

City Club's Sport Fans Celebrate

Members of the Meridian Hills Country Club celebrated the club's seventh anniversary Saturday by matching their skill at various sports.

The women competed in a putting contest, which was won by Mrs. Don Jenkins. Miss Dorothy Ellis was second, and Mrs. Sam Hook, third. Mrs. Arthur E. Krick and Mrs. C. B. Durham were in charge of the contest.

The younger set demonstrated what they have been learning from the club swimming instructor, William Weitz. The swimming events winners were:

25-Yards free style (boys under 11), Jack Melhaus; (girls under 11), Shirley Landers; (girls 11 to 15), Dorothy Durham; 50-yard free style (boys 11 to 15), Ned Hamer; (boys above 15), Ronald Hamer; (girls above 15), Dorothy Durham; 25-yard back stroke (boys 11 to 15), Ned Hamer; (girls 11 to 15), Martha Pearson; 50-yard back stroke (boys above 15), Ronald Hamer; 25-yard breast stroke (boys 11 to 15), Jack Ochiltree; 25-yard back stroke (girls above 15), Jane Cooling.

The Polar Bears defeated the Seals in a water polo match, 3 to 0. The winning team was composed of Bud Underwood, Ronald Hamer, Jean and Jack Ochiltree, Robert Melhaus and Charles Collins.

Mrs. A. D. Lange was in charge of the swimming events, assisted by Mesdames Theodore E. Root, James L. Murray and Messrs. J. E. Thompson, Carl T. Lieber and H. S. Morse.

Other competitive games were bridge and the men's "razzberry" golf tournament.

There's Right and Wrong in Sports Garb

There is a ritual of dress for specific sports that no whole-hearted player cares to overlook.

Embroidered mull on the golf course would be as much of a boner as high heels, from the sophisticated point of view, and slacks and a sweat shirt would stand out like hoop skirts on the correct tennis court.

One thing all sports clothes have in common. They permit the wearer to move easily, even violently, without rending seams and falling over length of dangling flimsy.

Except for slacks and shorts, belted at the waist over shirts that poke down generously around the hips, sport clothes are loose and slippery at the waistline so that they will fall back into place after lusty driving or smashing serves.

The light weight, but sturdy shoes that have come to the sports world in this year's models are a latter day boon.

If a sole is flexible and thick, what good does a breathless upper of lined, heavy leather do her laboring feet?

The much perforated, unlined, cut out, glove-fitting leathers that fashion gilles, slippers, and even brogue models nowadays ought to add miles of tramping strength to any woman's performance.

WHAT'S IN FASHION—

Tailored Evening Frocks
Directed by AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, July 18.—Never can tell what the youngsters will do next. Just as you get it fixed in your mind, for instance, that you're going to see them flutter through all the summer evenings in ruffly feminine cotton, who do they do?

Turn right around—as they have this summer—and get themselves some trimly tailored evening dresses. Simple, sophisticated, different, suiting them to a T. And everybody likes it.

Of course the skirts of these tailored evening frocks are long and fairly full. But without ruffles or flares. Cut in unusual sections fitted together so flatly that you'd think they were starting to "knit" that way.

Necklines Are Higher

When you see the dresses from the front, you think, "What conservative necklines!" Rather high, often just showing the hollows of sun-tanned throats. And sometimes with new square necks.

If there's any trimming, it's usually in broad bands across the shoulders.

But when they whirl about and dance away, you see that these young fashions contradict themselves, true to form. For the backs are cut very low.

After the dance is over, you'll notice little jackets pulled over these tailored evening dresses. Short, as a rule, and of the same material as the dress.

Venture Below Waist

Some of the newest of these frocks, however, venture below the waist, as you'll see in the sketch. This is a frock of soft pink semi-sheer crepe, making Ann Harding, stage and screen star, look more blond than ever. The longer jacket is of a deep wine-colored velvet—the new, dull surfaced velvet.

Helen Barclay, movie actress and wife of McClelland Barclay whose paintings you have often admired, wears a tailored evening frock of white pique.

Even the belt is a straight, flat buckled type such as you might see on a street dress. Bands of ragged pique flowers over the shoulders are the only trimming on this flat-tering frock.

