

NEAL M'INTYRE RETAINS HOOSIER OPEN LINKS LAURELS

City Pro Noses Out Stonehouse, Old Rival

Rain Handicaps Field on Final Round of Play; Herman Layer Drops to Tie for Third After Sensational Early Rounds.

BY DICK MILLER
Times Staff Correspondent

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., June 16.—Neal McIntyre, the husky Indianapolis pro, still is Indiana's best golfer, and Ralph Stonehouse, his city rival, still is the second best.

The long-driving Highland Country Club linksman won his fourth Hoosier open crown and his second in a row by finishing the seventy-two holes of play in the 1932 event here Wednesday with a dandy 288.

And Stonehouse, who is pro at Pleasant Run, finished in the runner-up position for the fourth consecutive year, one stroke behind his old rival. A brilliant 72 over the rain-soaked Allandale course Wednesday put Stonehouse near the top after he had trailed in the early rounds.

Last year, Stonehouse forced McIntyre to go fifty-four holes in a playoff after the regular seventy-two holes of play before dropping to second place.

For a time Wednesday, Stonehouse appeared to have carried the Highland ace into another playoff.

Coming to the final green, McIntyre was told he needed a birdie

4 to beat Stonehouse and a par 5 to tie him. He was on the green in three and missed a long put for the 4. He got down in five. Then a recheck showed he had nosed out Stonehouse despite the 75 he required on the final round, 289 to 290.

After touring the rain-soaked course in a downpour in 72, Stonehouse waited while McIntyre finished. Neal required a 28 going out and was over par on the tenth and thirteenth holes. He finished in par figures to win.

Herman Layer of Aurora, sensation of the early rounds, was cut down by the rain and required an 80 on the afternoon round after sharing the lead with McIntyre at the 34-hole mark, finishing in a tie with Wally Nelson of Bloomington for third place with 294.

Bill Heinlein of Indianapolis, state amateur champion, topped the simon pure field with a 297.

SCHAFF, POREDA TANGLE

By United Press

WEST NEW YORK, N. J., June 16.—Twelve thousand boxing fans are expected to swarm into the ball park here tonight to witness the ten-rounder between Ernie Schaff, Boston heavyweight, and Stanley

Poreda of Jersey City.

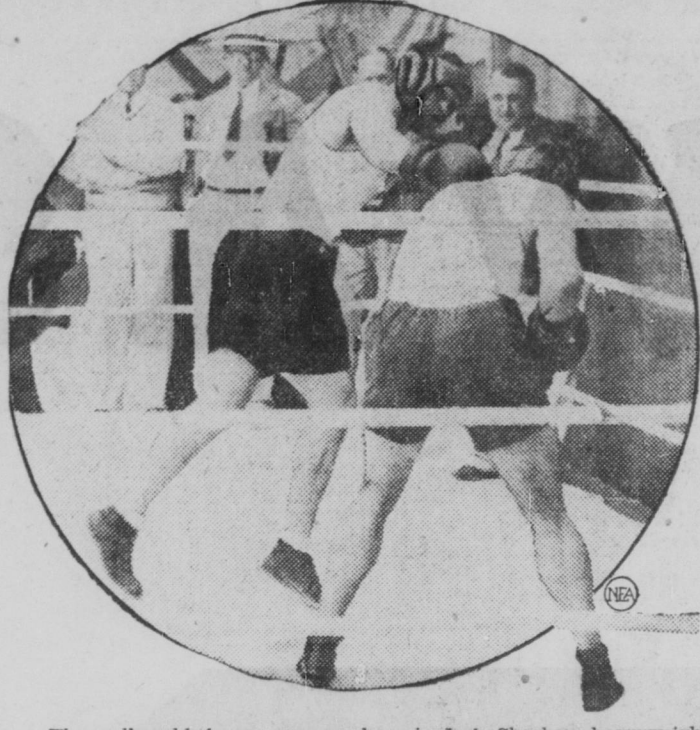

The Bostonian, protege of Jack Sharkey, has not lost a fight in a year and a half. Poreda, likewise, has hung up quite a record, including victories over Al Friedman and Babe Hunt, both of whom defeated Schaff some time ago.

Off Comes the Paunch

The well-padded man you see here is Jack Sharkey, heavyweight title contender, knocking off the pounds at Gus Wilson's training camp in preparation for next Tuesday's championship battle with Max Schmeling.

Sharkey Cuts Down to 201 for Title Battle

BY STUART CAMERON
United Press Sports Editor

ORANBURG, N. Y., June 16.—Jack Sharkey, trained down to a compact 201 pounds, today spent a day of serious loafing, talking about his future, and denying he will quit the ring.

"Win, lose or draw against Max Schmeling," he said, "I am not quitting the ring. I know everybody, almost, thinks I will do a Tunney if I win. I won't. Why should I?"

"I've been after this title for eight years. Sure, I want it now for the glory more than the money. But the money I can earn from even a title defense is just plain too much to be kissed off with a polite bow to the other heavyweights. I'm not saying I never will quit as an undefeated champion. But I sure am going to get in that one title defense and maybe a lot of them."

"First, though, I'm planning a trip around the world with my wife, and then I'll think about boxing again. All of this goes on the idea I'm going to beat Max, and I think I will. If I lose I don't know what I will do. But I have no plans for quitting."

Sharkey has lost the fat around his middle. He was overweight during the winter. There was an indication of a paunch, and a pair of fat jowls. Sharkey dropped off some of this excess poundage during the past fortnight. Most of it came off Wednesday when a strenuous session in the ring brought him from 206½ to 201½.

Sharkey, now five days away from his second bout with Schmeling, said he intended to box each day, except today. He even intends to go through the motions, at least, on Monday, the day before the fight. The perennial title aspirant insists he has no plan of attack, that he has not predicted the outcome other than to say he thinks he will win, and, particularly, that he has not forecast a knockout for either himself or Schmeling.

He has an especial aversion for the phrase "plan of attack" and the thing it implies. "A real bust in the snoot," he observes, "can cancel any plan of attack."
