

Old Clubs Will Start New Work

New seasons for two of the city's oldest women's clubs will open Monday, when president's day luncheons are held.

The Irvington Woman's Club, founded in 1892, will hold its luncheon at Whispeings Winds, and the Monday Afternoon Reading Club, organized in 1905, will meet at the Two Brooks Estate.

At the Irvington club's luncheon the year's program, "Through the Thirties," will be begun.

The club will undertake to trace through history, by way of the thirties, some of the most interesting phases of literature, art and psychology.

The program Monday will be given by Mrs. F. R. Kautz, who will speak on "Thirties to the Numerologist."

Study About "Thirties"

Subsequent meetings will take the thirties from the year 1930 to the nineteen-thirties. One of the interesting programs will be that to be presented March 20 at the election day luncheon, on "The Human Thirties."

Another special meeting will be the observation of the club's fortieth anniversary on Dec. 5, when Mrs. Marcellus C. Brown will be the speaker. Mrs. Brown is an honorary member.

Officers of the Irvington Women's Club are:

Mesdames William Innes, president; Charles A. Harris and J. Willard Boile, vice-presidents; Frank T. Brown, secretary; George E. Bunting, treasurer; John S. Harrison, and Robert Lee Glass, executive committee; Louis W. Bruck, and William M. Kautz, members-at-large; alternates to the Irvington Union of clubs.

The Monday Afternoon Reading Club will spend its time this year with "A Study of World Religions." The most important religions of the world, and some of their most interesting side-lights will be discussed.

Honor New President

The luncheon Monday, which will honor the new president, Mrs. De Witt S. Morgan, and the retiring president, Mrs. Hayden K. Rouse, will have for its program a talk by Mrs. Archibald M. Hall.

The club will entertain with its annual Christmas party Dec. 12. Other special meetings will be a luncheon and election Jan. 23, guest day May 15, and the final luncheon, June 12.

The year book contains a complete bibliography for the convenience of the members in preparing their topics, as well as a copy of the club constitution. Other new officers are:

Mesdames J. R. Townsend, vice-president; J. C. Schade, secretary; J. C. Siegeman, treasurer; Mrs. D. J. Dunnigan, H. Kern, corresponding secretary; Lee Weikel, treasurer; W. E. Ball, delegate to Seventh district; William Kautz, delegate to John W. Malby, publicity chairman; and H. M. Phillips, public affairs chairman, and John N. Hobbs, conference chairman. The program committee is Mesdames Arthur C. Hoffman, Hall, and Sylvester Moore.

The Monday Afternoon Reading Club is affiliated with the district, state and national federation of clubs.

Girl Scouts

New candidates who attended their first girl scout meeting last week are: Marjorie Hasbrook, Betty Lou Branson, Phyllis Jackson, Della Duncan, Doror Heier, Celia Dorothy Smith, 35; Barbara Sims, Dorothy Taintor, 33; Pauline McGinnis, 26; Norma Rose, May Grace, 31; Lucille E. Baker, Dorothy Mary McElroy, 18; Elinor Atherton, Elaine Morris, Katherine Smith, Wiley, Rosamary Gendson, 26; Mildred Fisher, Christine McKinney, Ruth Finchum, Ruth Lydia, Peggy Ladd, Nellie Ferguson, Alberta Brandline, Vice Dean, Ferguson, Gloriee McGill, Irene Taylor, 35.

Mrs. D. H. Griffith, captain of troop 35, has divided her troop. The younger girls compose new troop 53, the high school girls remaining in 35, which held a wiener roast Saturday at Mrs. Giffin's home.

Troop 51 is planning a campfire and wiener roast at 6, Oct. 6, at the home of Mrs. Henry Simmons, New Augusta.

The scouts of troop 8, assisted by Miss Josephine Madden, captain, spent Saturday at Camp Dellwood. Opportunities were given for the passing of fire-building and trail-making.

Marion Taggart, Edna Judson, Betty Hocker and Adele Bardach were selected as patrol leaders by scouts of troop 6, at Broadway Evangelical church, Wednesday. A hemingway team was appointed, with Betty Lou Hamsher and Lucretia Ann Saunders as captains.

Troop 42, Mrs. Alma Lemen, captain, will hold its first meeting Tuesday at Hawthorne community house.

Troop 25, under the direction of Miss Louise Glover at the Indiana State School for the Deaf, opened Monday. This troop, organized since 1927, was inactive last year.

Troop 8 is the last day for blue cards which should be turned into Girl Scout headquarters for the October court of awards.

The second meeting of the north and west district leaders association will be held at 10 Tuesday at Camp Dellwood. Election of officers for the year will be held. All leaders in this district are urged to attend.

Troop 34, Mrs. Lewis Willsey, captain, has been divided into two troops. The new troop will meet at Grace M. E. church on Friday and will be known as 13. Troop 34 meets on Monday at the same church. Mrs. Willsey has three troops in all, including Troop 1, which meets Thursday at Emerson United Brethren church.