Thin Woollens to Be Used

Piques, eyelet batiste, corded cottons, the semi-sheer and chalk crepes are often used for these evening frocks, though Chanel makes them in heavy silk sheers. And as fall comes, many women will wear them in thin woollens, too.

White, which has such a corner on fashions for summer, is used often, although many smart women like to make evening affairs more colorful by wearing those cool-looking ice-pastels and some of the deeper pastels.

Watch for these tailored evening fashions at dances and summer soirees. See if you don't agree that once again the young folks have picked a winner!

Your Child Country Is the Place for Raising Healthy Children

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

If a child is taught never to put his hands to his face—let me accent this, by the way, very strongly—I think that mothers need not be afraid of a little dirt.

There stays in my mind the picture of a family I saw in the south. The father had a mule, plowing. The mother was carrying a bundle of sticks across the field toward the little cabin—for firewood, I suppose.

And four little children, all under 5 or 6, were sitting right out in the soft loam playing.

They had nothing on, I am sure, but the merest shells of clothes, certainly no shoes or stockings. The sun was out hot and strong, their faces were dirty, and they were all laughing.

Miss Shewmon Heads Avalon Golfing Group

Miss Ruth Shewmon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Shewmon, 4420 Broadway, is chairman of the junior women's golf players of Avalon Country Club, which organized recently for instructive play and tournaments.

Girls from 9 to 20 years old are classed in this division, which played for the first time Tuesday. The group is divided into younger and older classes, which are directed by Bruce Wilcox and Roy Smith, respectively.

Among the events being planned are a junior mothers' and daughters' tournament, a junior championship tournament and a junior guest day event.

Approximately twenty-five are taking part in the group's activities.

MISS M'CORMACK TO MARRY MINISTER

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde McCormack, 1217 Evison street, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Dorothy McCormack, to the Rev. Arthur H. Abplanalp, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Abplanalp of Osgood.

Phi Taus to Meet

Alpha chapter of Phi Tau Delta sorority will have a social meeting at 8:30 Friday at the home of Mrs. E. G. Driftmeyer, 515 North Wallace street.

Federation Will Launch Celebration

Clubs affiliated with the Indiana Federation of Clubs will observe Federation day Monday, Aug. 1, at Bethany park, as the opening event in the celebration of woman's week, Aug. 1 to 7, at the park.

The meeting will open at 9:30, with a meeting in the Cadie tabernacle, to be followed by an open forum. Mrs. Edwin N. Canine, Terre Haute, president of the state federation, will be present, and will extend greetings, as will the first vice-president, Mrs. Robert Hicks, Cambridge City.

Subjects to be discussed in the forum include: "Is a Club Part of a Movement or Solely for Entertainment?" led by Mrs. Frank Donner, Greencastle, state recording secretary; "Club Ethics," led by Mrs. Frederick Balz, Indianapolis, retiring president of the Seventh District Federation of Clubs.

Mrs. Benson to Lead

"The District President's Relation to the State Program," will be led by Mrs. A. O. Benson, president of the Fifth district; "The County President's Relation to the State Program," led by Mrs. R. L. McIntosh, president of the second district.

During the afternoon session Mrs. J. W. Moore will speak on "Legislation, a Vital Part of the State Program." Mrs. J. M. Thistlethwaite will talk on "Are There Weaknesses in the Program and Work of the Federation Departments?"

Miss Dorothy Phillips will discuss the work of the juniors; and Mrs. Nora D. Short, editor of the Indiana Clubwoman, will speak on "Printers' Ink Contributes to the Federation Program."

Mrs. Poston to Preside

Mrs. Hamet D. Hinkle, director of the Hoosier program bureau, which is partly sponsored by the federation, will speak on "Encouraging Indiana Talent." Mrs. E. C. Rumpel will conduct a drill in parliamentary law as the concluding event.

Besides the program to be presented, the day is being planned as an outing for the club women, and will serve as a link between seasons of club work.

Mrs. Edwin I. Poston, Martinsville, second vice-president of the federation, will preside.

COMFORTABLE MODEL FOR MATRON.

You have only to note its slender paneled cut skirt, bias seamed neckline and becoming V-shaped neckline to realize this.

