DRYS MOBILIZE TO FIGHT RISING WET SENTIMENT

Hear Call to War Sounded by Leaders at Parley in Washington.

By United Press WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Leaders of the Anti-Saloon League mobilized their forces here today on the twelfth anniversary of prohibition, in a concerted effort to keep the statute books dry.

Gathered for the league's twenty-fifth biennial convention, which opened Friday night for a five-day session, the drys prepared to meet the wet sentiment which they admit is becoming increasingly more evident.

There will be countless speeches during the meeting by prominent drys. Playlets and talking pictures will be produced to dramatize their cause.

F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the league, delivered the keynote speech Friday night. He warned the convention that the next election "can win or lose prohibition."

Cheer Raskob Attacks The delegates, packed in the convention room of the Mayflower hotel, cheered lustily when he launched a bitter attack against John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, Alfred E. Smith, and Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York.

"If the Democratic party can loosen itself from the stranglehold of John J. Raskob and nominate a constitutional Democrat it will have a chance," he said, warning the drys to "shun the pitfalls of partisanship."

Bishop William N. Ainsworth, Birmingham, of the Methodist Episcopal church, South; Willis J. Abbot, editor of the Christian Science Monitor, and the Rev. W. J. McGlothlin, president of the Southern Baptist convention, also spoke.

The program today calls for speeches by Mrs. Ella A. Boole, president of the W. C. T. U.; E. C. Dinwiddie, general secretary of the Methodist board of temperance, prohibition and public morals, and several others.

State Option Bill Appears

A visit to the capitol to hear prohibition anniversary speeches by Senator Sheppard (Dem., Tex.) author of the eighteenth amendment, and others, also was scheduled. Included in the group were over 100 Ohio high school students, winners in prohibition contests.

While delegates prepared to visit congress, an anti-prohibition house group discussed a proposed constitutional amendment to modify the eighteenth amendment. The measure, introduced Friday, calls for "state option" and contains a "referendum feature" requiring submission to state conventions instead of to legislatures.

The drys face this and countless other repeal and modification measures now under consideration in congress.

Bishop Ernest G. Richardson, Philadelphia, of the Methodist Episcopal church, was chosen president of the league Friday. He succeeds Bishop Thomas Nicholson of Detroit, who had served twelve years.

tendent, speaks in the morning at the Barth Place M. E. church. At night, the pastor, the Rev. Howard M. Pattison speaks on "The Value of Vision."

"The Higher Law" is the morning theme of the Rev. John E. Ferguson of the Irvington Presbyterian church. At night a missionary film, "The Punjab," will be shown.

At the Truth Center of Applied Christianity at the Hotel Lincoln at 10:30 a. m. Sunday, Mrs. Edna F. Mauzy speaks on "The New Birth."

At the Advent Episcopal church, the Rt. Rev. Bishop Joseph M. Francis will conduct the service. Holy Communion at 7:30 a. m. Morning prayer and sermon at 11 a. m.

Speaking of the Weather

by Charles Fitzhugh Talman of the U.S. Weather Bureau

WRITTEN EXCLUSIVELY FOR NEA SERVICE

NO. 9—The Only Way to Judge Future Weather Is by the Past—That's Why Millions of Records Are Kept.

STATISTICS of climate are merely digests or summaries of past weather, but they indicate, in a general way, the weather of the future.

There is a common impression to the effect that conservative meteorologists do not engage in long-range weather forecasting, except, perhaps, in an experimental and academic way, without reference to any direct application of their forecasts to human affairs.

This idea is hardly consistent with the fact that nearly every big meteorological establishment in the world compiles and issues climatic statistics, which are used as a means of anticipating the weather of the distant future and are intended chiefly for that purpose.

For example, the Department of Agriculture published a few years ago, as a section of the beautiful Atlas of American Agriculture, some elaborate charts showing the average dates of the last "killing" frost in spring and the first in autumn in all parts of the United States.

These charts are merely a record of what has happened in past years. They enable farmers and fruit-growers to know approximately when, in any locality, frosts are due.

In a similar way, engineers, in designing sewers, assume that heavy rainfalls in the future will not greatly exceed in intensity those of the past as recorded in the climatic statistics of the locality; doctors send their patients to places where beneficial climatic conditions hitherto have prevailed, on the assumption that substantially the same conditions will continue and so on.

It is chiefly because of such practical considerations that meteorologists maintain weather observations on a vast scale throughout the world and publish records or digests of all these observations.

There are many places in Europe and a few in our own country where weather records have been kept continuously for more than a century.

Some of these records are of immense size. One of the startling sights to be seen in the Weather Bureau library at Washington, is a file of volumes containing daily measurements of rainfall made in India.

Each volume, presenting the figures for a single year, is as big as an unabridged dictionary and weighs about twelve pounds.

NAB 2 FOR AUTO THEFT

Terre Haute Youths Tell Police Riding Rails Was Too Risky.

Two young men, who decided "riding the rails" was a hazardous pastime, were arrested by police early today as they speeded on Massachusetts avenue in an automobile they are alleged to have stolen in Muncie.

Those held are Ernest Hooker, 20, and James Archer, 20, both of Terre Haute, who said they had stolen the car in Muncie.

"We rode the rails from Terre Haute to Anderson, where a railroad detective beat us up and we decided that way of traveling was too risky," they told Sergeant Harold Morton, the officer said.

"We stole the car in Muncie, but it looks like we should have stuck to the rails."

VALUED RELICS OF ESKIMO LIFE ARE UNEARTHED

Slate Mirrors, Ornaments Found in Shell Heap of Prehistoric Colony.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 15.—A young woman archeologist, digging in the frozen ground of Cook Inlet, Alaska, has unearthed the first mirrors ever found in a prehistoric Eskimo settlement. These ancient aids to beauty used by women, or perhaps men, in the far north centuries ago, are made of slate. The slate surface had to be dampened in order to reflect the round faces of the Eskimo owners.

The slate mirrors are merely one high light of the expedition to Cook Inlet conducted by Miss Frederica de Laguna with the assistance of Wallace de Laguna and Edwin B. Newman. The expedition was sent out by the University of Pennsylvania museum during the past season.

From a scientific standpoint the most important discovery of the expedition was that Eskimos formerly inhabited this region, now inhabited by Indians. The ground around Cook Inlet marks almost the farthest southern advance of the Eskimos into Alaska.

Miss de Laguna and her associates dug into shell heaps by the shore that represent the trash bins of the departed Eskimos. Some of these shell heaps were piled ten to fourteen feet high. In them were found ornaments worn long ago on state occasions.

There were lip plugs, beads, an ivory pendant, a carved ivory head, a small buckle, a nose pin. Among the pieces of domestic equipment left in the trash heap were a lamp, a needle case and needles, and the ivory catch which once belonged to a box.

Among the articles in the trash heap discarded by Eskimo men were slate blades for whaling lances, stone hammers, bone awls, stone weights for fish lines, and the sockets and foreshafts for harpoons.
