Woman Political Teacher of Al Smith Is Dead

Mrs. Henry Moskowitz

Noted Social Worker His Confidante Throughout Public Career.

By United Press
NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Mrs. Henry Moskowitz, social worker, publicist and confidential adviser of Alfred E. Smith, died at her home here Monday.

She was the wife of Dr. Henry Moskowitz, industrial consultant. On Dec. 15 Mrs. Moskowitz fell down the stairs of her home. Both arms were broken and she was otherwise injured. She failed to rally from effects of the accident which led to her death.

The funeral will be held Wednesday from Temple Emanuel in New York.

Mrs. Moskowitz was actively identified with public affairs, social or political through her entire adult life, but perhaps became best known nationally beginning with the 1918 New York state campaign when she made her entry into politics as chief of the women's division of the Smith campaign for Governor.

Was Sponsor of AI
Smith's first political foray under the guidance of Mrs. Moskowitz hardly was auspicious for a close political association which, in fact, developed from it.

Smith was asked by Mrs. Moskowitz to address a meeting of what he was inclined to regard as "high-brow" women. He went with her, but said he would do no more than shake hands.

After being introduced to a few of the women present, Smith found himself suddenly engaged in making a speech, which afterward was said to have been the high point of his 1918 campaign speech making.

During the 1928 campaign, Mrs. Moskowitz not only was a close adviser of Smith, who was running for President, but directed the campaign publicly for the Democratic national committee.

In Settlement Work
Since that time she has devoted herself to social work, to work as a publicist, and always has been close in the councils of Smith and his followers.

Mrs. Moskowitz was born in New York, of Russian, Polish and German parentage. She was educated in New York schools and at teachers' college, specializing in literature, psychology and logic.

At the age of 18, her formal education was ended and she began coaching plays in settlement houses, her first production being her own version of "Puddin' Head Wilson."

While engaged in settlement work she met Charles H. Isaacs, architect, and they subsequently were married in the same room in which Mrs. Moskowitz had been born. In her entire life she lived in only four houses, all in New York.

Isaacs died in 1911, leaving his wife with three children, Carlos, now a New York attorney, Josef, now a journalist, and Miriam, now Mrs. Cyril Franklin of London.

Many Big Accomplishments
Later she married Dr. Moskowitz, whom she had met early in her career of social work.

Among accomplishments generally credited to Mrs. Moskowitz are: The settlement of approximately 2,000 individual controversies while head of the labor department of the Dress and Waist Manufacturers Association.

Was one of the seven founders of the Travelers Aid Society.

Suggested the New York reconstruction commission which formulated social welfare legislation for Smith while he was Governor.

Manners and Morals

BY JANE JORDAN

What's on your mind? If it's trouble, write to Jane Jordan, who will help you solve your problems by common sense advice.

Dear Jane Jordan—I've been going with a married man for quite a while, and I'm just wondering if he is making a fool out of me. I got my divorce more than a year ago, and he's still living with his wife. His alibi is that he won't leave on account of the kid.

Now don't you think if he really loved me, he wouldn't let a thing like that keep us apart? I've told him how happy I could make him if I only had the chance, but seems like I can't get anywhere. Now this waiting and uncertainty is getting on my nerves. Would you advise me to give him up, or is there some way I can help him to make up his mind? Perhaps you think me heartless, but everything is fair in love and war. A LONELY WIDOW.

Dear Lonely Widow: I can not agree with you that everything is fair in either love or war. War in my mind is wholesale murder, no more honorable between nations than individuals. Neither do I justify that the emotion of love justifies unethical conduct.

I hardly would refer to a father's love for his child as a "thing like that." It's no small emotion, and he easily could be in love with you and yet unwilling to sacrifice his child for your sake. It may be that he is merely using the child as an excuse to avoid marrying you.

In either case, it seems to me that you are out of luck so far as any real happiness is concerned, and that it would be better to make the break and have it over.

Occasionally a married man is swept off his feet by a passion for another so compelling that he is willing to leave everything to follow his love. But, in the majority of cases, I have noticed that he is unwilling to pay a very high price for his passion.

If the home is at all bearable, a man usually prefers to remain with his wife and children. It is not only the feeling of duty that holds him, but the pull of habit, which often is stronger than love.

If you stick to him, I predict that you will never be satisfied with half a loaf all your life. Evidently this is not to your liking, so why don't you wipe the slate clean.

Dear Jane Jordan—I am keeping company with two fellows. I care for both. One is out of town most of the time. Do you think I should stay at home when he doesn't even write? Except for a few dates I have had with the other fellow, I have gone with him since I was 13.

The other is a real nice fellow except that he doesn't work. Even when times were better, he didn't work. Shall I quit going with both, or should I choose between them? ITZY.

Dear Itzy—Enjoy them both when they are available, but do not take them seriously. It is not necessary to regard every boy you meet as a possible husband, to enjoy his company.

