MANNERS AND MORALS BY JANE JORDAN

WHAT is your secret sorrow? Write to Jane Jordan and relieve your mind of its burdens. She will help you see what to do.

Dear Jane Jordan—I am going with a boy I have known and cared for for fourteen years. We are both 20 years old and have called ourselves sweethearts for about eight years. We both went away to school for a time. We corresponded and once in a great while he would come to see me.

While he was writing, he would tell me that he loved me, but when he was with me he never said a thing about it. I wrote him that he never had told me face to face. In reply he said, "When I see you again, I will tell you."

I don't know whether I love him or not. I do care for him, but is it love? I would rather be with him than with any other boy I know. I think of him all day long and an idea when he is not around. But if love means being thrilled every time he touches me, then I'm afraid I don't love him. I can't be sure he really loves me. I do not think he goes with other girls. If he loved me, wouldn't you think he would get me some kind of a gift on Christmas and for my birthday? He hasn't for six years. I never thought love was like that. Does love necessarily mean that you are thrilled at his touch?

Dear To Do—No, love doesn't necessarily mean fireworks of any sort. I don't know why girls think that. If you are a close companion of love, confidence and friendship are safer than a blind crush. A deep understanding friendship, combined with common interests on the one hand and freedom of action on the other, are the highest things any girl can expect from a love affair.

However, I do not think you two young people are sufficiently sure of yourselves yet to enter a serious engagement. It would pay you to be a bit elusive with the young man. Some reluctance to commit yourself, combined with the tantalizing promise of a great capacity for love, will make him more keenly aware of you as a woman.

The presents have nothing to do with the case, as a boy that young hasn't a lot of money to spend on his girl.

Dear Jane Jordan—My wife always has been in delicate health. She can't seem to find anything wrong with her. She is constantly tired and afraid to stay alone at night when I have occasion to get out of bed. She is gentle and not a bit dominating. But she is beginning to get on my nerves. Am I a beast?

Dear Plain Man—No, you're not a beast and you have a right to be exasperated. Delicate health is often an attempt to avoid health problems. Timidity is a very useful means of forcing some one else to pay one a great deal of attention and avoiding the responsibility for one's self. No one can be tougher or more selfish and obstinate than the weak and clinging vine type of woman, who thrusts the responsibility of keeping her happy on other people.

Your wife ought to be taken to a good psychologist and be made to face the facts of her own temperaments. All the coddling you can do will make her worse.

Dear Still Hoping—Are you sure you aren't the kind of man who never loves anything unless it is just out of reach? So many men lose interest in a girl after they have possessed her. But let another offer a challenge and they're off in a gale of mud.

However, if your unhappy love affair has had a settling effect upon you, and you still want your old sweetheart back, I advise you to prove your stability by refraining from jealous attacks on your rival, and by persistent and friendly attention until her confidence is restored; if, indeed, it ever is.

Dear Wondering—You can get all the information you want by sending me a self-addressed and stamped envelope. Cases such as the one you describe are a crime. I can help you.

Modeling Isn't Just Random Job; It's Real Business Now

In the center is a scene in the lounge of the newly organized Models' Guild in New York City. Above are a couple of young ladies whom you've probably met before in advertisements. Judith Wood, upper left, was a baby star of Hollywood a couple of seasons ago. But a motor car accident disfigured her nose, and now she's modeling to pay the plastic surgeon. Louise Groothoff, right, is one of the more famous "face and hand" models. Below are the oldest and youngest models, Carole Kelly, 10 months old, and Mrs. George C. Snyder.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Three hundred of America's loveliest and most famed models have discovered suddenly that they can stand on their own legs.

Symmetry connoisseurs might wonder how there ever could have been any doubt about that. But there was. The beauties and character models have been depending on agents who took fees and commissions.

The depression came along, and, to survive, it seemed essential to make a change.

So today, in Forty-seventh street, has come into being what they refer to as "the model salon," spacious, airy, cool, soft carpeted and furnished with lounge couches and chairs, exuding the air of a swanky club room is the new Models' Guild.

Henceforth, the models intend to look after their own figures, as it were. Engagements with artists or photographers will be arranged by their own guild, rather than by the many agencies.

Here, in mid-afternoon, lipstick and tinted nails; cigarettes and chatter of movie tests, magazine covers and portraits; preening and pose practice are leading attractions.

Here come clients to select their models, and here come models to get their clients.

LEADING artists and camera experts are sponsors. There are Neysa McMein, James Montgomery Flagg, Tony Sarg, Alfred Cheney Johnston and many others.

