

POOR MOTHERS TO GET BIRTH CONTROL INFORMATION

Clinics Will Be Urged by State Group

Dissemination of birth control information to poor and overburdened parents of the state is the object of the Indiana Birth Control League being organized here under the direction of Mrs. Donald McGraw, New York, director of field work for the American Birth Control League.

The league will urge establishment of clinics to which women who have no family physician may be referred for health or economic reasons.

An organization meeting, when a board of directors will be named, will be held at 2 Thursday at the Claypool, preceded by luncheon at noon. At 5 there will be a physicians' meeting, when William D. Brown, Cincinnati, will be speaker.

Information Not Banned

"Dissemination of birth control information by physicians is not illegal," Mrs. McGraw asserted, "although many believe it to be. It only is illegal to give it through the mail."

One hundred and one clinics already have been established in United States, according to Mrs. McGraw. "These clinics in close cooperation with gynecological wards of hospitals are directed by physicians assisted by nurses."

Trained social workers follow-up cases," she explained. "Some clinics are extramural, many are in connection with hospitals and several are in connection with university hospitals. That of the University of Virginia at Charlottesville is a notable example."

Applicants Increase

"In one of the clinics in Detroit," Mrs. McGraw continued, "charts show that there has been a decided increase in applicants between the ages of 30 and 35. Mothers of several children came to protect their families from disintegration because of extreme poverty, not because they didn't want children."

These women ordinarily must go to the out-patient departments of hospitals for advice that will not be given unless there is a special clinic for the particular purpose, Mrs. McGraw said.

In the event of the establishment of such a clinic women will be referred to it by social agencies, public health nurses or doctors.

Minister to Speak

The Rev. Ferdinand O. Blumhard, Cleveland, will be luncheon speaker with his topic, "Ethical Aspects of Birth Control." Miss Helen Wullop, Boston, medical social worker, will speak on "How to Establish a Birth Control Clinic." The Rev. F. S. C. Wicks, chairman, will preside.

Mrs. McGraw will outline the aims and principles of the American league at the meeting at 2, for which Professor R. Clyde White will act as chairman.

Dr. Brown will speak at 5 on "Modern Contraceptive Technique." Discussion will follow.

Painted Toes to Greet Spring Winds Through Sandals, Foot Fashions Say

Shoes are beached. Toes will peep. Shoe polish is going lilac.

As for men's footwear, it will be necessary to have laces to match the tie to be in the mode for 1932.

These facts came to light today as the Indiana Shoe Travelers' Association closed its joint convention with the Indiana Shoe Buyers' Association in the Claypool.

Upper Right—Floral and fauna designs imprinted on linen are the Frenchest in pump models.

They are being caressed in the photo by Miss Wanetta Adair, 146 West Twenty-sixth street.

Shoe men are showing a polish for black leather that has the perfumed scent of the wicklock of lilacs of the valley and lilac.

And as for peeping toes in the new sandals it has been decreed that milady shall paint her "tootsies."

MANNERS AND MORALS By JANE JORDAN

ARE you worried and blue? Get your troubles off your mind by writing to Jane Jordan, who will answer your letters in this column.

Dear Jane Jordan—In reply to Mr. Bad Boy and X. Y. Z. I'd like to say that there are plenty of good girls left, but they are afraid to let you know, because fellows don't want that kind. I did think more good girls were lovely, but after the novel wears off on this, I wish a girl who was as good as they can be.

I don't smoke, drink, or like wild parties. I went with a fellow for a year, to whom I was engaged. At first he was satisfied with me, but I fell deeply in love with him. Then he wanted me to drink and go on parties with him, also to take week-end trips alone. When I refused he accused me of not really loving him.

I loved him, but I loved my self-respect more. Finally we split over this. Any fellow who would love me and seemed impressed by the fact that I didn't drink and smoke, I found he had the same idea as the first.

These two experiences kindled something in me that won't ever let me again. I never be able to trust a fellow again like I did those two.

