Father Gets Writ of Habeas Corpus to Bring Son, 5, Into Court.

Superior Judge Joseph R. Williams issued a writ of habeas corpus Friday ordering a mother, charged with illegally detaining her 5-year-old son, to appear in court with the boy, Aug. 8.

The writ was secured by the boy's father, Fred C. LaBoyeaux, Columbus, O., who petitioned on grounds that he "has legal custody of the child."

When divorced from his wife Ella, July 14, 1931, the petition stated, LaBoyeaux was given custody of the boy.

Last month, the wife persuaded the father to take the boy to her home, 908 Bosart avenue, "for a few days."

The father alleges she failed to return the boy.

Sol C. Bodner, special municipal judge, when apprised of the case, suggested that Metz have a friend bring the money to the courtroom.

Metz was in favor of going home after the money, but Bodner vetoed the suggestion.

"You'll have to telephone," the judge ruled.

"But I haven't got a cent," complained Metz.

Bodner considered a moment, thrust his hand into his pocket, and tossed Metz a nickel for the court's pay telephone.

CHAPELS SPRING UP

Small Rural Churches Again Coming Into Prominence.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Aug. 6.—The small, rural chapels again are coming into prominence as a part of the church in New Mexico, Colorado and Texas.

More than 250 of the deserted country chapels, which were abandoned during the downward population movement, will be occupied within the next few months in these states by the Methodist church alone, Bishop Sam R. Hay said.

The economic situation with the accompanying trend away from the city, has brought a need for reviving rural churches, Bishop Hay said.

Letters Bare Romance Ending in Death Trial for English Air Pilot

Story of Hunger, Then of Wild Love Revealed in Lancaster Case.

By United Press

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 6.—Letters that told of Captain W. N. Lancaster's love for Mrs. Jessie M. Keith-Miller and his trust in her. The letters were read by State's Attorney N. Vernon Hawthorne Friday as the state sought to establish a motive for the death of Clarke, with whose murder Lancaster is charged.

The letters to Mrs. Keith-Miller proclaimed a wild love tinged with seriousness of finding himself in circumstances bordering on absolute poverty. Portions of a diary, telling of his love for the woman, were heard.

Most of the letters were written after Lancaster found himself almost stranded in the west, where he had gone to investigate a proposed airline.

"I have eaten only one 30-cent meal in four days—thank Hayden for his kindness to me. . . . Oh, to give you a great big hug and feel you close to me once more. . . . wish you were here with us. This bad is damnable cold," one note said.

Tells of Quarrel

These letters were written before Lancaster found Clarke was to marry Mrs. Keith-Miller, his flying partner and sweetheart for five years. Clarke was found fatally shot in the room he occupied with Lancaster the day after the latter had made a hurried flight from St. Louis to Miami.

The man quarreled before going to bed that night, said Mrs. Keith-Miller.

Lancaster had gone away and left Clarke living in the same house with Mrs. Keith-Miller. He was to "ghost-write" a book of the woman's aerial adventures, hoping to criminal court today and pleaded not guilty to a murder charge. He has one wooden leg.

The charge is in connection with the killing of Otis Breeden, of Route 3, in a gun battle June 1, following an argument over a load of booze.

Rogers, who had hoped that he would die from injuries received in the battle, now wants to live.

Another time she wrote: "Haden is so damn lazy he isn't getting anywhere with the book. . . . We have only 70 cents left and a continuous stream of collectors at the door. . . . We used part of the cat's hamburger for dinner." In one letter she almost demanded financial help from Lancaster.

Reads Her Letters

Hawthorne read from letters written by Mrs. Keith-Miller to Lancaster:

"We are living on bread and jam. We have no car. If you think you are having a hell of a time, don't think my life is a bed of roses. . . .

Hell for One of Us

"I know it is going to be a hell of a blow to you, old boy, but I am faced with the obvious choice of hell for one of us and heaven for two of us, or certain hell for two of us."

Before the letters were read, Russell finished his testimony that began Thursday when he said that Lancaster, while they were in Hollywood, learned she planned wedded life of Clarke and Mrs. Keith-Miller and in a fit of rage, shouted: "I'll get rid of him."

Under bitter cross-questioning by Defense Attorney James M. Carson, Russell admitted he had been brought to the courtroom from Dade county jail, where he is serving a sentence and that he had served a term for smuggling Syrians across the Mexican border.

OGDEN MILLS CZAR OF ALL G. O. P. WORDS

Checks All Statements as to Policy and Strategy Before Their Release.

By United Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The editor-in-chief of the Republican political statement department appears to be Treasury Secretary Ogden Mills.

And endless stream of campaign statements is rolling out of the mimeographs in the Republican national headquarters in the Barr building.

James West, national committee publicity director, former newspaper correspondent, reads copy and proves the dictation.

There is even some suspicion that the general Mills does a little "ghosting" for his Republican colleagues.

Even the venerable Senator Reed Smoot, the Republicans' mastermind on the tariff, co-author of the Hawley-Smoot tariff act, veteran of four tariff fights in the senate, would not issue a tariff statement without having Mills check it over.

INDICT DEATH SUSPECTS

Two Alleged Slayers Are Accused by County Grand Jury.

Indictments against two alleged slayers in domestic altercations were among those returned in criminal court Friday by the Marion county grand jury. Fifteen indictments were returned and seven charges were dismissed.

Second degree murder was charged against James Crawford '56, a roomer in the home of Merle and Mary Lustig, at 46 East Merrill street. Crawford is accused of killing Merle Lustig July 3 with a shotgun during an argument resulting after Crawford had intervened in a quarrel between husband and wife.

Fred Cosand was indicted for voluntary manslaughter in connection with the death of his wife Fannie, who died June 25, several weeks after a beating by her husband. They lived at 819 Chadwick street.

The denial followed complaint of an irate citizen who called the office of Mayor Reginald H. Sullivan and told the mayor's secretary, Walter W. Watson, that weed-cutting crews working for the city had cut down trees on a vacant lot.

A fine bunch they are, too," the citizen complained. "I suppose they thought they would imitate George Washington with his hatchet, but they don't know their trees, for these were not cherry, but ash trees. And I had just planted them, too, before the weeds grew up."

Street department employees excused themselves with the plea that the saplings were so small and the weeds so high that the trees were not seen by the scythe wielders.

Most of the letters were written after Lancaster found himself almost stranded in the west, where he had gone to investigate a proposed airline.

As proof of this declaration, Rogers exhibits the scar on his head. He was hit with an automobile.

The metal plate was inserted, but physicians said he probably would live long.

Only $10 of the bonus money had been spent before meeting the men, Perdew said.
