GROCER CLERK MURDERED IN STORE HOLDUP

Halts Raising Hands, to Remove His Glasses;
Shot Down.

THREE IN BANDIT RAID

Blame Victim's Poor Sight
for Tragedy; Killers
Flee in Auto.

Chris C. Wade, 54, father of two motherless small girls, was slain Thursday night by bandits, who fled without loot from the grocery of Otto Aldendorf, 650 South Lyon avenue. Three suspects are held.

The slain man, a clerk in the grocery, was shot down when he halted raising his hands to remove his glasses. His sight was poor, acquaintances said.

Three men, all carrying revolvers, entered the store. Besides Wade, those in the place were Aldendorf, Jesse Rabern, a butcher, 616 South McLeod street; Charles Wilkerson of the Lyon avenue address, and Fred Phillips of the McLeod street address.

Wade entered while the robbery was in progress. Coming into the lighted store, his poor sight caused him to hesitate until his eyes became accustomed to the light.

Commanded to raise his hands, Wade lifted them, but halted to remove his glasses. A shot was fired, the bullet entering his abdomen. He died in the admitting room of city hospital.

Flee After Shooting

Aldendorf tried to fight the bandits, but was knocked down by a fist blow. Wilkerson was in a back room when the robbers entered.

One came near him and Wilkerson remarked, "You can't do that," as he was ordered to remain quiet. "He was struck in the face with the butt of a revolver."

After shooting Wade, the bandits ran from the store to an automobile. As they drove away, Phillips fired at them with a shotgun.

Wade's daughters, Darlene, 6, and Ruth Joan, 4, are with relatives in Colet, Ind. The wife and mother died six weeks ago after an illness of a year from cancer.

Possible explanation for the apparently unwarranted shooting of Wade was given today by Aldendorf. He said that he received a tip recently that his store was to be robbed or entered by burglars.

He arranged with Wade, who owed him for groceries, to work as a clerk during the time the store was open at night and he remained after closing. Aldendorf believes the robbers knew of this arrangement and suspected that Wade was armed, although he had no weapon.

Three Suspects Held

Suspects held in the case, and believed connected with a robbery which followed the slaying are Raymond J. White, 30, and Robert White, 34, both of 347 North East street, and Archie Lawson, 29, of 436 West Norwood street.

They were arrested at Brownsburg by Everett Hudson, town marshal, who had them at bay backed against the wall of a bank when Sergeant Noel Jones and patrolmen Charles Burkett and Chester Timmerman arrived. Hudson arrested the men when he saw them loitering near a restaurant. He called police here for aid.

Three men held up Bert Yeager, West Newton, active in Democratic politics, while he was driving on road 67, about five miles southwest of Indianapolis, following the Wade slaying. The robbers obtained a small amount of money and a watch.

Autopsy Is Performed

One effort to link the prisoners with the murder failed when it was shown that the bullet which killed Wade could not have been fired from a revolver one of the men dropped in Brownsburg. This gun is a .32-caliber, while an autopsy showed the fatal bullet was of .38-caliber or larger.

Dr. William E. Arbuckle, coroner, stated that an autopsy performed by his deputy, Dr. J. A. Salb, showed that the bullet entered the abdomen and passed through the body. Internal hemorrhage caused death. Search is being made in the store for the bullet.

Prisoners Deny Slaying

Elbert Flynn, living near Brownsburg, brought the three men arrested there to Clermont. He said they halted him while he was driving to Clermont from Indianapolis. No attempt was made to rob him. He said they told him they were hitch-hiking to a small Montgomery county town near Crawfordsville.

According to police White admits having served a term in the Illinois state prison at Joliet for assault and battery with intent to commit murder, and was released on parole two months ago.

The prisoners deny any connection with the slaying of Wade and robbery of Yeager. They are held on vagrancy charges under bond of $2,000 each. Effort to identify them was made today.

"I have none," Mrs. Ooghe said. Drawing a revolver, the intruder said:

CALVIN COOLIDGE TO REST IN NATIVE VERMONT HILLS

Hoover Proclaims 30 Days of Mourning; Leaves Tonight to Attend Funeral

BY FREDERICK C. OTHMAN
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—The nation entered a thirty-day period of mourning for one of its most beloved Presidents today as President Herbert Hoover prepared to attend the funeral of Calvin Coolidge.

The country's flags were at half staff. Its military officers were in mourning insignia. Its citizens grieved. The capital was still stunned by the suddenness of the news.

Mr. Hoover and his party will leave for Northampton tonight. At sun up Saturday, naval guns in all shore stations and aloft will begin their day-long booming at half hourly intervals, in recognition of the funeral in the afternoon.

The President and congressional delegations will attend the Northampton services. They will return immediately to Washington. The trip home will be made while Mr. Coolidge's body is being lowered in a grave next to those of his forebears and his son in the Rocky Little cemetery near Plymouth, Vt.

After adjourning Thursday in respect to Mr. Coolidge, congress planned to continue its deliberations today. Most of its members, Republicans and Democrats alike, together with practically every citizen of the capital, sent condolences to Mrs. Coolidge. She was one of the most popular first ladies in Washington's history.

As servants packed Mr. Hoover's bags for the fourth presidential funeral he has attended, the sadness at the White House was tempered with involuntary smiles as Mr. Coolidge's friends recalled famous instances of his dry wit.

Two of his closest friends revealed they had received prophetic letters from Mr. Coolidge before he died.