A Day's Menu

Breakfast—

Casaba melon, cereal, corn omelet, blueberry muffins, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—

Open tomato and bacon sandwiches, minted apples, nut cookies, milk, tea.

Dinner—

Fried spring chicken, cream gravy, mashed potatoes, lima beans in cream, onion and cucumber salad, peach parfait, coconut macaroons, milk, coffee.

—WHAT'S IN FASHION—

Metal Jewelry Tones in Well

Directed by AMOS PARRISH

MANNERS AND MORALS By JANE JORDAN

If you feel like letting off steam on some pet subject, write to Jane Jordan, who will publish the most interesting letters in this column.

Dear Jane Jordan—Why is it any more fair for the husband to step out with another woman than for the wife? A husband would not cheat on his business partner, yet he will cheat on his partner in life.

The husband feels that he is privileged to do as he pleases. He is as privileged to do as he pleases in his home. If a wife is spineless enough to overlook such actions, she respects him. If she is not, then he is a lecher. Men tell their wives they can't help it. Temptation is thrown at them in all corners. In business, in connection with women, almost at every turn.

Boys, you "ain't heard nothing" yet. There is nothing more boring and monotonous than housework, no matter what you do with it. Women, when dishes three times a day, twenty-one times a week, doesn't exactly tend to make a woman feel good.

Dusting the furniture every day for 360 days out of the year wouldn't exactly make a woman feel good.

At the end of these daily routines, what would you do? Go to bed? No. Have you ever heard of a man wishing to change places with a woman? Not so.

So, I am 28 and have been married for a year. I have one son and a good son for a husband.

AN APPRECIATIVE WIFE.

Dear Appreciative Wife—It is not fair for a husband to be forgiven for stepping out on a wife when there is no forgiveness for the unfaithful wife. Neither is it fair for a husband to escape all the pains of childbirth when there is no escape for the wife. There is slight chance of changing the first condition as long as the latter exists.

To quote John Langdon Davies, "Men can do one thing, women another; men are good when they do one thing, or at least not very able; women sin terribly in doing the very same thing."

Some virgins are male, others female; some vices are allowed men, others, such as duplicity and cunning and lying, are permitted women, provided they contribute to the sum total of masculine content."

The chastity of women became important because the laws of property depend on it. Therefore, adultery was made a heinous crime for woman. If she breaks her marriage vows, she runs the risk of doing her husband a serious wrong in presenting him with a child which he did not beget.

The husband runs no such risk in breaking his vows to his wife. Since there is no way to change these physical facts, the unequal penalties for erotic expression are apt to continue for some time, except in unusual groups.

Nature is not concerned with species, but with reproducing the species as rapidly as possible.

AN APPRECIATIVE WIFE.

Dear Appreciative Wife—It is not fair for a husband to be forgiven for stepping out on a wife when there is no forgiveness for the unfaithful wife. Neither is it fair for a husband to escape all the pains of childbirth when there is no escape for the wife. There is slight chance of changing the first condition as long as the latter exists.

To quote John Langdon Davies, "Men can do one thing, women another; men are good when they do one thing, or at least not very

able; women sin terribly in doing the very same thing."

Some virgins are male, others female; some vices are allowed men, others, such as duplicity and cunning and lying, are permitted women, provided they contribute to the sum total of masculine content."

The chastity of women became important because the laws of property depend on it. Therefore, adultery was made a heinous crime for woman. If she breaks her marriage vows, she runs the risk of doing her husband a serious wrong in presenting him with a child which he did not beget.

The husband runs no such risk in breaking his vows to his wife. Since there is no way to change these physical facts, the unequal penalties for erotic expression are apt to continue for some time, except in unusual groups.

Nature is not concerned with species, but with reproducing the species as rapidly as possible.

AN APPRECIATIVE WIFE.

Dear Appreciative Wife—It is not fair for a husband to be forgiven for stepping out on a wife when there is no forgiveness for the unfaithful wife. Neither is it fair for a husband to escape all the pains of childbirth when there is no escape for the wife. There is slight chance of changing the first condition as long as the latter exists.

To quote John Langdon Davies, "Men can do one thing, women another; men are good when they do one thing, or at least not very

able; women sin terribly in doing the very same thing."

Some virgins are male, others female; some vices are allowed men, others, such as duplicity and cunning and lying, are permitted women, provided they contribute to the sum total of masculine content."

The chastity of women became important because the laws of property depend on it. Therefore, adultery was made a heinous crime for woman. If she breaks her marriage vows, she runs the risk of doing her husband a serious wrong in presenting him with a child which he did not beget.

The husband runs no such risk in breaking his vows to his wife. Since there is no way to change these physical facts, the unequal penalties for erotic expression are apt to continue for some time, except in unusual groups.

Nature is not concerned with species, but with reproducing the species as rapidly as possible.

AN APPRECIATIVE WIFE.

Dear Appreciative Wife—It is not fair for a husband to be forgiven for stepping out on a wife when there is no forgiveness for the unfaithful wife. Neither is it fair for a husband to escape all the pains of childbirth when there is no escape for the wife. There is slight chance of changing the first condition as long as the latter exists.

