HAIZLIP SETS CROSS-NATION SPEED RECORD

10 Hours 19 Minutes New Time for Coast-to-Coast Dash Over U. S.

TURNER SMASHES MARK

Beats Jimmy Doolittle's Time, Although He Comes In Second.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Two fliers who spent a record-breaking day Monday in the fastest coast-to-coast flights ever made, planned to show the fans at the national air races in Cleveland today some more of their record smashing speed. They left for Cleveland early this afternoon. Jimmy Haizlip, St. Louis, and Roscoe Turner, Hollywood, both shattered the flying record set last year by Jimmy Doolittle.

Haizlip's elapsed time from Los Angeles to New York was 10 hours, 19 minutes and 48 seconds—56 minutes and 12 seconds under Doolittle's time.

After Haizlip landed here, Turner brought his red and yellow plane roaring out of the west, thirty-nine minutes behind the new record-holder in elapsed time, but still ahead of Doolittle's old mark of 11 hours and 16 minutes.

Both Fly Tiny Planes

Both Haizlip and Turner were flying in the $15,000 Bendix trophy race from Los Angeles to Cleveland.

Haizlip's earnings, won in an average man's working day, were $6,700 in first money to Cleveland and $2,500 additional for breaking Doolittle's record.

Turner and Haizlip both piloted tiny, bullet-like planes designed by Jimmie Wedell of Paterson, La., and Harry Williams of New Orleans, and powered by Wasp Junior motors.

Wedell, also an entrant in the Bendix race, won second place with faster elapsed time for the Los Angeles-Cleveland distance than Turner. He also flew one of his own planes.

Haizlip took off at Los Angeles at 6:45 a. m. (eastern standard time). Within five minutes he was up 8,000 feet.

As the rising sun gleamed over the Grand Canyon, his white and black stream-lined plane shot along at 270 miles an hour.

At noon, he passed over the Mississippi river after a brief refueling stop at Goodland, Kan.

At Lansing, Ill., he took on 130 gallons of gas in five minutes. Then he streaked over Cleveland in mid-afternoon.

He lifted his plane over the Alleghenies, after flashing over the finish line at Cleveland, and, an hour before dusk, he sighted the Atlantic.

Haizlip traveled so fast he overshoot Floy Bennett field. He banked, and landed at 100 miles an hour at 5:04:48 p. m. (eastern standard time).

Oil-spattered, his face black and dirty with grime and dust, the diminutive 4-foot-11-inch flier crawled out of his cockpit, grinning.

"Am I the first one in?" he asked, as a crowd of about 1,000 persons cheered.

Marguerite Clark Is There

Marguerite Clark Williams, movie star of fifteen years ago and wife of the co-designer of his plane, presented Haizlip with a bouquet.

Then there was a roar overhead and Turner shot down onto the field. Haizlip hurried out to greet him.

Turner, a large man, laughed heartily at the sight of the grease-covered Haizlip.

"You were the one man I wanted to beat," he exclaimed.

Arm-in-arm, they went for a cup of coffee.

Out in Cleveland Jimmy Doolittle received with a grin the news that his mark had been broken. He sent Haizlip a telegram of congratulations, commenting, "Haizlip is one of the best pilots and one of my closest buddies."

"It won't be many years before planes will be crossing the country in seven hours or less," Doolittle predicted. And don't forget that I'm not through flying yet."

Von Papen's Iron Hand Rules Reich

Hindenburg Gives Him Power to Disband German Parliament.

BERLIN, Aug. 30.—The new Reichstag convened today facing immediate dissolution by Chancellor Franz von Papen, who was granted almost dictatorial powers by President von Hindenburg. "Red Clara" Zetkin, communist woman deputy, opened the session as president by seniority. She was assisted to the rostrum by two women communist members of the Reichstag.

Clara paused for several minutes to regain her breath (she is 75 and feeble) and then called the house to order amidst Communist shouts of "long live anti-fascism," the battle cry of the red front.

Comes From Moscow

Frau Zetkin arrived from Moscow to preside at the opening session.

After the traditional question whether there was any older deputy present, Clara told the Reichstag an international war against the Soviets was coming which would involve Germany.

The horrors of the conflict would exceed those of the World war, she said earnestly.

