WHAT'S IN FASHION?—New Evening Dresses Are Practical

NEW YORK, April 9.—Good news for husbands, fathers, or whoever pays the bills. This spring, when the evening invitations start piling up, you shouldn't hear so many feminine complaints of "But I haven't a thing to wear."

Fashion, with her weather eye on budgets, has made new evening dresses practical. They're adaptable to many kinds of events. Easy to take care of, too (some can be washed at home). And still they're just as lovely and enticing.

There are many dresses this spring designed so they're appropriate for both formal and informal evening affairs. (So no matter how the invitation reads she has something to wear.)

Slightly shorter lengths are the fashion, which makes one dress more adaptable. The same length—ankle or instep are the smart—does for dancing, theater, dining or anywhere else you go. (Saves wear and tear, too, since it's not within reach of men's heels.)

Dresses Slightly Shorter Then many in fact, most-dresses have a jacket that goes with them, either matching the color and material or smartly contrasting with it.

Or, if you prefer it, a little cape is just as useful as a jacket. For the more formal affairs you take off the jacket or cape, while for less formal ones you keep it on.

Shoulders Are Covered The fashionable silhouette calls for wider looking shoulders. That's made berthas, capellets, epaulet and cap sleeves in fashion. And all these details cover the shoulders making the dress, even without a jacket, less of the grand opera type. It's still formal, but more suitable for the usual run of evening events.

Incidentally, a good way to give shoulder newness is to get a large square of chiffon or crepe, fold it triangle shape and drape it 'kerchief-wise over your shoulders, knotting the ends and fastening it in place with a large clip.

Even in materials you can be more practical. For while the crepe and prints are still fashionable, so are laces, that need little pressing and if torn can be mended invisibly.

Easy to Launder Sheer wools and sheer shantungs, sturdy materials that stand many trips to the cleaners.

And—believe it or not—cottons, especially ribbed cottons like flat ribbed jerseys are going to be seen. And lots of these can be laundered at home.

The fashionable silhouette is simple and straight—an undated silhouette—which makes a dress less conspicuous if you have to wear it many times in one season.

It molds the figure, as the dress illustrated. And if you could take that contrasting jacket, you'd find the dress shoulders extended so the tops of the arms are covered.

Isham Jones Band to Play at I. U. Prom

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., April 9.—According to announcement here by Charles Harrell, Isham Jones and his sixteen-piece Brunswick recording dance orchestra have been signed for the 1932 Junior prom. Harrell is chairman of this year's prom committee. In order to book Jones it was necessary to change the date of the prom, from Friday, April 29, to Friday, May 6, Harrell said.

Part of the prom program will be broadcast from Bloomington over a nation-wide hookup of the Columbia broadcasting system, through station WFBM, Indianapolis, handling the broadcast by remote control.

April 22 has been set as the date for the election of I. U. prom queen, who, with Morris McDaniels, Indianapolis, president of this year's Junior club, will lead the grand march.

The program will include the singing of the sorority song by Miss Victoria Poggiani, accompanied by Miss Irma Spacke; a history of the organization by Miss Helen Perry; a prophecy by Miss Patricia McGinley, and an address, "Pi Omega in 1933," by Miss Margaret McGinley, president.

A theater party for "Rhapsody in Black," at English's will follow dinner.

Your Child

System That Makes Labor of Education Is Deficient

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

Recently a friend of mine who is a famed lecturer gave me the script of his address on Vergil to read. I read it through twice, with the result that I was seized with a tremendous indignation and resentment, because I had learned more Roman history, more about the poet himself, and more about the story of Aeneas and his misfortunes than I had picked up in one solid year of scanning Latin lines in class.

And why was that? Why had I finished my senior year at high school having come through Caesar, Cicero, and Vergil without the slightest inkling of what any of them were about?

Caesar I digested more or less, but the orations of Cicero and his denunciations of traitors in the Forum meant nothing on earth to me but genitives and ablatives and declensions.

Story Was Concealed

Vergil's "Aeneid" was something to be scanned and translated, and it was more important to get the "cases" of the Roman gods straight and be careful about the twisty Latin verbs than it was to dig into the meaning of the story. The story, whatever it was about, seemed to be a secret.

When I put the manuscript down that Dr. Vincent Booth had given me to read I said this: "Why in the name of goodness couldn't they have told us that when we were studying the Latin classics?"

"Why couldn't they give us a week or two on the whole picture first; the times, the wars, the trials and troubles of this pastoral poet; where he got his ideas and philosophies contained in this epic?"

"If they had done that, we children would have gone into it with open interest."

Made Hard Labor

Instead we were given big black books called "Vergil" that might just as well have been called "Ad-dacadabra."

We started in laboriously trying to dig a meaning out of the first line, then the second and the third, and by the time we had reached the fourth, we had forgotten the first.

There was no picture, no story, and consequently no interest. It was the same with "Cicero's" eternal droning. Yet that whole period with its fierce jealousies, battles and murders were as dramatic a time as the world has ever known.

