

DEMOCRATS ARE CLAMORING FOR REPEAL PLANK

State Headquarters Deluged With Demands for Bold Wet Platform.

"Repeal the eighteenth amendment."

This short and concise sentence may constitute the substance of the stand on liquor to be taken by the Indiana Democratic party at its convention here next week.

Today the state headquarters in the Claypool hotel was deluged with letters and telegrams urging that this be done.

"Leave puseyfooting, referendum, resubmission and other such camouflage to the G. O. P." was the burden of the text of these missives.

Party chieftains, already assembling from throughout the state, seem to agree with them.

"The Democrats never had the dry vote anyway," one of them declared. "So why bother trying to please the drys at a time when the whole country, including Indiana, is coming around to the wet viewpoint."

Several Are Cautious

There still is some talk about putting in a referendum plank like that adopted by the Hoosier Republicans and which turned the state insurgent at the G. O. P. convention for the first time since the Bull Moose bolted.

Thus, the cautious ones declare, would take the matter out of partisan politics in the state where they declare the majority of wet drys still is doubtful.

But the Hooverized plank adopted by the Republicans nationally has added impetus toward a straightforward wet stand for the Democrats, it was declared.

Announcement of another candidate for attorney-general was made today, bringing the field to three. The latest to announce is James J. Moran, Portland. Other attorneys announced previously are John Riddle, Terre Haute, and Phillip Lutz Jr., Bonville.

Peters to Meet Taggart

R. Earl Peters, state chairman, is expected to discuss the makeup of the twelve delegates at large to the national convention with Thomas Taggart of French Lick, national committeeman for Indiana who is due at headquarters Friday.

The platform advisory committee is to meet Sunday and the state committee will consider their tentative platform draft Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. John W. Kern and Mrs. Samuel M. Ralston, widows of former United States senators, and Perry McCarr, West Baden, are among those mentioned for places as delegates at large.

ANCIENT CADILLAC SNORTS AT TIME

Harry Burke, president of Burke Cadillac Company, Indianapolis, at the steering handle (the car doesn't possess a wheel) of the Cadillac built in 1902.

Thirty years old "and still going strong," one of the earliest automobiles ever turned out in Detroit was on its way today, chugging and creaking on Indianapolis streets, as its owners, Frank Wright of Murfreesboro, Tenn., and Norman Tebo of Tacoma, Wash., were "seeing the sights."

The partners, on the road since March, just completed a trip from Tacoma to Detroit and are on their return trip to Reno. They stopped long enough to greet Harry Burke, president of Burke Cadillac Company.

Their car is a one-cylinder chain drive, side cranking model, with the motor number 1633. It was built by the Cadillac company in 1902 and is one of America's earliest models.

The car came into the possession of Wright's father fifteen years ago, in exchange for a bushel of millet seed. It was used for several years by Frank Wright, who then drove it to the banks of a nearby creek one mile away. Flood waters ate away the creek bank, and when the deluge had subsided it was found that the car had become submerged in the channel of the new creek. It remained there for eight years.

"I pulled it out with a truck one day, wondering if it could be fixed up," Wright said today. "I soaked the parts in oil for six months and put the car together again. It's been running ever since."

Tebo and Wright are traveling from city to city, using the car for stunt and advertising purposes. "Wright is the mechanic," Tebo remarked. "When anything goes wrong, Frank gets out, tinkers awhile, and pretty soon the car starts up and chugs away, just like it did thirty years ago."

They are bound for the west with the slogan, "Reno or Bust," painted on the front dash, which originally came from a wagon carriage. They intend seeing the Battling Levinsky-Maxie Baer fight, which Jack Dempsey is promoting in Reno on July 4.

The only other appropriation bill so far to escape the 10 per cent cut was that for the war department, which was hurried through last week.

Senator Kenneth McKellar (Dem., Tenn.) intends to move that the navy bill be cut 10 per cent under the house figure, or $32,000,000, instead of $8,000,000, but he probably will be defeated, as he was on a

SPEED UP NAVY BILL ACTION TO FORESTALL CUT

Republican Senators Fear Final Attempt to Slash Fund.

By Scripps-Howard Newspaper Alliance
WASHINGTON, June 16.—Republican leaders today hurried the navy appropriation bill toward adoption before a final attempt is made to find savings in the federal budget of between $150,000,000 and $200,000,000.

The independent offices appropriation bill had been slated for consideration following the farm relief bill, but after President Hoover told Republican senators and house members last week-end that new cuts must be made, the plans were changed.

Big navy senators were assisted in their effort to push the navy bill ahead by the naval subcommittee, because of their anxiety to kill the Glass banking bill, which includes among its provisions authority for chain and branch banks.

The navy bill, cut only 4 per cent by the house under the budget estimates, has been cut only 2.4 per cent by the senate, an amount far under the 10 per cent reduction imposed on appropriation bills for the other departments.

He's Champion

Billy Dyer

Billy Dyer, marble champion of the Riverside section for two consecutive years, will be among the field of twenty-one sectional champs who will battle for the city title in the final games at Willard park Friday afternoon at 1:30. Besides being named "mobs" champ of the city, the Indianapolis winner will be sent to Ocean City, N. J. the latter part of the month to compete in the national play, with all expenses defrayed by The Indianapolis Times.

However the senate liberals supported Chairman Hale (Rep., Me.) of the naval subcommittee, because of their anxiety to kill the Glass banking bill, which includes among its provisions authority for chain and branch banks.

WITNESSES AID PAIR IN 'LOVE PIRACY' TRIAL

Contend Niehaus Never Was Seen at Detention Home.

Defense witnesses testifying today in superior court in the alienation of affections suit of Mrs. Lora L. Niehaus against Mrs. Anna E. Pickard, juvenile detention home superintendent, said they had never seen the plaintiff's husband, George J. Niehaus, at the institution. Mrs. Niehaus is seeking $10,000 damages on an allegation that love of Niehaus was stolen from her by Mrs. Pickard.

George Townsend, captain at fire department headquarters, asserted that Mrs. Niehaus talked to him there in regard to the alleged love affair and became so obstreperous that he ordered her to leave.

Fire Chief Harry E. Voshell testified at a conference of principals in the triangle, held in his office, Mrs. Niehaus failed to substantiate her charges against Mrs. Pickard.

Harry G. Davis, a fire inspector, testified that Mrs. Niehaus and her husband "did not get along very well."