I thought I expected too much, but I didn't expect any more than I was ready to give. I'd like to have a man's view of this. Just what they want all of this in a girl, and if they want all of this in a girl, what do they want that they don't want?

Dear Puzzled Girl—There are hundreds of girls in your shoes, unhappy, puzzled, disillusioned. At the risk of hurting your feelings and theirs, which I wouldn't do for the world, I am going to say that we women are too deadly serious about love affairs. Why can't we learn a lighter touch from the men?

I do not mean for a moment that you have presented the young men in question with the privilege of marriage when they were unwilling to assume one of its responsibilities.

But had you been a little more understanding you could have looked upon their behavior with more humor and less heartbreak.

For instance, suppose you have an attractive dog in your house. While you are preparing dinner he formulates designs upon a luscious porthouse steak and makes a grab for it. You do not condemn him too harshly for obeying the dictates of his animal nature, although he is breaking all the rules of decency by his conduct. You just bat him down and see that he doesn't get what he wants.

The analogy is imperfect, I know, for boys know better—and dogs do not. Nevertheless, if they insist on acting like puppy dogs, the thing is to treat them as such. These young men not only were following a primitive impulse without stopping to reason. I should say, just bat them down and laugh.

Don't cry. They aren't worth it. And the next time a young man makes love to you, expect nothing. Even after the ring is on your finger and Mrs. before your name, don't hug illusions too closely, nor lose your understanding of the simple animal nature of the man you married. He won't take you as seriously as you take him.

Dear Jane Jordan—We are two girls, and I'm chiming with another girl. She has a date every night with a different fellow. Also she has been engaged to nine men and always broke the engagement. Some people think she is very popular, but my girl friend and I don't think it looks very nice. What do you think she is trying to get out of this? She is trying to get out of her friends that are going steady with her.

Dear Peggy and Jenny—We never admire the girl who can snag nine different "guys" and fling them aside when she's tired, but, oh, how we envy her! It isn't that we want

What's in Fashion? Exciting Fabrics for Spring

Here is something that looks like good old corduroy.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—If you love fine fabrics, you're in for a whole series of surprises and delights this spring. Never so many new and undreamed-of weaves and patterns to make you want to handle and drape and picture yourself in these new fabrics.

It isn't so much because of the way fabrics feel, either. It's because of the way they look.

Here—for instance—is something that looks like good old corduroy. Narrow ribs. Soft and velvety looking. Is corduroy still smart?

"Yes, madam, it is," the salesperson says. "But this isn't corduroy. It's the new ribbed wool that's so fashionable for suits and dresses."

And—is that seersucker? Well, no—it isn't. (Though you're going to see seersucker used again this summer.)

This material is silk in a seersucker weave... all crinkly and ribby... and the newest-looking silk you've ever seen!

So many different, unusual, exciting things have been done to the surface of materials, you almost have to learn over again about fabrics. You've just got to pick them up... run your finger over them... to see if they really are what they seem to be.

Surface Effects New
And often they aren't! For wools look like silks. Silks look like wools. Woven fabrics like knitted ones and knitted like woven.

It's the surface that makes spring fabrics different.

Silks and wools—both—are still rough-surfaced. But instead of the exaggerated nubby, pebbly roughness of last season, it's a roughness that comes of pattern being introduced into the background.

There are diagonals, shadow plaids, ribs, serge and twill weaves, honeycombs... both in silks and wools.

Silk Is Suede-Like
Of course, these weaves are a bit more pronounced in wools. But there's many a silk that easily might be mistaken for a very fine wool serge.

And the newest silk makes you think almost of a suede cloth, for it's dull-surfaced and soft and takes color in a deep warm effect.

We predict that needles will fly, sewing machines hum and pattern books get on the best seller list once fashion-wise women, who like to sew. See these thrilling new fabrics. (Copyright, 1932, by Amos Parrish)

In every package of genuine Bayer Aspirin are proven directions for colds, headaches, sore throat, neuralgia, neuritis. Millions who used to suffer have found winter comfort in Bayer Aspirin.
