

UNIONS DISCUSS WAGE CUTS; NO PLANS REACHED

Contractors Suggest Slash to Make More Work Available.

Little progress on proposals to Indianapolis building crafts to accept wage scale reductions has been made thus far apparently, despite frequent discussions of the matter in local union meetings, it was reported today.

Proposal that the unions accept wage reductions ranging from 10 to 22 per cent were suggested to the unions by contractors, in order to stimulate construction work and provide more employment.

ment that wage cuts would result in $2,500,000 being made available for construction projects are not definite enough.

"We have no definite assurance that such is the case," one union official said.

Although the contractors' suggestion was made only informally, a number of union locals have held heated discussions of the matter at recent meetings.

Members of the Bricklayers and Masons and Tilesetters' union continued discussion of the wage cut proposal Thursday night without reaching any agreement, according to Chester Poland, secretary and business agent.

Members of the carpenters' district council expect to discuss the proposal at several future meetings, said C. F. Manion, business agent.
