WHAT'S IN FASHION?

Sun Tan Brings Makeup Problem

Directed by AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, May 4.—Of course it's early to be talking of sun-tan. But not too soon to be thinking—"to be or not to be." Fashion says certainly to be. And is backed by hundreds of fashionable women who wintered where it's always summer, and sun-tan easy to get. Be as sun-tanned as is becoming, so they'll tell you. (And it is becoming. That's why it's fashionable.)

But—take it easy. Sun-tan won't harm your skin. Sun-burn will. And nobody wants to go about with a face that looks like an old leather shoe. Slow, but sure, does the trick most smartly.

Change Your Powder

Just a few hints about makeup when you begin to collect this tan. As you will be doing in a few weeks from now.

Number one is, of course, to change your powder. Darken it as your skin darkens. Because fashionable faces are powder of the same tone as the skin. Look natural. That's the modern idea.

And did you know that a too light powder may actually make your nose look larger if it happens to be already large? Especially in summer when it gets shiny quicker.

Change Your Rouge

Hint No. 2. Usually a more orange shade of rouge will be more becoming when the face is tanned. It harmonizes with the brown tone of the skin better than rouge with bluish cast.

Hint 3. Don't forget those cleansing and nourishing creams. There's more dust in summer and heat dries the skin. If it's to be kept young, it must be kept clean and its oils replenished.

Whether or not you definitely go in for sun-tan, there are make-up ideas that will improve the summer complexion. If you'd like to know what these are, send the coupon.

SWIM SUIT PARADE BLOCKS TRAFFIC

By United Press
PARIS, May 4.—A score of shapely mannequins stepped into the busy streets near the Place Vendome today to exhibit the latest 1932 bathing suits in the city's first open-air fashion parade.

Some fashion critics said the girls might as well have worn nothing as the scanty models on display.

The general trend of the suits to be worn at the fashionable beaches this summer is toward economy in material, slender silken thread holds together a filmy wisp of bodice in the upper part of the suit, which is entirely separated from the lower section. A saucy, abbreviated pair of trunks completes the costume.

Traffic was interrupted only momentarily before the models were hurried back into the courtyard of the enterprising fashion house which sent them out.

Arrange Sorority Party

Alpha chapter, Omega Phi Tau sorority, will meet tonight in Room 110 at the Chamber of Commerce. Plans will be completed for a Mother's day party.

P. T. A. Plans Party
Parent-Teacher Association of Christian park school 82, will have a bridge and euchre party at 2 Friday afternoon in the Christian park community house.

Club to Hear Kepner
Edward F. Kepner will speak on "Baseball Through the Ages," before members of the Croesus Club at 12 Thursday in the Washington.

Omega Chis to Meet

Miss Helen Naywiker will entertain the Omega Chi sorority at her home tonight. Plans for Founders' day will be discussed.

Phi Rho Tau to Meet

Phi Rho Tau will meet tonight in the Washington.

Argentine Cloth Curtains

Looking for something different for your windows? Something that will be cool-looking and inexpensive, too? Argentine cloth (that transparent material some garment bags are made of) is just the thing. It comes in colors and has a refreshing crispness.

Program Given for Inter Alia Club Members

Mrs. Frank H. Langenkamp, 3828 Washington boulevard, was hostess this afternoon for the Inter Alia Club's guest meeting. Ninety members and guests were entertained.

A musical program was presented by Mrs. Christine Maguire, pianist; Miss Ruth Hutchins, violinist; and Pasquale Montani, harpist.

Mrs. Kathryn Turney Garten reviewed the book, "The Lady of God's," which was followed by a style show given by Raymond Cooper. Mrs. Douglas White, pianist, played during the show.

Following the program tea was served. The tea table was centered with a plateau of spring flowers, and lighted with orchid tapers in silver holders. Baskets of spring flowers were arranged about the table.

The committee in charge of arrangements included Mesdames Roger Williams, Robert Stearns, Marguerite Hansen, George Q. Bruce and Charles H. Fenner.

NAUTICAL DESIGNS GAIN POPULARITY

Maybe it's the wanderlust that's getting folks. Anyhow, nautical designs are finding their way into the home.

Fabrics for slip covers, draperies and pillows; bath towels, serving trays, lamp shades and many other home items have been noted lately bearing decorations of anchors, steering wheels, fish and ships and other symbols of the sea. Some lamp shades are made of sail cloth.

COLOR REPETITION IS SMART TOUCH

Repeating one of the colors in the costume in the crown of the hat is a new smart trick. Usually this crown is of fabric or crocheted and the accent color in the dress . . . that is not the main color, but the secondary color used for a bodice top or a scarf . . . is the one used in the hat crown.

