

HOOVER ADOPTS 'BIG STICK' TO PUSH CONGRESS

Appears Before Senate in New Role; Lacks Teddy's Fire.

By RAYMOND CLAPPER
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 2. — After more than three years in the White House, President Hoover finally picked up the "big stick" of one of his famous predecessors, Theodore Roosevelt.

His personal appearance before the senate was the climax of a recent growing aggressiveness. It was in complete contrast with his attitude during the enactment of the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill, when senators were unable to find out what he wanted before they passed the bill.

It was Mr. Hoover's theory then that the President was not supposed to influence congress, but, instead, was ordained by the Constitution to sit passively in the back ground, and then accept or reject whatever legislation congress decided to send him.

Appeal for Aggressiveness
Now on the eve of the presidential campaign, under the prodding of numerous advisors, he suddenly has thrown aside that theory, and lashed out to try to drive a disorganized and indecisive congress in the direction he wants it to go.

Many times previously, friends had told him he "ought to be a Roosevelt" and go after congress. "But I'm not like Roosevelt," was his answer, "I can't pretend to be something I am not," Hoover replied in substance.

But in the last few weeks, as congress floundered deeper in the complicated tax legislation, friends increased their pressure on him. Finally, he was persuaded to issue one or two strong utterances.

They were not strong enough and a group of newspaper editors recently appealed to him to be still more aggressive.

So he broke his custom of sending written messages to congress, and appeared in person.

Air of Reluctance

There was, however, the air of a reluctant appearance in his manner. He spoke in a low tone, barely audible voice. There was none of Roosevelt's sharp pounding of desks, the brandishing of manuscript, the ironic falsetto, the biting off of short, hard words.

Neither was there in Mr. Hoover any of the authoritative, commanding, facile eloquence, which Wilson summoned in critical situations.

Though Mr. Hoover was unable to throw himself with spectacular personal force into the role he had suddenly chosen, "the very fact of his appearance before the senate registered an important decision on his part—an attempt to assume an aggressive rather than a passive part in shaping legislation at this crisis."

What political effect this sudden energizing will have in the campaign just opening will be a matter of widespread speculation. Many Republicans feel that assertion of aggressive White House leadership will help them.

Wants Uncertainty Ended

It is probable, however, that Hoover viewed the situation in a broader light, for a heavy foreign run on American gold, the fall of the conciliatory Bruening government in Germany, and the uncertainty over the American tax program had created a world-wide state of apprehension somewhat resembling that which spread almost a year ago when the collapse of the Austrian Central bank prompted Mr. Hoover to propose a war-debt and reparations moratorium.

The main need, in his mind, was not so much which form of tax is adopted, but the necessity of immediate decision to end the uncertainty.

It was uncertainty which caused Europeans, who well remember the disastrous effects of their own inflation and failure to balance budgets, to be more apprehensive of the stability of the American dollar than conditions justify.

CONTRACT BRIDGE as the EXPERTS PLAY IT

Famous Hands in Championship Bridge History—No. 10

BY W. E. MCKENNEY
Secretary, American Bridge League
RETURNING east, we will stop off at Philadelphia to meet Mrs. H. L. Petersen who, with her partner, holds the women's auction partnership championship. Mrs. Petersen has made a fine record as a tournament player and well has earned the right to qualify as one of the country's leading bridge players.

It is quite unusual to find a squeeze play developing in a hand which contains no suit longer than four cards. However, Mrs. Petersen discovered the play in the following hand which she submits:

♠ Q-9-3
♥ 9-6-2
♦ K-7-5-4
♣ A-7-5
♠ K-4	NORTH	♠ 7-6-5-2
♥ Q-J-4	WEST	♥ 7-5-3
♦ J-10	EAST	♦ 9-8
♣ 3-2	SOUTH	♣ J-10
♠ 9-8-3		♣ 4-2
♠ A-J-10-8
♥ A-K-8
♦ A-K-6
♣ K-Q-6

The Bidding
Mrs. Petersen sat in the South and opened the bidding with two spades. Her partner bid three spades and Mrs. Petersen bid five no trump, which her partner carried to six no trump.

The Play
West's opening lead was the queen of hearts, which Mrs. Petersen won with the ace and then played a small club, winning in dummy with the ace.

Mrs. Petersen calls attention here to the fact that when a suit is divided, four in one hand and three in the other, such as her diamond and spade suits, you will find in the majority of cases that the six outstanding cards of that suit will not be divided three-three, but will more apt to be divided four-two, and this is what she provided for in the play of the hand.

Her next play was the queen of spades from dummy, which West won with the king, returning the jack of hearts, Mrs. Petersen winning with the king.

She now led three rounds of spades, discarding a heart from dummy, West discarded a club and a heart. Mrs. Petersen then cashed her king of clubs and then led the queen of clubs and West was helpless.

If he discarded the ten of hearts, Mrs. Petersen's eight will win a trick, while if a diamond was discarded, then Mrs. Petersen will win four diamond tricks.

Mrs. Petersen received top score on the board by playing the hand at no trump. Six spades or six no trump can be made, but both require exactly the same squeeze play. Six lucky shoppers will win cash every single day during the TIMES SALES SLIP Contest.

SOCIALISTS OF WISCONSIN TAKE LEAD IN PARTY

Movement Strength There Greater Than in Any Other State.

This is one of a series of stories on the nationally important Wisconsin political scene.

BY WILLARD SMITH
United Press Staff Correspondent

MADISON, Wis., June 2. — Wisconsin has the strongest Socialist movement in the union, and more Socialist lawmakers than any other state.

The names of the late Congressman Victor L. Berger and Mayor Daniel Webster Hoan of Milwaukee. Socialists, have vied with those of two generations of La Follettes in attracting attention to the political fortunes of the state.

Wisconsin passed the first workmen's compensation, old-age pension and unemployment insurance laws. All three originated with the Socialists.

In six elections, one a special election held after he was ousted from the house in 1918 for his utterance against war.

Hoan, a law school graduate who worked his way through college by cooking in restaurants, has attracted national attention during his sixteen years in office, by his efficient, nonpolitical police department and his city's solid financial position.

Four other Wisconsin cities followed Milwaukee's example and elected Socialist mayors last year. Socialists have had as high as sixteen of the 100 Wisconsin assemblymen and four of the thirty-three state senators.

Paul Gebauer, a member of the Fiction club, was given the $77 scholarship from the Shortridge Fiction Club Alumni Association, the Shortridge scholarship award and the Boyd fund.

The Mrs. Alpheus C. Snow award went to Charles Feibleman, president of the senior class and leader of the honor roll.

Scholarships from outside schools to Shortridge pupils will be announced later.

Makes Nest in Fire Whistle

NUTLEY, N. J., June 2.—The town fire whistle has sounded of late like it had a frog in the windpipe. It wasn't a frog, fireman Arthur Stroba found, but a sparrow's nest made it that way. The whistle is as good as new today.
