

JOB INSURANCE DEMANDED AT MINER PARLEY

Recognition of Russia Wins Approval, With Strong Reservations.

Resolutions urging federal unemployment insurance, freedom of the Philippine islands, federal operation of public utilities "in principle" and recognition of Soviet Russia, if in return that nation recognizes the right of self-determination for the United States and American labor, were among those adopted today by the convention of the United Mine Workers of America.

The unemployment insurance and Soviet recognition resolutions took the center of debate interest.

Among other resolutions adopted were those which would guarantee to farmers a 10 per cent return above production costs; legislation to restrict convict labor; blanket support of all child labor laws; support of the West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee mine strikes; state and federal legislation guaranteeing deposits in closed banks; and, although federal control of coal mines was opposed, the miners voted to support the Davis bill, which would provide for federal commission regulation of the coal industry.

A. F. of L. Aid Asked

Immediate campaign to win support of the American Federation of Labor for the unemployment insurance program was urged. Assurance that this would be done was given by Thomas Kennedy, international secretary-treasurer.

Support of the A. F. of L. executive board first will be sought. The question then will be taken to the floor of that convention next October.

Pointing out that the "dole has been extended to practically every industry in the country, under one guise or another, with the exception of labor," Kennedy declared "it is not for the dole in Great Britain, that nation today would be in a chaos of industrial and economic revolution."

"Unemployment insurance would be one of the greatest stabilizing influences in this country if enacted, yet the capitalists can not recognize this."

Russian Resolution Rewritten

Two resolutions providing for immediate recognition of Soviet Russia were rewritten by the resolutions committee to conform to the idea that before this should come about Russia should recognize that it has no right to attempt to dictate to this nation the type of government which it should have.

The report denied that Russia today is socialist. "The theory of socialism is not comparable to the present government of Russia."

"The present government of Russia is a dictatorship and those brave souls there in favor of a real socialist government are in jail, and no person is permitted to speak against the present form of government," it was said.

Raps at Communists

The committee report charged that the Communists have joined forces with American capitalists in seeking to destroy the American labor movement.

Co-operation with the A. F. of L. in establishing an international memorial to "Mother" Jones, famed labor leader, who died a year ago, was pledged.

The wage scale committee will meet today, it was learned and probably will recommend to the convention that there be no change in the present policy under which districts make individual agreements with operators. Previous to 1928, the unions in the four central states operated under an interstate agreement which established similar wages in each field.

The problem of equalizing work in the Pennsylvania anthracite fields in order to allow wider employment will be discussed tonight at a caucus of international officials with delegates from Districts one, seven and nine in Pennsylvania.

PHOTOS TO AID JUDD DEFENSE

Pictures Showing Bruises May Be Introduced.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 1.—Photographs said to show Winine Ruth Judd was suffering from numerous bruises as late as a week after she assertedly killed two former friends last October may be introduced at her trial this week on the charge she murdered Agnes Anne Lerol.

The pictures, twenty-eight in all, were taken in Los Angeles when Mrs. Judd surrendered to authorities, after trucks she sent there were discovered to contain the bodies of Mrs. Lerol and Hedvig Samuelson, shot to death together in the Phoenix apartment they shared.

The defense probably will attempt to introduce these pictures in support of a self defense plea, it was learned through the defendant's husband, Dr. William C. Judd.

The bruises are intended to illustrate that if Mrs. Judd killed the two girls, she shot only in self defense and after they attacked her.

Mrs. Judd's trial has been in recess since last Wednesday because of the illness of jurors. Physicians expected the jurors to be able to continue today.

THEY TELL ME

BY BEN STERN

DID you ever hear about the man who gave a peanut for an orange? Well, R. Earl Peters, Democratic state chairman, who once in a while pulls a bright one, did that down at French Lick Saturday.

When the district chairman assembled there to pick a date for the state convention and arrange the preliminaries, the anti-Peters men, cognizant of the old political adage, "the hand that wields the gavel dictates the nominations," decided that they wanted to have something to do with the selection of the permanent chairman.

They won, but what?

The rules permit the state chairman to arrange for the convention, pick the keynote, chairman and make the program in the absence of a committee. But with a gesture of disinterestedness, Peters permitted adoption of a motion to name a special convention committee and then named the personnel himself.

And is there anyone who would think that he would select his own executives?

The motion was made by his loyal supporter, Tom McConnell of Fowler, old Tenth district chairman, and passed without dissent, the anti-Peters group, of course, cheerfully chiming into the chorus of "ayes."

Grover Garrett, old Ninth district chairman, chief of the state police and one of the ax-wielders in the campaign against the state chairman, seconded McConnell's motion, thinking that his faction was winning something.

Millen of the Royal Canadian mounted police, killed by a rifle shot from the maniac.