Thus a black-brimmed hat may have a red or vivid blue crown. Or a blue straw brim may have a white or red crown, etc.

Nursery Group to Meet

Board of managers of the Indianapolis Day Nursery will hold its monthly meeting at 10 Thursday morning at the Day Nursery headquarters, 542 Lockerbie street. Mrs. R. A. Dennis will preside.

Miss Rogers Hostess

Delegates Are Named to Meeting

Indianapolis branch of the Needlework Guild of America will be represented at the forty-seventh annual meeting of the national organization at Grove Park Inn, Asheville, N. C., this week by Mrs. Cecil Calvert, secretary, and official delegate, Mrs. Peter C. Kelly, and Miss Elizabeth Betermann, junior director. Mrs. Oscar L. Pond also will attend, representing the state organization. The meeting opens Thursday.

Mrs. Thomas J. Preston Jr., Princeton, N. J., national president, will preside. She is the widow of former President Grover Cleveland.

The opening session Thursday will be featured by greetings from Max O. Gardner, Governor of North Carolina, and an address of welcome by Mrs. Burnham S. Colburn, president of the Biltmore branch.

Miss Adele Ruffin, director of the division of Negro workers, will speak in tribute to the late Mrs. John Wood Stewart, who founded the Needlework Guild in 1885.

Friday the delegates will motor to the top of Mt. Pisgah, where luncheon will be served at Mt. Pisgah Inn.

The program for Saturday includes a junior pageant to be given in the morning under the direction of Miss Maria Halsey Stryker, national director of junior work; and in the afternoon a trip through the Biltmore estate and Biltmore house, the property of the late George Vanderbilt. A tea at the Biltmore Forest Country Club will complete the program.

There are 721 branches of the guild in the United States and Canada, and several hundred representatives are expected at the convention.

The guild collects garments and distributes them among the needy and the sick. Last year more than 1,900,000 garments were distributed. New branches constantly are being organized, including one during the last year in Panama.

MANNERS AND MORALS BY JANE JORDAN

BRING your problems to Jane Jordan, who will help you see the truth about your situation. Letters will be answered in this column.

Dear Jane Jordan—I am 24 years old. All your advice, marriage and have a child 6 years old. It doesn't seem to me that I am getting any more out of my husband's first friends. It seems they fall for me the first time they see me. And they don't stop at that. They say they just want to be near me as much as they can.

My husband doesn't know anything about this and I'm afraid to tell him. Don't think these men mean a thing to me, for they don't. How can I stop them? Should I starve him and never see any place with my husband? Please advise me.

GOOD WIFE AND MOTHER.
Dear Good Wife and Mother—It is impossible for a woman not to be flattered by the attentions of men, no matter how much she may disapprove of herself morally for her weakness. If you were not secretly pleased by the appeal you have for the opposite sex, your anger and repulsion would make itself felt in such a way that your husband's friends would not dare to make approaches.

Perhaps you are not consciously aware of the fact that you encourage them. An attractive woman can not help exploiting her charm. She takes the initiative by a glance of the eye, by an apparently unconscious gesture, or by her general bearing. Few men approach a married woman unless something has made them suspect that their advances will not be unwelcome.

Cultivate a little more reserve in your manner, a little less freedom in your speech, a little more dignity in your bearing, and men will respect you more for it. Use your ability to charm in collecting a cordial group of friends around yourself and your husband. But draw a firm line in your own mind and no one will try to overstep it.

Dear Jane Jordan—I read in your column about a couple who want to adopt a baby. I am wondering whether they'd like to give a grown-up girl a home. Hear my case. I am 19 and a junior at Butler college on a scholarship. I am preparing to teach English at high school. The atmosphere in my home is not conducive to study. The folks are constantly with my getting a higher education.

I wouldn't want any financial assistance from the people I would like to place to stay. I work on Saturday, so I have my own carfare. I could help with the housework and could be a pleasant surprise to the people. If they're elderly, I could read to them. If they're young, I could help with the housework. Of course I would let them make decisions for me and I'd be a real daughter to them. I'd be glad to attend any church they go to.

I'm really in need of a home. My parents are old and my mother is getting old. I'm always telling me to get out. But I can't leave my mother. I think that maybe the couple would be interested in taking a big girl instead of a little one? I would like to justify their doing so.

Dear College Girl—The couple who want a baby live out of town and would not help you while you are living in Indianapolis. However, I am publishing your appealing letter.