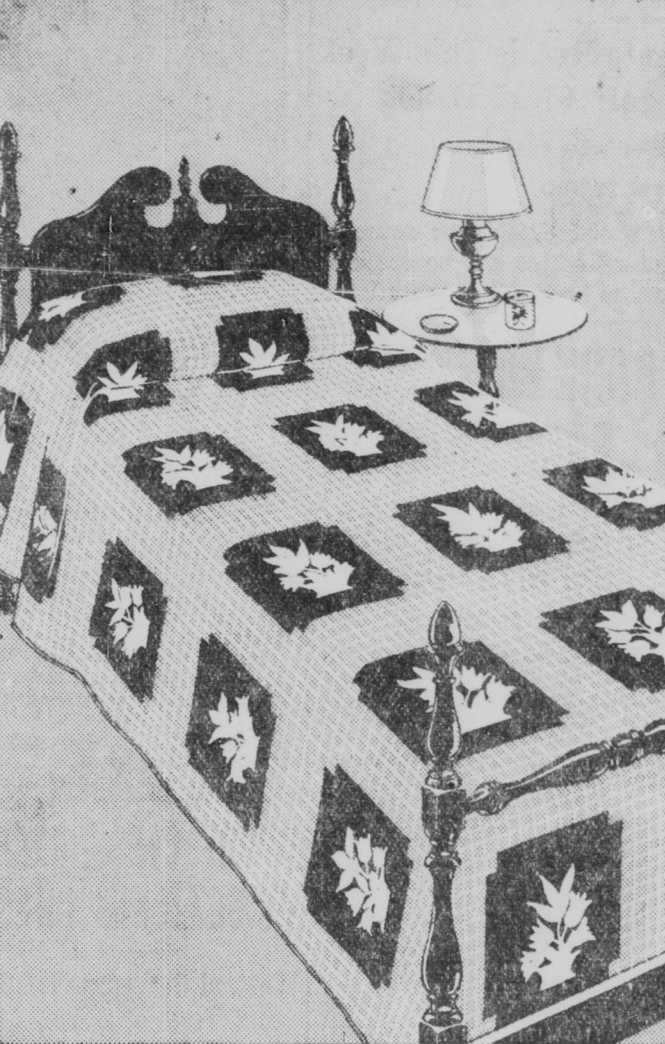

Dear Jane Jordan: I am going steady with one fellow. When I am with him, I think that I am satisfied, but when he isn't around I keep thinking of a fellow I kept company with last year. He got in some trouble and was sent to jail, but will be out in April. I know that as soon as he gets out, he will come to see me.

My folks think he is in California. I like my present boy friend as well as any one, but my thoughts afterwards always turn to the past. What should I do? MITZY.

Dear Mitzy: If only one could tear an old love up by the roots with one swift jerk, how pleasant it would be! But it can't be done. A poignant love affair puts down multiple roots which must be torn What's in Fashion?

Woven Bedspreads Win Favor
Directed By AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—No longer is it necessary to envy helplessly your friend who possesses a real old hand-woven bedspread. Just go get yourself a modern pattern.

They look almost like the old hand-made ones. But you don't have to worry about the impossibility of replacing them.

Both rayons and cottons are used for them. But if you want the real old-fashioned flavor, cotton is smarter.

New kinds of weaving machines make all sorts of patterns possible. Not all old-fashioned, either, if your taste runs to more modern things.

Imitations Made of Rayon
Imitations of elegant brocades and damasks are made of rayon. In cotton there are cross-stitch effects, peasant designs, gingham patterns, copies of hand-quilting and trapunto work.

We've had illustrated a quaint flower basket pattern on a background that looks like gingham. Such a spread is perfect for the Early American or French Provincial room.

Flower basket motifs in more formal types are fashionable, too. And even old patchwork and applique quilts have been copied.

Free Design for Union Quilt
But if you'd rather have a real applique spread, why don't you make one yourself? We have a design for one that's really easy—just hundreds of tiny pieces that have to be sewed together, but that patriotic old time pattern called "The Union" quilt.

It shows an American eagle spread at each corner and is done in red, blue and gold on white.

Or, if you prefer, we'll send you directions for making a Corded Bedspread... the tailored kind. Just send the coupon for either or both leaflets.

ONE BILLION DOLLARS FINE..

90 MILLION DAYS IMPRISONMENT

for neglect of COLDS

EVERY YEAR, the common cold costs America over a billion dollars! Every year, colds imprison people at home—away from work—for more than 90 million days!

These figures are based on estimates of the United States Public Health Service. Nor does this terrific penalty imposed by colds include their misery and annoyance—their trouble and worry—their actual danger to health.

Now Comes Relief!.. Happily—now—a way has been found to lift much of this burden. It comes with the new Vicks Plan for better Control of Colds.

In clinical tests among thousands last winter, Vicks Plan reduced the number and duration of colds by half!—cut the dangers and costs of colds more than half!

To millions of homes, the Plan has already brought new freedom from colds.

Better Control of Colds... This unique and remarkable Plan was made possible by the development of the new aid in preventing colds—Vicks Nose & Throat Drops. This new formula is the ideal companion to Vicks VapoRub, the modern way of treating colds. Together with certain simple rules of health, they form Vicks Plan for better Control of Colds—fully explained in each Vicks package. Very briefly, it is this:

To PREVENT Many Colds... When Colds threaten—at that first feeling of stuffiness or nasal irritation, sniffle or sneeze—Nature's usual warning that a cold is coming on—use Vicks Nose Drops at once! They soothe irritation and aid Nature's functions in throwing off the infection that threatens. They prevent development of many colds.

To END a Cold Sooner... If a cold has developed or strikes without warning, vigorous measures are necessary. At bedtime, apply Vicks VapoRub over throat and chest. Its direct double-action continues through the night. By morning the worst of a cold is usually over. During the day, use the convenient Vicks Nose Drops for added comfort and relief.

For Fewer colds, Less Severe colds, Less Expense... Follow VICKS PLAN for Better CONTROL-OF-COLDS