MILLEN led the party sent out under the long-familiar orders of the mounted—"Get your man." The trapper already had withstood two attempts at capture. He shot and wounded Constable A. W. King, Dec. 31. Ten days later he fought off eight police in a fifteen-hour battle.

The third party found Johnson fled from his fortified cabin on the Rat river. With Indian guides, Millen and his comrades began a painstaking hunt through the icy wilderness. The temperature never was above 30 below. Blizzards raged. High winds piled mountainous drifts. But slowly the hunt went on.

'GOVERNOR' CYR ASKED TO GET OUT OF HOTEL

Claimant to Louisiana Office to File Ouster Suit.

By United Press

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 1.—"Governor" Paul Cyr has moved his executive offices from a hotel room equipped with twin beds and a bathroom door bottle opener to another hotel—by request.

He had made the Heidelberg hotel his "executive mansion" two days before the management requested him to pack his tooth brush and clean shirt and depart. So Cyr went to the Louisiana hotel.

Cyr, leader of the "out" forces in Louisiana's war of the Governors, today intends to file suit in district court at Lake Charles. The suit is directed as an ouster at his gubernatorial rival, Alvin O. King. If Cyr is successful, King and his armed guards will have to move from the official statehouse and executive mansion.

U. S. STANDS TO LOSE BIG FIELD FOR HER TRADE

Chinese Open Door Policy Threatened by War in Orient.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—One of America's greatest potential trade areas is involved in the Japanese conflict in China.

But that statement, standing alone, would lead to entirely unjustified inferences regarding the present situation because there are other important elements in the picture.

Humanitarian motives would lead the United States in any case to do everything it legitimately could to prevent bloodshed in China or anywhere else. This government now is paying more than $1,000,000,000 a year in war costs, in current military expenses and expenditures for past wars.

In Europe there exists a vivid object lesson in the painful price which nations must pay for war on the modern scale. The United States has been active in trying to set up peace machinery since the World war, and does not wish to see this decade of effort crumble in face of gunfire.

War Gains Temporary

Although America's long-range economic interest generally is regarded as being on the side of peace and a free China, there is much discussion as to whether America would not profit temporarily from an oriental war. Japan rapidly has been increasing her purchase of American cotton, a commodity in which southern farmers are overstocked heavily.

"A war in the orient undoubtedly would stimulate business," one New York banker told this writer recently. But he added a statement putting an entirely different face on the situation.

"In the long run," he said, "war does not pay. You can not blow up millions of dollars in explosives without ultimately paying the price."

China a Vast Market

Thus many considerations enter along with the fundamental fact that China long has been regarded as a huge potential market in which America has hoped to develop a share of the trade.

This is one of the basic reasons for the open-door policy, the cornerstone of America's policy in the Orient for a third of a century.

This policy, in essence, is that China shall be kept open to all nations alike and that no one power shall usurp a position to the exclusion of others.

The principal, existing as a general policy, was incorporated definitely into the nine-power Pacific treaty in 1921.

There are some 400,000,000 persons in China, living on a low standard. The long-range opportunity of developing a country which contains more than three times the population of America is obvious in the light of the leap which Japan has made within the memory of many now living.

ORR CORRECTS STORIES

State Official Did Not Recommend Teachers' Minimum Wage Cut.

Lawrence F. Orr, state accounts board chief examiner, today asked correction of newspaper accounts of his address Friday night before the Indianapolis Federation of Community Civic Clubs, in which he was quoted as favoring reduction of the minimum teachers' wage.

In his address, Orr said the minimum wage now provided by statute for teachers should not be reduced, but that the minimum wage be paid to teachers direct from the state treasury, eventually providing that the revenue therefor be obtained otherwise than from property tax.

Injured Fox Terrier Keeps Vigil for Master

Goblins Got Teddy When He Ran Away From Rumble Seat.

In dog lore there is a superstition that the "goblins will get" the dog that runs away from his master. Perhaps it was due to curiosity that Teddy, a 3-year-old fox terrier, wanted to test his theory when he hopped out of his master's automobile downtown nine days ago for a slumming tour of the canine quarters.

The goblins got Teddy, all right,

W. D. Wilson and dog, Teddy and today he's nursing a broken leg at the home of W. D. Wilson, Ravenswood.

When Teddy found his master last June he was one of many inmates of the dog pound. He was placed on the auction block and sold to a man who sported a car with a rumble seat, a dog's idea of perfection in motoring.

Two weeks ago Teddy rode to town in the rumble seat with Wilson, who parked at St. Clair and Illinois streets. An hour later, when he returned, Teddy was gone. For three days Wilson searched for his lost pet.

But errant Teddy fared badly, and suffered a broken front leg when struck by an automobile. Lost and crippled, he returned then to the automobile. But it was not there.

