It would not be amiss, in reviewing the Republican state convention, to toss a couple of bouquets in the direction of Harry Fenton, secretary of the Republican state committee, and its attaché, Michael Hanrahan, for the efficient manner in which a most difficult task was handled by them.

(Oh, yes, this column will toss a flower instead of a brickbat, whenever it is deserved.)

Anyhow, to get back to our bidding, you no doubt remember that the convention was scheduled for Tomlinson hall. The first session was held there Wednesday morning and by noon the party managers had decided that, with a record-breaking crowd of more than 10,000 expected, the entire show should be moved to Cadle tabernacle for Thursday's balloting.

That was at noon Wednesday. By 6 p. m., all decorations were up, district and county sections were marked off and placarded, and all necessary arrangements completed, including erection of a large press stand and a section for tabulating machines.

Credit for the task must go to Fenton and Hanrahan. It was the former who arranged the program, got up the list of delegates, and attended to a thousand and one details which go into the making of a convention, and it was the latter who ably seconded Fenton in his work.

While on the subject, it only would be slighting the secretary to fail to add that Fenton is considered by all observers to be the most astute of the politicians in all organizations, and that he brought to his post as secretary years of training as a news and political reporter both here and in Washington. Hanrahan is hailed by the boys as the "fox" for his ability to gauge public reaction to political moves.

Through three changes of state committee administrations, the pair has kept the organization functioning smoothly, without the slightest hitch.

While discussing Fenton's work, it will be recalled by all present at the convention that he constantly was at Chairman Ivan Morgan's elbow, guiding him through the maze of parliamentary procedure during the vote on the repeal plank and aided every person called to substitute at the gavel.

The Republican organization in Indiana would be sorely hurt and greatly damaged if Fenton were not present to do all the necessary work. More power to him.

FLIER IS WEAK AFTER 8 DAYS ADRIFT IN SEA

Hausner Is Unable to Give Coherent Account of His Experiences.

BY CAPTAIN WILSON.
Master, S. S. Circe Shell

(Copyright, 1932, by United Press)
ABOARD S. S. CIRCE SHELL (off Azores Islands en route to New Orleans), June 13.—Stanislaus Felix Hausner was making slow, but favorable progress aboard my ship today after drifting at sea for a week in his wrecked monoplane, forced down on a projected New York-Warsaw flight.

Hausner still was in a very weak condition, unable to give a coherent account of his experiences. He had scant rations during the week from June 3 until he was picked up by Circe Shell Saturday. Fortunately, the sea had been calm.

He has not been able to tell much about his flight, but asked me to express his thanks for radio messages sent to him and to send his love to his family. Please inform Mrs. Hausner that her husband is exhausted, but unharmed.

We were forced to abandon Hausner's plane, a red Bellanca about 500 miles off the Portuguese coast. Hausner made a forced landing at 9 a. m. June 3. When the Circe Shell sighted him it was dark. We were unable to salvage his plane. He is proceeding with our ship to New Orleans, where we are due to arrive June 27.

The monoplane last was sighted drifting southeastward at about one knot. Hausner asked that any passing vessel try to salvage it as he believes it is in fairly good condition.

The calm sea and fine weather, prevailing all the time he was adrift, probably prevented the plane from going to pieces.

Speech Beats Diet Reducing, Oxnam Proves

Dr. Oxnam

By Times Special
GREENCASTLE, Ind., June 13.—Dr. G. Bromley Oxnam, president of De Pauw university, has found an antidote for "laugh and grow fat." It is "talk and get thin."

As a test to see if public speaking is mental or physical exercise, Dr. Oxnam weighed himself carefully before delivering the baccalaureate address before De Pauw university's graduating class, and then weighed himself again immediately following his speech. He found that he had lost four pounds during the address.

"If it is true," he added, "that women are the loquacious sex, then why should any woman need to diet to get thin?"