It passed peacefully over our heads in a series of grammatical explorations.

Weak Place in Education

I write this as an illustration of one of the weak places in education. Children go into things blindly and study beside the mark. If things were explained to them intelligently and a big clear picture drawn for them at first of what it is all about, much mental haze would be dissipated.

To hear about a country, to know it before you go in is always a help. You see it then with more appreciative eyes, and you learn through your interest.

It is the same with lessons. Not always, of course, but quite often children are studying in the dark. Every new text-book should be prefaced by the teacher.

To go along blindly day by day is no fun at all. I often wonder if children know more than half the time what they really are studying.

Department Club Slates Russia Talk

A program of harp music and a talk on Russia will be featured at a meeting of the general club of the Woman's Department Club Wednesday.

Mrs. Everett M. Schofield, president, will preside at the business meeting at 2 when the first draft of the proposed revision of the by-laws will be read. Members will vote on the revision at the annual meeting, May 12.

Pasquale Montani, harpist, will play a group of his own composition and as a prelude to his program, will give a description of the evolution of the harp.

Mrs. Noble B. Ritchey of Franklin will be speaker in the afternoon on "The Russia Show Did Not See."

Mrs. Ritchey spent the winter of 1930-31 at the Grand hotel in Moscow, and traveled extensively through southern Russia, accompanying Mrs. Ritchey on many business trips, living in all types of quarters and contacting all classes of people.

A spring tea, honoring the ninety-nine new members who have joined the club since last May, will follow the program. Mrs. Harry E. Watson, assisted by members of the hospitality committee, is chairman. Members of the board and of the courtesy committee will greet the house guests, and Mrs. Nettie New and Mrs. Edwin I. Poston will preside at the tea table.

Book-a-Month group will meet at 11 Wednesday to hear Miss R. Katharine Beeson review, "Mrs. Gaskell and Her Friends," by Susan Gaskell. A buffet luncheon will follow in charge of Mrs. Robert Shingler. Mrs. Edward L. Pedlow is receiving reservations.

Board of directors will meet at 10 Monday morning at the clubhouse.

Mrs. Harold K. Bacheider, 1927 North Delaware street, will entertain members of the Public Health Nursing auxiliary at 12:30 Tuesday.

Miss Tennant Delegate for Glory Society

Old Glory Society, Children of the American Revolution, will be represented at the national C. A. R. convention in Washington, April 9, by Miss Anne Tennant, as the official delegate. Miss Mary Ellen Voyles, junior president, and alternate; Miss Mary Bon, Miss Claire Patten, Walker W. Winslow Jr., and Charles Fuller.

The other delegate from Indiana will be William Mayse of the Kokomo C. A. R.

The C. A. R. class in parliamentary law, conducted by Mrs. John Downing Johnson, will meet Thursday, April 14, at the home of Miss Angles Mary Hinkle, 2352 Broadway.

The anniversary celebration which was scheduled for Saturday has been postponed until April 30. It will be a musical tea at the D. A. R. chapter house.

Mrs. Webster Is Hostess to Thursday Club

The Thursday Afternoon Club entertained with a George Washington luncheon Thursday at the home of Mrs. Dana Webster, 131 North Bosart street.

Music Club's Convention Plans Made

Indiana Federation of Music clubs will hold its twelfth annual convention at the Severin, April 21, 22 and 23. The last day will be given over exclusively to the junior music clubs.

The official call to the convention has been issued by Mrs. Jane Johnson Burroughs, state president.

More stress will be laid on the social program this year than in the past. In addition to the luncheons held each day there will be two conference breakfasts, a ride over the city will be followed by a tea at the Avalon Country Club Friday afternoon, and a dance will be given Saturday afternoon on the Severin roof garden for the young people.

Tea to Honor Delegates

The tea Friday will honor the delegates and visitors, and will be given through the courtesy of Sigma Alpha Iota and Mu Phi Epsilon, musical sororities of the Arthur Jordan Conservatory of Music. The tea-dance Saturday will follow the program by the junior groups, which will include contests, finals in a series now being held in the various districts.

The annual banquet will be held Thursday night, followed by an all-state concert. This will be followed by the annual past-president's frolic, the program for which is being arranged by Mrs. James H. Lowry.

The annual church festival, considered one of the high lights of the convention, will be held Friday night at the Roberts Park Methodist Episcopal church. Many of the fine musical organizations from over the state will be represented. Mrs. Potter Lucas, Muncie, is arranging the program.

Two Massed Choral Groups

There will be two massed choral groups. Mrs. Hazel Dell Neff Smelser, director of the Fine Arts school of South Bend, will direct the women's chorus. Mixed voices will be directed by Edward Bailey Birge of Indiana university.

Among the speakers who will appear are Ralph Wright, director of music in Indianapolis schools, and Professor John J. Haramy of Indiana Central. Mixed voices will be directed by Edward Bailey Birge of Indiana university.