For two days Teddy waited grimly for his master's car to return, and finally saw it.

When Wilson returned to the car one day last week he found Teddy in the rumble seat.

BIG TOP BIDS OLD TROUPER FAREWELL

Spangles and Fanfare Over for Sawdust Queen of 30 Years Ago.

The show was over today for another old-time trouper, and veterans of the big-top mourned the death of Mrs. Julia Fredricksdorf, one-time Mile. Julia Brachard, who died Sunday at her home here, 1515 West New York street, at the age of 60.

Beginning her stage career when only 10, Mrs. Fredricksdorf was a circus queen for thirty-four years before retiring in 1915 to marry Andrew Fredricksdorf, an Indianapolis molder.

She was stricken a week ago Sunday with apoplexy.

Mrs. Fredricksdorf was born on a small farm in Monroe county, the daughter of Napoleon and Harriet Platt, and while a child became an expert horseback rider on her father's farm. Her father lost his life in a sawmill and the little girl came to Indianapolis with her mother, a sister and a brother.

She practiced and became adept at juggling and wire walking, and, when only 10, was given parts in stock company plays in the English and old Park theaters.

Several years later she perfected a juggling act and joined the big-top, appearing with Ringling Brothers, Barnum & Bailey, and Sells Floto with her juggling act, and novelty revolving globe act, which became a feature.

Early in her circus career she married a famous contortionist, Brachard, and she gained fame under that name. They were divorced after several years.

She continued as a performer, traveling all over the United States, Canada, Mexico, Cuba and Europe, and at one time owning her own show in Cuba.

Early in 1915 she returned to Indiana, and while she was a Wabash, Fredricksdorf, who had known her several years, wrote her a letter.

"I told her to quit the show business," recalled Fredricksdorf today, "and to come back home and get married."

PRISON IS HELD OVERCROWDED

Pendleton Chief Appeals to Leslie for Aid.

Confronted with the "worst overcrowding" in the history of the Indiana state reformatory at Pendleton, Captain Ralph Howard, superintendent, today appealed to Governor Harry G. Leslie for additional buildings at the institution.

Howard said the penal institution, erected for a maximum capacity of 1,400 prisoners, now has a daily average of 2,522 prisoners.

Howard told Leslie that, in previous years, the number of prisoners never totaled more than 400 in excess of capacity. He said use of an outside dormitory for 200 trustees has relieved the situation slightly, but more structures are necessary.

The condition is so acute each cell is occupied by two prisoners, which, Howard said, "is bad for morale."

In the last few years, the reformatory building program has resulted in erection of factory buildings, but no cell blocks.

AUTO STRIPPERS BUSY

Gasoline, Accessories Are Taken From Three Cars.

Thieves who preyed on three automobiles Sunday night gathered a loot of gasoline and accessories, valued at $70.

Theft of a bumper, headlights and horn, valued at $25, from his car was reported to officers by Fred J. Kuester, 2735 Barth avenue.

Twelve gallons of gasoline were stolen from the car of R. P. Wolf, 1833 Arrow avenue, he informed police.

Mad Trapper Routs Mounties, Killing One

By United Press

KLAVIK, Northwest Territory, Feb. 1.—Three men stood guard today in the bitter cold of Arctic twilight over the body of a slain comrade, awaiting meanwhile the parapet behind which a mad killer has concealed himself.

A wild game whipped across the barren tundras as the men huddled in their fur parkas. They were sent into the desolate Rat river region eight miles from this outpost to capture Albert Johnson, trapper, driven crazy by the isolation of the northern winter.

Here eight volunteers hurriedly outfitted to go to the aid of the little party.

The slain man is Constable E.

Millen of the Royal Canadian mounted police, killed by a rifle shot from the maniac.

MILLEN led the party sent out under the long-familiar orders of the mounted—"Get your man." The trapper already had withstood two attempts at capture. He shot and wounded Constable A. W. King, Dec. 31. Ten days later he fought off eight police in a fifteen-hour battle.

The third party found Johnson fled from his fortified cabin on the Rat river. With Indian guides, Millen and his comrades began a painstaking hunt through the icy wilderness. The temperature never was above 30 below. Blizzards raged. High winds piled mountainous drifts. But slowly the hunt went on.

Thirty miles from the mouth of the Rat river, Millen's party found Johnson Saturday. He had built a parapet of ice and stone, knowing the mounted police never would give up until he was found.

The party of four deployed about the circular fort. Johnson incautiously showed himself at the entrance of his fortification. Carl Garlund, a volunteer member of the posse, quick on the trigger, fired. Garlund was certain he had killed or wounded the trapper.

FOR two hours the posse waited patiently while with cum-