There was no objection from the benches as Clara, in a weak voice, declared that the German army was the dominant force in the present political changes, and forecast that several millions would be added to Germany's 6,000,000 unemployed this winter.

Nationalist Leader Alfred Hugenberg and thirty-seven of his deputies wore civilian clothes in protest against the "Moscow emissary."

While Adolf Hitler's 230 Nazi deputies in their brown shirt uniforms glared at the fragile woman who denounced "Fascist murderers."

Fear Von Papen

There were no demonstrations, however, for the deputies realized that their own would only serve the chancellor's purpose to dissolve the Reichstag.

Clara stopped several times to regain her breath. Ernst Torgler, a fellow Communist, supported her on the rostrum.

Adolf Hitler, leader of the Fascists, anticipating a crisis in the government, was in Berlin. He was deeply chagrined over a conference Monday with Von Papen and Von Schleicher, in which he was told bluntly that he can not have the chancellorship.

TEACHER'S AX MURDER LAID TO FARMHAND

Richmond Woman Battered About Head: Confession Is Claimed.

KILLER BLAMES SCUFFLE

Victim Threw Arm Around His Neck and They Fell, He Tells Officers.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., Aug. 30.—Declared by Montgomery county authorities to have confessed the slaying of Miss Lila Jones, 33, school teacher, at the farm home of her parents near Ladoga, Morris Green, 22, employed on the farm, is held here today, and reported ready to plead guilty to a murder charge.

Miss Jones, who has been a teacher for several years in the John Moore school at Richmond, died in a hospital here Monday, five hours after suffering four wounds on the head, one a skull fracture. Green is said to have confessed striking her with a hatchet.

Green was questioned through the day, but maintained his innocence. His first statement was that he found Miss Jones unconscious on a concrete walk near the house and that he drove her to a automobile.

While he was in the automobile, he heard her shouting for help. He said he saw her neighbors and called medical aid.

Miss Jones was alone in the home, her parents being guests of another daughter, Mrs. George Cook, in Birse.

Alone at Home

In his alleged confession, Green stated that he went to the Jones home about 8 Monday morning after doing some chores, and that Miss Jones asked him to fill some tubs with water, as she intended to wash and get ready for the school.

Green said he went to the tubs and found Miss Jones standing there. He said he saw her pick up a hatchet and strike him on the head.

Two large stones, part of a flower bed border, had been dislodged, and one was bloodstained. The hatchet, apparently washed after the crime, has been found. Authorities say it bears two blood spots and a strand of human hair.

Clothing Burned

Investigation of the case, Coroner A. L. Loop complained, was hampered because neighbors burned Miss Jones' blood-stained clothing before he had an opportunity to examine it, and asserted this occasioned delay in determining whether she had been assaulted criminally.

Doctors today said she had not been assaulted.

Harry C. Jones, 1102 North Rural street, Indianapolis, brother of the victim, arrived here Monday night. He and his wife spent the week-end with relatives in this vicinity, including the sister, and Mrs. Jones said she noticed her sister-in-law acted oddly, and remarked she was not feeling well.

Mr. and Mrs. Tod Jones, uncle and aunt of the dead woman, attended her funeral Sunday night and urged that she remain at their home rather than stay alone in her own, but she refused.

Green's father, former Montgomery county farmer, died in an Indianapolis hospital recently from infection that developed in a wound in a leg, inflicted accidentally by the son with an ax.

MILLIONS WILL SEE SUN PASS INTO SHADOW

Eclipse Wednesday to Be Greatest Astronomical Show in Years.

DAY TO BECOME NIGHT

Planets Will Come Into View—Air Will Have Sudden Chill.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—The sun will go out. The moon slowly will blot out the sun. The rush of a gigantic shadow across the earth will turn day into night. The sun's corona halo will flash suddenly. Stars will shine in the daytime. The air will have a sudden chill.

The greatest astronomical show on earth is scheduled for Wednesday afternoon, when there will be an eclipse of the sun. The best seats can be found along a hundred mile-wide band passing through Canada and New England.

The public by the thousands and astronomers by the score will occupy vantage points within the path of total eclipse. Across the nation millions will view this spectacle to a slightly lesser degree.

A total eclipse of the sun is probably the most impressive spectacle in nature's repertoire. To an observer fortunate enough to be in the path of totality there will be presented a celestial drama that never will be forgotten.

