

GLACIER PRIEST, PARTY FOUND IN ALASKAN WILDS

Rescued, Near Starvation, After Scaling Peaks of Mt. Katmai.

SEWARD, Alaska, April 20.—Rescued after two weeks' isolation in the forbidding ice peaks of Mt. Katmai, Father Bernard Hubbard and two fellow explorers prepared for new adventures today in the name of science.

Undaunted by the experience, the "glacier priest" of Santa Clara, Cal., university told of his success in scaling dangerous Mt. Katmai, after a series of thrilling escapes from death.

With Kenneth Chisholm of San Francisco and Jack Morton of Anchorage, Alaska, the priest was rescued at Katmai beach by the schooner Polar Bear.

The boat sighted the party's smoke signals three days ago and returned them to Chignik, Alaska, Tuesday night.

Father Hubbard said they successfully had explored the great peak of Mt. Katmai, the first time it had been conquered in winter or spring, and had confirmed important new scientific data through the use of motion picture films.

They also penetrated the "Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes." Disaster overtook them in descending the icy walls of Katmai. Crossing the Katmai river, a sudden break-up of ice plunged the explorers into the turbulent stream.

They fought their way ashore but lost nearly all their equipment. Only water tight packets of film were salvaged.

They reached Katmai beach, scene of their rescue, suffering from hunger and exposure. The boat they had chartered was due April 12, but never arrived.

Three days ago, the Polar Bear hovered in view and picked up the fast weakening trio.

Held for Baby's Death

Josephine Tozier

MURDER charges are faced today by a couple married ten days ago as a result of the death of a baby born last week. Body of the baby was found Thursday in an ash can.

The couple, Joseph Tozier, 28, and Josephine Duckwall Tozier, 25, have declared, according to detectives, "We didn't want it," in statements regarding death of the infant.

Arraignment of the couple has been set for noon Thursday by Municipal Judge Clifton R. Cameron.

Dr. John E. Wyttenbach, deputy coroner, asserts the baby was alive when born, and that death was due to strangulation. The mother was without medical attention at the birth, and immediately after her arrest was sent to city hospital by police.

Tozier is a graduate of the University of Illinois. Mrs. Tozier was graduated from De Pauw university in 1928. She was a

1,000 ACRES SET ASIDE AS FARM FOR JOBLESS

International Harvester Donates Ground for Its Idle Workers.

CHICAGO, April 20.—Tractors chugged over a 1,000-acre farm today breaking the land which will mean an ample supply of fresh garden foods and occupation for 4,500 men, fretful under their enforced layoff from the great International Harvester Co. works here.

Watching the tractors drag plows through the city land were members of the army of "rookie" farmers, which the concern hopes to create among its idle former employees as a contribution toward unemployment relief.

For each of these men, the company has set off a quarter acre plot on which he can grow vegetables to fill a larger, grown lean with the stoppage of pay roll checks.

At the company's works at Ft. Wayne, Ind.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Canton, Ill.; and Auburn, N. Y., similar plans are under way.

Tools will be given those who can not buy their own. The men, many with little more experience in gardening than a few amateurish efforts born of the average city dweller's spring longing for a few flowers in the backyard, will be given expert instruction in how to raise successful crops.

A simple program of potatoes, carrots, turnips and parsnips is being recommended by the company advisors.

Buses will be provided to transport the workers to and from their miniature farms.

So that the normal market for produce will not be affected, each man is prohibited from selling his crop. Workers' wives will be instructed in how to can and preserve any surplus.

COLLEGE HEADS SPLIT ON HOME TEACHING PLEA

Four of Eight Back Father's Fight on Compulsory Education Law.

PHILADELPHIA, April 20.—Mrs. Arthur J. Smart of Vineland, N. J., should be permitted to teach her own three children as her husband has pleaded in a letter to President Herbert Hoover, according to four of eight college presidents questioned here.

The other four were just as decidedly opposed to Smart's theory, which disputed the legality of compulsory educational laws prevalent in the United States.

Smart's views, incidentally, agree with those of several religious sects in this country opposed to compulsory education.

The eight college presidents interviewed attended the same dinner here Tuesday night.

Assuming that Mrs. Smart is a competent teacher, Dr. William W. Comfort, president of Haverford college, Dr. Karl T. Vaughn, president of Dickinson college, Dr. William Mather, Lewis, president of Lafayette college, and Dr. C. A. Herlick, president of Girard college, defended Smart's stand. Dr. Charles M. Beury, president of Temple university; Dr. Homer Prainy, president of Bucknell college; Dr. Ralph D. Hetzel, president of Penn State college, and Dr. Ethelbert D. Waffield, president of Wilson college, strongly defended the compulsory school law.

Smart's letter to Hoover followed a threat on the part of school authorities of Vineland to enforce the school law against him, if he did not send his two older children, Arthur, 9, and Elizabeth, 7, to Vineland public school immediately. Dr. Smart also is the father of two children younger than these.

Smart explained his position as follows: "My wife is a better teacher than any they have in the schools, and she doesn't teach them a lot of nonsense, either."
