

BONUS CAMP WILL RISE IN WILDERNESS

'Army' Vanguard at Lonely Maryland Site Is Led by Woman.

WATERBURY, Md., Aug. 2.—Campfires winked in the darkness along the Maryland ridges Monday night as the vanguard of the bonus expeditionary forces—led by a woman—settled down to hack a camp out of the wilderness.
Mrs. Joseph G. Bullion, a pretty brunet dressed in white duck trousers and a man's shirt, stood beside a cotton wood sapling from which fluttered a small American flag.
It had come unscathed through the flame and gas that drove the veterans out of Washington last week.
Around her clustered a pathetic, mud-plastered group of men—seventeen in all—and listened as she rallied them to face the rigors of another night in the open.
"We'll not be here by ourselves very long," she said. "The boys are coming from Johnston to join us. Just stick it out a little longer, and we will have plenty of food for everybody."

Stay Till We Get Bonus
"We're going to stay here until we get the bonus and don't you forget it. We've got to stay here; there isn't any other place to go." It is a far cry from the comparative comforts of Annapolis with its regular food supply, circus barkers and efficiently-equipped kitchens—to this little clearing amid the elms and cottonwoods, where life settles grimly down to the simple and elemental question of how this woman and these men will be able to wrest a living out of the wilderness.
They are fighting a pioneer battle against rain, wind, heat and the stubborn soil.
They are here because Mrs. Maud Edgell offered the tract as a campsite, feeling "that the boys got a dirty deal in Washington."
Mrs. Bullion, who accompanied her husband when he left his home in Egg Harbor, N. J., weeks ago to march on Washington, feels confident reinforcements are on the way, and she has the word of Commander Walter W. Waters that 4,000 men will be moving toward Waterbury within a week.

No Sign of Civilization
Four houses, huddled together at a railroad crossing, make up the town of Waterbury. A dirt road twists down through the shoulder-high corn fields, and a mile and a half from the town the road dwindles away into the fields.
A cowpath meanders on up to a ridge, through trees that have not known the biting edge of an axe since pioneer days. There is no sign of civilization—no roads, no houses, no tractors—until the visitor comes abruptly into the clearing.
At the side of the path stands E. W. Lambert, of Detroit, technically in charge of the camp.
But the real commander—Mrs. Bullion—is beside a tarpaulin tent, grasping a broken shovel with which she has been digging foot holes. Around her are four other smaller tents.
Although there are only seventeen persons in this outpost of the B. E. F., the camp embraces, geographically, all of the United States. From the east there is Frank Shaw of New York; from the west, E. O'Neal of San Francisco; from the south, B. A. Fox of Dallas; from the north, E. W. Lambert of Detroit.

COUNTY FILES SUIT TO REGAIN SCHOOL LOAN

$2,000 Judgment Is Asked in Mortgage Foreclosing Action.
First of what county officials say will be a series of suits seeking to foreclose mortgages on which loans from the common school fund remain unpaid was filed today by county commissioners against Mr. and Mrs. Stilling Schory and Mr. and Mrs. Jesse E. Cline, asking judgment for $2,000.
Fraud alleged to exist in several transactions by which loans were obtained on hundreds of pieces of property, is set forth in the first suit. Schory was agent for Cline in obtaining an $800 loan on real estate in Fletcher's Oak Hill addition on Dec. 22, 1922.
Appointment of a receiver is asked to the end that rents from the property be collected and applied to payment of taxes and other fixed charges.
Attempt to sell some of the property covered by school fund mortgages on March 24 brought no buyers.

FUMES PERIL CITY FIREMEN

Two Overcome, One When Gate Falls on Head.

It isn't necessary for fireman Irving Fossatti, 37, of headquarters company to consult a dictionary today to know the meaning of that word "irony," as a result of an experience Monday with the safety gate of an elevator at the Shirley V. Eads poultry house, 23 South West street.
Firemen were called after a leaky valve in the refrigerating plant of the place caused the basement to become filled with ammonia fumes. Donning gas masks, Captain George Townsend of headquarters company, Paul Poling of engine house No. 6, and Fossatti descended to the basement by elevator.
The safety gate, which had been raised on reaching the basement, fell, striking Fossatti on the head. His mask was loosened and the fumes and blow combined caused him to lose consciousness.
Townsend and Poling carried him out and he was treated at city hospital. Later, Walter Gordon, 34, of engine house No. 6, was overcome by fumes, due to a defect in his mask. Neither was injured seriously.

MISSING CITY GIRL IS FOUND AT GREENFIELD

Believed to Have Taken Job to Be Near Her Sweetheart.
Efforts of The Times today found Albert Bannister, 18, daughter of Mrs. Aileta Bannister, widow of mother of six children living at 3625 Downey avenue, missing since Friday. She is working in a home at Greenfield.
The girl left a note at her home Friday afternoon that she was going down town to answer an advertisement offering work.
"I didn't get along very well at home," the girl is said to have told Greenfield police. She was found working as a domestic in the home of Vera Ennis.
There is heart interest in Greenfield for the girl. She is said to be engaged to Charles Andrews, who lives there. The wedding had been set for June, but postponed due to Andrews' lack of employment, according to acquaintances.

