, and any lingerie that's without these figure-fitting lines will bunch and bulge under the dress.

Blases Avoid Tucks

The first thing to look for when you pick up one of these chemises, panties or slips is diagonal seams and bias cuts.

There are various ways of putting these into a garment, but they all accomplish the same purpose. They make a fitted line without resorting to darts or tucks that might spoil the smooth silhouette line. And still they keep the garment comfortable to wear.

In the chemise illustrated, one of these ways is shown. That looks like a big diamond shaped insert in the front and you can see how clearly it outlines the figure. No chance for a wrinkle there.

Petticoats Similarly Cut

You'll find the same sort of arrangement in slips, too, and sometimes in panties. Only in panties the insert is only half a diamond, which makes a triangular shape.

This triangle may be the deep yoke that lies flat around the hips, the panties buttoning on one side. Or, if the panties have a straight, narrow waistband, it may be an accented line to give fullness without bulkiness.

Petticoats, too, often are cut on these diagonal lines, especially when they're the long ones you wear under slinky evening dresses.

For Buffet Supper

A buffet supper which is extremely easy to prepare consists of club sandwiches, plenty of relishes and some sort of deep dish desert. Arrange the sliced chicken, tomato, lettuce, bacon and salad dressing on a table and put the electric toaster on one end. As fast as the toast is made, give three slices to each guest and let them make sandwiches themselves while the toast is hot.

Meat Stew a Dish for Winter Menu

BY SISTER MARY
NEA Service Writer

A meat stew is always a nourishing and satisfying dish to serve to a hungry family during cold weather, but when unusual flavoring and seasoning, colorful garnishing and inviting serving are added, it is attractive enough to please the most fastidious taste.

You can use all kinds of meats in stews with good results. Beef, lamb, veal, mutton, pork, ham, fresh and salted fish all bring infinite variety to the one-time lowly stew.

No Waste Here

Remember, too, that there is no waste of food value for the juices of both meat and vegetables are served with the finished stew.

There's only one danger regarding loss of food value, and that lies in the tendency to overcook the vegetables. Add vegetables with consideration for their cooking period, allowing more time for some than for others as required.

Certain accessories and combinations add distinction to specific meats. For instance, dumplings are good with all stews, but particularly with veal.

Peas Give Flavor

Lamb stew gains much from the addition of peas, either canned or fresh. A savory combination of onions, canned tomatoes and macaroni makes a stew made with the remnants of cold roasts pleasantly appetizing.

Carrots provide color when other means of garnishing are not at hand. A few mushrooms give the final touch to any stew that makes a feast out of plain fare.

Veal stew with egg dumplings is not extravagant in ingredients, but is delicious.

Veal Stew With Dumplings

One and one-half pounds lean veal, 2 good sized potatoes, 1 cup small whole mushrooms, 1/2 cup sweet green pepper cut in shreds, 2 teaspoons salt, 1 small onion, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, 1/4 teaspoon celery salt, flour, drippings, 2 cups boiling water. Cut veal into small pieces and roll in flour. Melt drippings in stewing kettle and add prepared ingredients. Simmer for 1 1/2 hours.

Brown quickly over the fire, shaking the kettle in order to brown the meat on all sides. Add water, salt and pepper and simmer, closely covered, for one hour. Add pepper and mushrooms and cook thirty minutes. Add potatoes, pared and cut in quarters, and cook thirty minutes longer. Drop dumplings on top of meat, cover closely and cook twelve minutes. Serve in a deep platter with a garnish of parsley.

EGG DUMPLINGS

Three cups flour, 1 scant teaspoon salt, 5 teaspoons baking powder, 4 tablespoons shortening, 1 egg, milk.

Mix and sift flour, salt and baking powder. Rub in shortening with tips of fingers. Beat egg with 1-3 cup milk and cut into dry mixture, adding more milk if necessary to make a soft dough. Pat into a sheet about 1 inch thick on a lightly floured molding board. Cut in squares and drop in boiling stew. Keep the stew boiling all the time the dumplings are cooking and do not lift cover or dumplings will fall. Serve as soon as done.

MANNERS AND MORALS

By JANE JORDAN

SIT down today and write your troubles to Jane Jordan. Her impersonal, friendly advice may be just what you need to lead you out of your difficulties. Your letter will be answered in this column within a few days.

Dear Jane Jordan—I am a girl 18 years old and I live with my father and stepmother. We get along as well as can be expected, but it seems that she would like to marry me off. I am some what nervous about this. I am the one she likes, and the one who is a welcome voice in our home. I want to marry her. He is 23, has a good position, is well educated and comes from a wonderful family. There isn't any reason why I shouldn't marry him, but I don't get a thrill when I'm with him, and I'm not in love with him. I wandered from the straight and narrow path once, and he knows about it, but still loves me and wants to marry me. What should I do? I don't think I'm so much older than I really am, I act every one thinks that I'm at least 20. G. H. D.

DEAR G. H. D.—I am dubious about young marriages, because so few of them turn out happily. It seems to me that it would be better to postpone matrimony for a while, particularly while you're so undecided about the state of your affections.

However, I doubt if thrills are a reliable test of love. Some of the most thrilling romances are the greatest flops in marriage; whereas the prosaic friendships sometimes are extremely successful in wedlock. The reason is that an excess of romantic emotion is apt to obscure the judgment. The excited pair marry on blind physical attraction and when it dies down, as it must, ennui promptly sets in.

A good friend is more stable than a wild-eyed romantic lover. When good friends marry, they do so because they are motivated by mutual respect and affection instead of fireworks. Propinquity and shared experiences are great breeders of love and contentment, with constantly deepening affection resulting from their union.

Your early tragic love affair has doubt taken the edge off of your ability to feel spectacular thrills. It will be a long time before you tingle from head to foot over any man again. Your sober and thoughtful attitude toward your suitor does credit to your years. After all, you are the best judge of whom you should marry, not your stepmother or Jane Jordan. At 18 you have every right to ask for more time.

DEAR Jane Jordan—I am not asking your advice about my love problem because I am convinced that I am a total failure along this line. I am 21 years of age and since I have been employed as a stenographer, I have been employed as a stenographer. As long as I can remember the meaning of the word, I have wanted to be a journalist. I am fully aware of the fact that with much discouragement before reaching the goal in this profession, I am handicapped by lack of education and lack of finances, which is a pretty serious handicap. Shall I give it up? ROSILAND.

DEAR Rosiland—No. Never give up any ambition that eats you day and night. Since you already know it, I won't tell you that the life of a journalist is arduous and that you need the education which you have not acquired. Any smart person with sufficient intellectual curiosity can acquire an education by himself. There are plenty of inexpensive night classes which you can attend.

Go to the extension division of Indiana university on Michigan street and ask for J. W. Piercy, professor of journalism. Tell him that Jane Jordan of The Times sent you, for it was in his class that I got my start. Mr. Piercy is in town during the week-end only. If he is not there, see Miss Mary Orvis, secretary of the extension division. She is also a friend of mine and will be glad to advise you as to what courses you should take.

The only way to find out whether you have any aptitude for writing is to try it. A few courses in composition and news writing will show you whether to quit or to go on. At 21 no girl has a right to call herself a failure in love. She hasn't had enough experience to know. Possibly you need education in emotion as well as composition. Why don't you try writing me about your love problem? Perhaps I will be able to help you.