Neysa McMein, magazine cover artist, has gone so far as to borrow slightly worn gowns from her society friends by way of establishing a costume collection.

Card index files of each model are kept. These answer such questions as whether a certain beauty can sing, dance, play the saxophone, pose in lingerie or display lovely hands and feet.

And the first loyal members are "America's most famous grandmother"—Mrs. George Snyder, who poses for those charming old lady pictures; and Carole Kelly, 10 months old, sister of Nancy Kelly, the nation's most photographed child.

Carole has a tooth for each of her ten months, and earns $80 a week—good weeks. Mrs. Snyder is at the other end of the age ladder around 60, and her snowy hair earns for her a comparable income.

Both Carole and Mrs. Snyder smile at you often from the ads in your favorite magazine and newspaper.

You've seen them both many times. Maybe Carole's infant eye was fixated on a bowl of steaming cereal, or Mrs. Snyder presided, with elderly grace, over the latest thing in gas stoves.

CAROLE is the record breaker model of all America. As she stretches out chubby hands to seize your bright-colored beads and grins a delectable, toothy grin, her mother tells you, "Why, I even had a call for Carole to pose the week before she was born!"

"You see, I used to be a model myself, and Carole's oldest sister, Nancy, who's called 'the most photographed child in America,' and brother Jackie, have posed for so long that they're in and out of the studios all the time."

What's in Fashion?

Wash Suits for Reg'ler Fellers Directed By AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Of course no hard-fisted, whistling boy would admit that he has anything to do with a fashion. But the fact remains that as he sails his boat, shoots marbles or achieves fame for bicycle riding without holding on to the bars, he's making fashions just the way grown-ups do. By wearing one type of thing more than another.

And there's one fashion worn by thousands of boys that grown-ups may envy.

That's the simple, comfortable play suit. Shorts, loose around the knees for a good circulation of air. With short-sleeved or no-sleeved tops, open at the throat.

Have Pockets, Too

Most of them have pockets somewhere, of course. Often two on the chest. For no boy could get along without a pocket. . . . wouldn't have any place to keep nails and string and angleworms.

These cool, pocketed suits are fine to play in when they're of sturdy covert, khaki or seersucker. The same types made up in white linen or broadcloth look more dressed-up.

For very dressed-up affairs . . . Sunday school or a party . . . the Eton suit's the thing. No trousers getting a boy into that. For it's a far cry from anything like Little Lord Fauntleroy.

Coat Suits Popular

It's a grown-up, mannish fashion. A suit, in linen or crash, with knickers, trim-tailored coat and sometimes a blouse, too.

You can get them without any collar on the coats. A cool idea. Though most boys probably will feel more like father if their coats have notched lapels.

We've seen these suits in white, brown, blue, and green. And a very slick three-piece one was of gray crash with white broadcloth bloomers.

Of course we've been talking about boys around the ages of 8 or 10 or so. If you're thinking of a little shaver of 2 or 3, you needn't be so severe about his suits.

He'll appreciate interesting decorations like scalloped collars, contrasting sleeve bandings, or maybe even little touches of embroidery.

Daily Recipe

FRIED TOMATOES

3 or 8 firm tomatoes 1 egg 1 tablespoon cold water Finely sifted bread crumbs Salt and pepper 1 tablespoon chopped parsley

Wash the tomatoes, remove a thin piece from the stem end and cut the tomatoes into slices about one-half inch thick. Beat the egg slightly, add water, dip the tomatoes in this and roll in the bread crumbs, which have been seasoned to taste with salt and pepper. Allow the coated tomatoes to dry out somewhat before frying.

Heat fat in a heavy skillet, place the coated tomatoes in the hot fat, brown on one side, then turn carefully and reduce the temperature so that the tomatoes will have sufficient time to cook before browning. Lift from the skillet to a hot platter, garnish with chopped parsley and serve at once.

A SLENDERIZED MODEL

It's cut on the wrap-around lines so becoming and liked. The box plait effect at the front of the skirt is length giving, besides adding graceful width to the hem.

A small patterned crepe silk in dark blue and white is smart for general all-around wear.

Navy blue or back sheer crepe is exceedingly voguish. Make the vest of crisp white organdie. Leave it detachable so as to be readily removed for laundering.

Style No. 630 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust. Size 36 requires 4 1/2 yards 39-inch with 1/2 yard 35-inch contrasting.

Our summer Fashion Magazine will help you economize. Price of book 10 cents.

Price of pattern 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin is preferred). Wrap copy carefully.