Any one who ever has seen an eclipse will recognize that no description can do it justice, but let us try to give some idea of what is in store Wednesday at a point in the center of the path, such as Conway, N. H., Kennebunkport, Me.; Derby, Vt., or Sorel, Quebec.

The sun will rise in the morning, and ascend the sky until it reaches the meridian at noon, just as if nothing extraordinary were about to happen. But at about 1:15 p. m., central standard time, the sun will begin to take on a strange aspect.

No one, of course, ever should look (Turn to Page Seven)

Gets Range on Old Sol

Miss Helen Sanford

EVERYBODY WAS LOOKING UP IN Indianapolis today.

It is practice day for the big event Wednesday when the afternoon will find Indianapolis residents from all walks peering through smoked glasses to see the midwest's phenomena—the sun's eclipse.

Miss Helen Sanford, 1102 South Richmond avenue, pretty and blond, was one of the first devotees of the outdoor sport to get her range on Old Sol.

Armed with a piece of dark-colored glass, supplied by The Times, Miss Sanford reserved a spot a-top the Test building on the Circle to get her glimpse of something she won't see again for many years.

Physicians and experts have urged persons not to attempt to see the eclipse without the aid of smoked glass. Ordinary colored driving goggles will not do. Eye injuries may result.

Seventy-nine percent of the sun will be covered by the dark disc of the moon at the peak of the eclipse in Indianapolis at 2:26 p. m., Wednesday. The moon will begin its inroad on the sun's light at 1:12, and the eclipse will be completed at 3:34.

FLORIDA GALE HEADS OUT IN GULF TO DIE

Tropic Storm Skips Crazily Over State: Damage to Crops Heavy.

RETREATS FROM MIAMI

Reign of Terror Is Caused by Constant Shifting of Freakish Winds.

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 30.—The tropical storm which roared out of the Caribbean late Monday and crossed the southern tip of Florida reached the Gulf of Mexico, probably to die, at noon today, forty miles south of Ft. Myers.

Behind it, the storm left some negligible property damage caused by the thirty-five to fifty mile gale, some communication lines down, but no known casualties.

That portion of Florida traversed by the storm after it hit the coast line eighty miles south of Miami is the Everglades, haunts of the Seminole Indians, who need no weather forecaster to tell them of the approach of a storm, or what to do when one strikes.

Withdraw Storm Warning

Storm warnings previously displayed at Key West were withdrawn today.

The disturbance was central over Marco point, forty miles due south from Ft. Myers, between which lies Naples, on the coast, isolated early in the day from communication with the outside world.

Precautions against a possible hurricane were taken over a wide area. Stores and homes were boarded up. Electric light service was suspended. Small craft was rushed to cover in protecting bays. The winds whipped up such heavy breakers that beaches were strewn with countless fish.

The storm roared in from the Bahamas over Long Key—scene of the President's fishing retreat—about 9 p. m. Monday night and began a crazy dance over lower Florida. Throughout the night high winds and driving, heavy rains kept residents in a state of fear.

Comes Near Miami

It came in eighty miles south of Miami, headed north-northwest. Barely had it started over Florida when it shifted due north and began rushing up the coast, its tempest center reported to be of hurricane proportions, accompanied by dangerous, shifting gales.

Shortly after that the storm veered again, north-northeast this time, headed for the tip of Florida. Then, forty miles south, it started back northward.

Church Radio Station Supported by 20,000

Groundwork for the renewal of his fight to obtain permission to operate a radio station here solely for cultural purposes was laid today with announcement of the Rev. Morris H. Coers, pastor of the Thirty-First Street Baptist church, that 20,000 persons have signed petitions backing the project.

The petitions will be placed before the federal radio commission at Washington, Sept. 23, at a rehearing on the permit request. His proposal is being fought by WFBM, station of the Indianapolis Power and Light Company.

Mr. Coers said today that his fight has received support of forty-two churches and numerous civic organizations, in addition to being pledged sums by wealthy Indianapolis persons.

Coers will introduce testimony, he said, showing he spoke for more than two years weekly over station WKBF during a religious program, to refute arguments of opponents that federal statute prohibits inexperienced persons from managing radio stations. Coers said he will be represented at the hearing by leading Indianapolis attorneys.