The bodice cuts all in one until it reaches the skirt. The gored skirt, that gives one such charming height, you'll note, is slightly circular toward the hem.

Plain blue linen combines with a blue and white printed crepe linen in this slim-line model.

Style No. 371 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust. Size 38 requires 3 1/2 yards of 36-inch plain material with 1 1/2 yards of 35-inch figured material.

Price of book 10 cents.

Price of pattern 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred). Wrap coin carefully.

City Girl Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Roembke, 2150 East Garfield drive, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Irma Roembke, to Albert F. Whisenand, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Whisenand. The wedding will take place in the fall.

Hat of Lipstick Velvet

If you want to top the style with an unusually beguiling turban, this little lipstick velvet one, created by Lilly Vache, should help you. It twists its velvet ribbons over the crown in back and along the edge in front, tying an appealing bow on the right side.

MANNERS AND MORALS By JANE JORDAN

What is the most important problem in your life? Sit down now and write it in The Times!

SEVERAL young women have written me asking my opinion of firms which prohibit their employees from making social contacts with each other after business hours. Many offices have iron-bound rules that prevent any young man in their employ from paying attention to any young lady working in the same office. If they are caught "going together" the penalty is discharge.

Many young couples now are caught in an emotional jam. Whereas they have fallen madly in love, they dare not see each other after hours, and must depend upon surreptitious love making on the job. Their pay is too precious to jeopardize. They can not marry, because both need their incomes. I am asked whether I think this a fair rule and begged to offer a solution for the situation. First of all let me say that I seldom have heard of a more propitious arrangement for Cupid. There is nothing that stimulates the little blind God to ferocious activity as quickly as a little opposition.

Most girls haven't the sense to make themselves unobtainable. If their employers do it for them, it should be regarded as an unexpected stroke of luck.

True, it is an extremely stupid rule, because it creates the very condition which the firm seeks to avoid. It confirms my opinion that the smart business man nearly always is a very dumb bunny in emotional matters. Any man who believes that he successfully can legislate against love hasn't the sense he was born with.

You can't throw a group of young people together in the same environment day by day and expect that none of them will fall in love. Propriety ever has been nature's greatest ally. The very fact that people are working together for a common cause gives them a mutual interest for a starting point.

The firm's idea, of course, is to prevent the dawdling, mooning, and irritating eye-rolling that accompanies the first stages of love. The employer's theory is that people who are concentrated upon each other will not pay attention to business. Inefficiency and great loss of time will result. Very true. But does this silly prohibition prevent the situation? Not at all.

As soon as the boss' back is turned, his employees are holding hands and kissing behind his door. Since they have no other time for love making, they make the most of each opportunity, merrily wasting his time without his knowledge. His opposition only gives impetus to their fervor and the tension generated is infinitely worse for personal efficiency that love affairs with normal opportunity for expansion.

No employer has any right to dictate the policies of his force after business hours. He has no justification for governing the private lives of his employees. This form of industrial paternalism is about as unsuccessful as the old-fashioned pater familias who tries to rule the roost at home. He is cheated, fooled, and deceived on every side and corner, because he hasn't sense enough not to issue orders against the forces of nature.

How much smarter it would be for employers to make their rules against love making in the office and encourage it freely on the outside! Every firm has a right to insist upon strict attention to business during working hours. The time that is paid for belongs to the boss.

If he would say, "I don't care how much petting you do at home, but the first time I catch you flirting in the office, out you go!" he would have a better chance of being obeyed. His mistake is more or less forgivable, since it is one that the creator himself made when he placed Adam and Eve in the Garden in Eden. He told them that there was one tree in the garden whose fruit they must not eat, and everybody knows by now exactly what happened.

Although history has gone right on repeating itself for thousands of years, the leaders of the human race learn nothing.

Those perturbed young girls ask me whether they should give up their jobs so that their colleagues can call on them. Not a thousand times no! Men are plentiful, but jobs are scarce!

Besides the prohibition is a challenge to the ingenuity of lovers. Such an office is a fine hotbed for the love plant to thrive in. When the passion of the young men rises to heights sufficient to make them worthy of their salt, they will break something loose for the lady of their choice.

