

SENATE FIGHT ON WILKERSON IS THREATENED

Hoover Choice for Federal Bench Draws Fire From Organized Labor.

By Scripps-Hoover Newspaper Alliance
WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Appointment of Judge James H. Wilkerson to the United States circuit court of appeals will bring the question of labor injunctions once more before the senate and threatens to provoke a fight similar to that waged upon Judge John J. Parker when President Hoover tried to place him upon the supreme court.

Though Wilkerson's most recent appearance in the national spotlight occurred during the Capone case, when he refused to allow his court to bargain for a plea of guilty, labor organizations and liberal senators recall him as author of the most sweeping injunction ever issued in a railway labor case and other injunctions issued against organized workers.

Wilkerson was appointed to the federal bench by President Harding months before the federated shop crafts strike of 1922. In September of that year, at the request of Attorney-General Harry Daugherty, he issued an injunction which in effect forbade the unions or any of their members to do anything at all in defense of the wage scales they were trying to maintain.

Blamed for Strike's Failure

This was followed by hundreds of minor injunctions issued by Wilkerson and other judges against the striking shopmen, which failure of the strike was credited.

In 1924, Wilkerson issued another injunction which became the basis of the eight-year-old court fight of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

At that time Western Union was employing nonunion men to install call boxes in new buildings, and the organization of electrical workers forbade its men to work in buildings where such labor was employed.

Wilkerson issued an injunction against the electrical workers in which he laid down the doctrine that "the right to work is not an absolute right."

Assailed by Labor

A determined fight against Wilkerson's confinement already has been organized by "Labor," official publication of the railway brotherhoods.

"Wilkerson has been mixed up with Cook county and Illinois politics since 1902. He always has been a 'machine' politician, close to the Insull power interests and bitterly antagonistic to organized labor," says "Labor."

"Wilkerson was so satisfactory to the Insull and other interests that the 'machine' recommended him for a place on the federal bench." Regarding his record in the Capone case, the article says: "The fact is that Wilkerson hurled his thunderbolts at the racketeers who were not in favor with the 'machine.' Today there is just as much beer running and bootlegging of whiskey in Chicago as there was in the palm days of 'Scarface Al,' but it is being directed by a new set of racketeers who apparently enjoy immunity from official attacks."

HOLDS CITY NOT LIABLE

Men Hurt on 'Made Work' Project Can't Collect, Says Knight.
Opinion that the city is not liable to pay compensation to laborers injured while working on municipal projects under the "made work" system, was given by the works board Wednesday by Edward Knight, corporation counsel.

The opinion was sought by the board. Knight recommended that city officials, authorized to make "made work" assignments, keep records of the case and the nature of the work to which the labor was assigned.

A compensation case against the city now is pending before the state industrial board. Regardless of the decision, the litigation will be carried to the state appellate court, Knight said.

COUNTY WEIGHS MANN EVIDENCE

Commissioners Hear Final Pleas in Ouster Trial.

County commissioners today considered evidence against Charles W. Mann, Republican county highway superintendent, on charges of misconduct and neglect of office and incompetency, after final arguments in his ouster trial Wednesday.

Ernest T. Brown, plaintiff, attacked Mann's methods of caring for county roads.

"Mann failed to repair a footbridge for school children, but was not too busy to sandpaper a road past Emsley Johnson's farm," said Brown.

"This hearing has secured more work on county roads in forty-eight hours than has been done during Mann's entire previous superintendency," he continued.

NAVAL PROBERS SCORE PAROLES IN SEX CRIMES

Believe Leniency Is Spur to Hawaii Lawlessness; Assembly Called.

BY DAN CAMPBELL
United Press Staff Correspondent

HONOLULU, Jan. 14.—Drastic reforms to curb lawlessness will be considered Monday by a special session of the territorial legislature following a naval affairs committee report charging lawlessness was encouraged by paroles granted men convicted in assault cases.

Two of the paroled convicts later were identified by Mrs. Thomas H. Massie as members of the gang which assaulted her, leading to "an alleged revenge murder," and culminating in the present turmoil on the islands.

