'BACK STREET' TO OPEN AT THE APOLLO

Irene Dunne, Native Hoosier, Has Leading Role in This Quaint Story of Cincinnati in Old Days.

FANNIE HURST'S absorbing story comes to the screen Friday next, when Universal's picturization of "Back Street" opens an engagement at the Apollo theater with Irene Dunne, native Hoosier and John Boles in the leading roles.

This love drama follows the romance of a girl and a man, held together by a sincere love in spite of the fact that the man is a husband and a father.

For twenty years, the attachment endures, ever increasing in intensity, until a tragedy brings the most extraordinary affair of its kind ever pictured into sharp focus.

Throughout her life, the woman has sacrificed everything else to the man she loved, while the man has maintained his position in the social world and remained a respected member of the community in which he lives. The screen version is said to follow the original novel in every minute detail.

John M. Stahl directed "Back Street" with the same definiteness and understanding that was evident in "Seed." Gladys Lehman collaborated with Director Stahl in the adaptation.

The supporting cast includes June Clyde, Zasu Pitts, George Meeker, William Bakewell, Arletta Duncan, Doris Lloyd, Walter Catlett and other favorites.

Short subjects appearing on the program are Ripley's "Believe It or Not," a Looney Tune cartoon and Movietone News.

Indianapolis theaters today offer: "Down to Earth," at the Apollo; "Blondie of the Follies," at the Palace; "Love Me Tonight," at the Circle, and "Bring 'Em Back Alive" at the Indiana.

MAJORS AND MINORS By JANE JORDAN

If you see a letter in this column that interests you, write your thoughts in a letter to Jane Jordan. She is always glad to hear from readers and will publish their letters in a few days.

Dear Jane Jordan—I want to offer a tip to you. (Note: Ambitious is a good word to use.) I have developed an interior complex because of my own lack of education. I was graduated from college four years ago. About the time I was about to be graduated, I discovered, without much help from the school, that in every field of study, I was behind. I was interested in what was going on in the world.

I discovered that understanding was a hard thing to come by. I was a liberal weekly and mostly reviews, and I think that I have learned much more during the last four years than I did during my four college years.

"Ambitious" should stand reading the liberal weekly and mostly reviews, and I think that I have learned much more during the last four years than I did during my four college years.

Dear Hank S.—Your advice is excellent. The dictionary defines education as the systematic development and cultivation of the natural powers. This can be done by the individual without the help of institutions of learning.

Formal education has been criticized soundly by many, who declare that, after all, the accumulation of a lot of facts is an inadequate preparation for living. Too much emphasis on information and too little emphasis on interpretation deprives education of its value. A lot of facts won't help you unless you understand their significance.

The experimental college conducted by the University of Wisconsin has made an interesting attempt to break away from traditional education.

From Old Traditions. The students do not enroll for the required college courses, but spend the first year studying the civilization of Athens. The second year they study our own civilization and compare it with the past.

The students are not given the usual school assignments, nor do they take examinations.

What's in Fashion?

Necklines Reach Fashion Height

Directed By AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—If you come across one wearing a small, standup collar close around her neck, don't think, "How old-fashioned." It's new fashion... the latest development in the higher neckline fashion.

Take a second look at this collar and you'll find it isn't tight. Chances are it's open at either back or front. Opened at the back it looks something like a clerical collar. And it isn't stiff—not boned—though it may be crisply starched.

Of course this is the extreme of the higher neckline fashion. More necklines will be just to the base of the throat, or even a bit lower.

Soft and Comfortable

Those necklines sketched are certainly higher than most women have been wearing. But how soft and comfortable looking.

The collar at the bottom is called the "cloister" because it comes up close and round in the way nun's collars fit.

This particular one is divided into little tabs. Other cloister collars are all in one piece. Some roll well up on to the neck.

The draped collarless neckline that's so becoming to so many women has come up higher... as you can see in the center sketch. Sometimes it's even higher than that. It may be tied at the front or side.

That very youthful Lord Byronish collar at the top is a fine sports type. It can have its own contrasting bow on a contrasting tie slipped underneath as in the illustration.

Scarf necklines are a grand idea if you don't know just how high you want yours. They can be tied at any becoming height.

Some are real scarfs... detachable ones that can be changed. Others have a scarf-like draping that fall in folds around the base of the throat.

What Neckline for You?

It's obvious that not everybody can wear every kind of higher neckline. There is some kind you can wear, however, no matter how thin or plump your face.

Our free bulletin... What Higher Necklines Are Best for Me? Necklines Are Best for Me? is illustrated and helps you choose the most becoming. Just send the coupon.