The canny lassie will sit tight and privately bless her idiotic employer for his unintentional aid.

Dear Sherman W.—Take your problem to a competent physician and abide by his advice.

MARTHA MILLER IS CHICAGOAN'S BRIDE

Marriage of Miss Martha Elizabeth Miller and J. Hollis Griffin of Chicago was announced Saturday by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Blaine H. Miller, at a dinner party at their home, 3433 Washington boulevard. Dr. Griffin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Patrick Griffin of Chicago, where the couple will be at home.

The wedding took place June 10 in Chicago. Mrs. Griffin is a graduate of Mrs. Dow's school in Briarcliffe, N. Y., and the American Academy of Fine Arts in Chicago. Mr. Griffin is a graduate of Yale.

Miss Harriett Owensley of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., house guest of the Millers, was an out-of-town guest.

Mrs. Poole to Attend City Parley

Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole of Massachusetts, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, will attend the Indiana federation convention in Indianapolis, Nov. 1 to 3.

Mrs. Edwin Canine, president of the Indiana federation, made the announcement following her return from the general federation biennial convention, where Mrs. Poole was elected to her present office.

Under the new administration a number of Indiana women are holding offices. Mrs. Felix T. McWhirter of Indianapolis was elected a member of the board of directors.

Mrs. E. C. Rumpel is chairman of the law observance in the department of American citizenship, and Mrs. Frank J. Sheehan, Gary, will continue as chairman of library extension work in the educational department.

In Mrs. Canine's report at the national meeting she listed the activities of the Indiana group in a paper entitled "The Test of Federation Is Its Usefulness." She pointed out the state group's various services to the communities.

Feiblemans to Entertain for Bridal Couple

Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Feibleman will entertain tonight at their home, 3262 Ruckle street, with a dinner party in honor of Miss Florence Eftymoson and Harry B. Smith of Lowell, Mass., who will be married in the fall. Members of the immediate families will attend.

Decorations of roses and delphinium will carry out the bridal colors of pink and blue. Covers will be laid for twenty-one.

Other parties this week include a dinner party Tuesday night to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Louis Wolf and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wolf at the Louis Wolf home, 5130 North Meridian street.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Eftymoson and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Eftymoson will have a dinner party Wednesday night.

Recent Bride Is Honored Guest at Bridge Fete

Mrs. Frederick B. Hoffa, 26 East Fourteenth street, entertained Saturday afternoon with a luncheon-bridge in honor of Mrs. Robert H. Brown, who was Miss Filma Wyson before her recent marriage.

Baskets of summer flowers were arranged at Mrs. Hoffa's home, and centered the table at serving time.

Other guests were:

Cesdames Arnold Moran, C. E. Cox, George Moran, Misses Mina Phares, Marybelle Dwyer, Ruth E. Shook, Dorothy Scherer, Gladys Albright, Mary F. Lipp, Catherine Smith and Gwen D. Mitchell.

TEA IS GIVEN FOR MISS EDITH HIATT

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Oakes, 6036 College avenue, entertained at a tea Sunday afternoon for Miss Edith Hiatt of New York, house guest of Mrs. Minnie Abbott, her mother.

Mrs. John Mitchell Wilson, sister of the hostess, poured. The tea table, arranged with lace cloth, was centered with garden flowers and lighted with orchid and green tapers.

Wax Flowers

By NEA Service

FRESH flowers can be waxed and preserved indefinitely by the following method:

First melt a number of good quality candles, removing the wicks after the wax has melted. Collect the flowers and remove from them any trace of moisture.

Let the wax cool down so that it is just lukewarm, and quite a bit cooler than its boiling point. If flowers are placed in wax too hot, the leaves will shrivel.

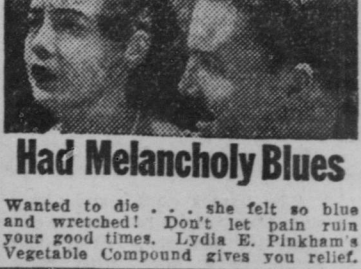

Flowers are dipped in the wax, held in bloom and stem. After dipping, wave them around in the air for a few minutes and, when the wax sets, a thin, invisible film will cover the flowers.