The two were paroled by Governor Lawrence Judd, one so that he might enter an amateur boxing tournament in New York City as an Ahakulo. The other was a Chinese-born citizen named Chang. Both were convicted in an attack on a Chinese girl.

Talk Death Penalty

"The committee feels," the report submitted in Washington said, "that establishment of such a precedent has caused a lawless element to believe this crime can be committed in Honolulu without serious consequence for their acts."

Judd was asked to report whether recommendations for fixing capital punishment for such assaults should not be given the legislature. The legislature, called by Judd, probably will consider some such action. It will be recalled that present law requires evidence from sources other than the alleged victim in attack cases before conviction by a jury. This matter of law was responsible for the judge's instructions of the jury which tried alleged assaults on Mrs. Massie, resulting in disagreement, and release of the accused on bond.

Hear Screams in Car

The latest charge of attempted assault under island law came Tuesday with complaint of Mrs. Patricia Vacco, 21, Portuguese, against an American, Philander B. Gray, 31. Officers in a patrol car heard screams and found the couple in an automobile. Honolulu otherwise had quieted down after the week of excitement caused by the kidnapping and murder of Mrs. Massie's alleged assailant.

The special session will start immediately after a grand jury considers charges of first degree murder against Mrs. Grace Hubbard Fortescue; her son-in-law, Lieutenant Thomas H. Massie, and two enlisted men, and arraignment of the four in connection with the killing of Joe Kahahawai, Hawaiian, also accused of participating in the attack on Mrs. Massie.

Massie, and two enlisted men, and arraignment of the four in connection with the killing of Joe Kahahawai, Hawaiian, also accused of participating in the attack on Mrs. Massie.

The police report on Kahahawai's death was completed by Chief of Detectives John H. McIntosh, who turned it over to James Gilliland, city and county attorney. McIntosh said he would not question Mrs. Massie and added that he had found no indication that she was connected with the killing in any way.

ITALIAN PAPER PROPOSES ALL CANCEL DEBTS

America Can Not Stand Out Against Europe, Says Fascist Organ.

By United Press

MILAN, Italy, Jan. 14.—The United States will renounce war debts because its people don't want to be known as shysters and war profiteers, it was predicted today in a newspaper article, believed to have been written by Premier Benito Mussolini.

The article entitled "Before the Accomplished Fact of Germany's Insolvency, a Word to America" appeared in the newspaper Popolo D'Italia. It was an appeal to America to cancel war debts.

Europe should take the first step toward renunciation, it was suggested, by cancelling German reparations. Then all debtors to America should unite in an appeal to the United States for cancellation of their debts.

"One sole state owes nothing to anybody and is the creditor to all the United States. This situation does not complicate, but simplifies, the problem," the article credited to Mussolini said.

"Prime Minister MacDonald has indicated that Britain is not unwilling to welcome a radical solution of the problem. France finds in the United States a notice for insolvency. The keystone of solution, therefore, lies in the hands of the United States."

"There is only one way to escape from the static situation which is heaping so many ills upon the world, namely, for European countries to begin mutually giving up debt credits, and then for European creditors to present a united front to the United States."

"European debtors would then have a clear conscience in asking cancellation of their debts to the United States. Is it thinkable that the United States would insist on claiming payment from European countries, who had made similar concessions to Germany? Do you think the United States would compel Europe to recommence the vicious circle which Lausanne is supposed to break once and for all?"

"It is a mistake to believe that Americans are deaf to suggestions of cancellation of debts."

"Americans would not like to appear in the history of mankind as the sole and lasting profiteers of the war. No American would like to be compared to Shylock exacting pounds of flesh from the bodies of their debtors."

Text of a cablegram Geiss sent in reply:

"Please wire everything about Dolores. Coming on next boat. Hoping everything turns out all right."

Verdict of a coroner's jury: Richard Geiss came to his death through a bullet wound inflicted by police when he tried to hold up the Abaranell Bros. cleaning and dyeing shop in Oak Park. Justifiable homicide.