To quote John Langdon Davies, "Men can do one thing, women another; men are good when they do one thing, or at least not very

able; women sin terribly in doing the very same thing."

Some virgins are male, others female; some vices are allowed men, others, such as duplicity and cunning and lying, are permitted women, provided they contribute to the sum total of masculine content."

The chastity of women became important because the laws of property depend on it. Therefore, adultery was made a heinous crime for woman. If she breaks her marriage vows, she runs the risk of doing her husband a serious wrong in presenting him with a child which he did not beget.

The husband runs no such risk in breaking his vows to his wife. Since there is no way to change these physical facts, the unequal penalties for erotic expression are apt to continue for some time, except in unusual groups.

Nature is not concerned with species, but with reproducing the species as rapidly as possible.

AN APPRECIATIVE WIFE.

Dear Appreciative Wife—It is not fair for a husband to be forgiven for stepping out on a wife when there is no forgiveness for the unfaithful wife. Neither is it fair for a husband to escape all the pains of childbirth when there is no escape for the wife. There is slight chance of changing the first condition as long as the latter exists.

To quote John Langdon Davies, "Men can do one thing, women another; men are good when they do one thing, or at least not very

able; women sin terribly in doing the very same thing."

Some virgins are male, others female; some vices are allowed men, others, such as duplicity and cunning and lying, are permitted women, provided they contribute to the sum total of masculine content."

The chastity of women became important because the laws of property depend on it. Therefore, adultery was made a heinous crime for woman. If she breaks her marriage vows, she runs the risk of doing her husband a serious wrong in presenting him with a child which he did not beget.

The husband runs no such risk in breaking his vows to his wife. Since there is no way to change these physical facts, the unequal penalties for erotic expression are apt to continue for some time, except in unusual groups.

Nature is not concerned with species, but with reproducing the species as rapidly as possible.

AN APPRECIATIVE WIFE.

Dear Appreciative Wife—It is not fair for a husband to be forgiven for stepping out on a wife when there is no forgiveness for the unfaithful wife. Neither is it fair for a husband to escape all the pains of childbirth when there is no escape for the wife. There is slight chance of changing the first condition as long as the latter exists.

To quote John Langdon Davies, "Men can do one thing, women another; men are good when they do one thing, or at least not very

able; women sin terribly in doing the very same thing."

Some virgins are male, others female; some vices are allowed men, others, such as duplicity and cunning and lying, are permitted women, provided they contribute to the sum total of masculine content."

The chastity of women became important because the laws of property depend on it. Therefore, adultery was made a heinous crime for woman. If she breaks her marriage vows, she runs the risk of doing her husband a serious wrong in presenting him with a child which he did not beget.

The husband runs no such risk in breaking his vows to his wife. Since there is no way to change these physical facts, the unequal penalties for erotic expression are apt to continue for some time, except in unusual groups.

Nature is not concerned with species, but with reproducing the species as rapidly as possible.

AN APPRECIATIVE WIFE.

Dear Appreciative Wife—It is not fair for a husband to be forgiven for stepping out on a wife when there is no forgiveness for the unfaithful wife. Neither is it fair for a husband to escape all the pains of childbirth when there is no escape for the wife. There is slight chance of changing the first condition as long as the latter exists.

To quote John Langdon Davies, "Men can do one thing, women another; men are good when they do one thing, or at least not very

able; women sin terribly in doing the very same thing."

Some virgins are male, others female; some vices are allowed men, others, such as duplicity and cunning and lying, are permitted women, provided they contribute to the sum total of masculine content."

The chastity of women became important because the laws of property depend on it. Therefore, adultery was made a heinous crime for woman. If she breaks her marriage vows, she runs the risk of doing her husband a serious wrong in presenting him with a child which he did not beget.

The husband runs no such risk in breaking his vows to his wife. Since there is no way to change these physical facts, the unequal penalties for erotic expression are apt to continue for some time, except in unusual groups.

Nature is not concerned with species, but with reproducing the species as rapidly as possible.

AN APPRECIATIVE WIFE.

Dear Appreciative Wife—It is not fair for a husband to be forgiven for stepping out on a wife when there is no forgiveness for the unfaithful wife. Neither is it fair for a husband to escape all the pains of childbirth when there is no escape for the wife. There is slight chance of changing the first condition as long as the latter exists.

To quote John Langdon Davies, "Men can do one thing, women another; men are good when they do one thing, or at least not very

able; women sin terribly in doing the very same thing."

Some virgins are male, others female; some vices are allowed men, others, such as duplicity and cunning and lying, are permitted women, provided they contribute to the sum total of masculine content."

The chastity of women became important because the laws of property depend on it. Therefore, adultery was made a heinous crime for woman. If she breaks her marriage vows, she runs the risk of doing her husband a serious wrong in presenting him with a child which he did not beget.

The husband runs no such risk in breaking his vows to his wife. Since there is no way to change these physical facts, the unequal penalties for erotic expression are apt to continue for some time, except in unusual