STAMP COLLECTORS TO VOTE FOR ROOSEVELT

New York Governor Found to Be 'Brother Member No. 11590'.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—President Hoover may get the fisher-men's vote, but looks like the stamp collectors are going to stick it out for Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt.
George W. Linn, editor of Linn's Weekly Stamp News, published in Columbus, O., discovered that Roosevelt is a stamp collector. So on the front page of his magazine he publishes a picture of the New York Governor, bearing the caption: "A million stamp collectors want a stamp collector for President."
An article in the magazine notes that Roosevelt is member No. 11,590 of the American Philatelic Society and urges, "Boost a philatelic brother."

G. O. P. to Hold Torchlight Parade Late in September.
Members of the Irvington Republican Club, in opening their drive to re-elect President Hoover and other G. O. P. candidates, will stage an old-time political rally and torchlight parade in Irvington next month.

BOY CADETS OF PARAGUAY OFF TO WAR

Drums Call Youths From Classes After General Mobilizing Call.

By United Press
ASUNCION, Paraguay, Aug. 2.—Youthful cadets of the national military academy marched to the drums that called them to a war against Bolivia today, after congress authorized general mobilization.
Women wept, men cheered wildly, and boys in their teens joined veterans in the rush to recruiting stations after the cadets marched through the capital streets for the last time before starting for the Gran Chaco region.
The crowds shouted "Paraguay, Paraguay," as the cadets marched briskly to the residence of President Guggaria, who bid them farewell.
Classes Suspended for War
A bulletin at the military academy notified the cadets that classes were suspended in order to form an infantry battalion for service in the Chaco.
"The cadets will parade in the streets for the last time and bid farewell to the president of the republic before the young soldiers take up their fighting positions," the bulletin said.
"Tomorrow to barracks; later to the Chaco, with firm resolve."
The foreign office made a final bid for arbitration of the dispute with Bolivia in a cablegram to the president of the League of Nations council.

Population Electrified
The message expressed willingness to attempt peaceful negotiations, but added that "Bolivian attacks express categorical violation of Article X and Article XI of the League of Nations covenant."
The sudden call to the colors electrified the population, which had been waiting the government's lead. There was a general rush to recruiting offices. The recruits ranged in age from boys to veterans of the war of 1870.

Bolivia Ready for War
By United Press
LA PAZ, Bolivia, Aug. 2.—Bolivia announced she was ready today to settle her dispute with Paraguay "by force of arms."
An official reply to the latest futile efforts of neutral representatives at Washington also contained Bolivia's formal notification that she must have an outlet to the sea.
"We have the right to a bank of the River Paraguay," the government said.

Warning by League
By United Press
GENEVA, Aug. 2.—Jose Matos, president of the League of Nations council, telegraphed to Bolivia and Paraguay today, urging them to avoid war.
He sent a similar telegram Saturday, reminding them of their international obligations to keep the peace.

Master's Gone

Three Vicious Dogs Wait in Vain; Owner Jailed in Booze Case.

THREE police dogs belonging to Ryce Hyman, 2249 Yandes street, listened in vain for their master's voice Monday night.
Their owner, who defied a police raiding squad Saturday as he stood bulwarked behind the animals, is in jail, facing a twenty-day term on the state farm.
When he appeared before Municipal Judge Clifton R. Cameron Monday afternoon to answer charges of interfering with a legal process, resisting arrest, and harboring vicious dogs, court records were brought forth to show that Hyman was under probation for a previous liquor law violation.
No evidence was heard on the three current charges, and Hyman was committed immediately to the prisoner's dock with the alternative of paying the $20 fine within one day, or being committed to the farm. The case was continued, pending his decision.
At the time of Hyman's arrest, Sergeant Edwin Kruse and squad reported that the dogs prevented them from searching a shed in the rear of Hyman's home.
He refused to call off the dogs. Kruse was instructed from headquarters not to shoot the dogs, but to arrest Hyman.

Loans to Railroads Are Not Gifts
In the first five months of its operation the Reconstruction Finance Corporation received applications for $378,700,000, authorized $213,880,000 and actually advanced $146,650,000 in government loans to railroads.
This money is used, in different cases, to pay taxes, interest, payrolls, purchases and maturing indebtedness.
These loans are not gifts. They are approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, are secured by ample collateral and bear interest until repaid.
Such loans are not made to help the railroads or their owners but to prevent national financial disaster.
Emergency measures are important, but they are not permanent. There must be restoration of railway earning power. The public can help by making use of railway services and seeing that the railroads get a fair deal.
Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.