"My work is finished," he wrote E. T. Clark, his ex-White House secretary.

He was "always tired," he told Colonel E. W. Starling of the secret service.

News of his death electrified an almost somnolent day at the White House. President Hoover was enjoying his luncheon in the sunny dining room with State Secretary Henry L. Stimson when the flash came in:

"Calvin Coolidge is dead."

The President seemed stunned. Silently he pushed back his plate. Carefully he folded his napkins. (Turn to Page Two)

Women's Clubs in Uproar
Over Plea to Teach Children How.

By United Press
PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 6.—A storm of controversy broke out in women's clubs of Philadelphia today over a suggestion made by Judge Edwin O. Lewis that women educate their children in the proper use of wine and beer.

"It is appalling that intoxicating liquors should be placed on sale without the youth of the nation receiving instruction in the schools on the use and abuse of alcohol," Judge Lewis told the Philadelphia Federation of Women's Clubs and allied organizations.

"The use of wines should be taught in the home as is the custom in every other country."

"The club women of the nation have a great duty to perform," he continued, "in educating the younger generation in the use of light wine and beer."

Loud protests echoed from various sections of the hall, but several prominent clubwomen agreed.

"I heartily approve his suggestion," Mrs. Frank Lewis, treasurer of the federation, said.

Roosevelt Faces Mighty Task, Says Glenn Frank

University President, in Town Hall Lecture, Declares
Voters Are Quitting Political Labels.

The destiny of America is dependent upon the intelligence of its political leadership, declared Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, before a Town Hall audience at English's today.

Speaking on "Politics and Destiny," Frank considered the three major problems that Franklin D. Roosevelt faces on March 4 next, when he becomes President.

"I want to consider," he said, "the problems that the election has left on the doorstep of Franklin D. Roosevelt, as well as on that of the Democratic party."

"I am convinced that American voters are becoming more and more indifferent to political parties, regardless of political labels, in an effort to solve economic and political problems."

Dr. Frank declared that "political parties no longer are distinctive groups, because members of the same party belief do not agree on how 'moist' the country should become."

Others, according to the speaker, fear that the Catholics will get control of the government and others fear that the Protestant church already has.

In speaking of the change of scenery with new administrations, Frank said that "the nation is not materially bettered or hindered by the many new appointments with a change in administration."

He suggested that the three major mental problems of Mr. Roosevelt will be the breakdown of the financial system; the revolutionary changes that the machine age has brought to the industrial field, and

Last Rites Saturday Will Be Simple, in Keeping With Life Habits of Late
Former President.

NATION'S GREAT TO PAY TRIBUTE

Simple Funeral Services Will Be Held at
Northampton Church; Wife Bears
Death Shock Bravely.

By Sydney B. Whipple
United Press Staff Correspondent
NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Jan. 6.—Calvin Coolidge, the thirtieth President of the United States, will rest Saturday beside his father in the granite hills.

His burial, on a cold hillside of Plymouth, Vt., where his ancestors were buried, will be as he wished it, without undue solemnity, and without pretense.

The former President, in death as in life, was a symbol of the simple mode of life which had been his code, which had characterized his every act, from obscure lawyer to the presidency.

It was the wish of his wife that his burial would be the same—unostentatious, unmarked by pomp or ceremonious circumstance.

Harry Ross, his secretary and perhaps his only real confidante outside his immediate family, said he would be buried with all the simplicity that marked his life and the lives of his ancestors.

Nation's Great to Pay Last Tribute

It was Mrs. Coolidge's wish, Ross said, "that the usual grandeur be absent from these rites. She would have him buried as simply as was his mother, his father and his son. It was his way."

Calvin Coolidge might have been buried in Arlington cemetery, to rest alongside the great of the nation.

Mrs. Coolidge, who knew him best chose for his final resting place the cemetery in the hills that are white through the winter and green through the summer.

His ancestors, "for generations back," had been buried there.

Funeral services will be at the Edwards Congregational church, where the former President and Mrs. Coolidge were regular attendants. They will be conducted by the Rev. Albert J. Penner, pastor. The church was named for Jonathan Edwards, eighteenth century divine, who made his home here.

The nation's great and this little Massachusetts city's humblest will gather in the church at 10:50 a. m. After simple services the body will be taken by automobile, if road conditions permit, to Plymouth, Vt., for burial, presumably about 3 p. m.

Last Hours Typical of His Life

Mr. Coolidge's last hours were much the same as those of his routine existence since his retirement from the presidency and his assumption of the duties of an ordinary citizen.

He had insisted, ever since he relinquished the cares of office, that he was no more than a private citizen, that no special significance be attached to his daily comings and goings.

He arose as usual about 7 a. m., breakfasted with Mrs. Coolidge, and arrived at his office at 8:30 a. m.

"It wasn't that he was connected with the law firm of Hemenway & Hemenway," said Ross. "It was just that it gave him some place to go. He read his mail, signed whatever letters demanded his attention, and read the paper. Then he said to me, 'Let's go home.'"

Mr. Coolidge and Ross were driven home. They sat in the study from 10 o'clock on. Mrs. Coolidge dropped in for a few words. She said she was going shopping.

"Take the car," her husband offered.

"No," Mrs. Coolidge replied, "it's too fine a day. I'll walk."

She left the house. Mr. Coolidge continued his chat with Ross. They discussed the hunting at Plymouth they had done in October. Mr. Coolidge said he did not intend to go to Plymouth this winter, but was interested in the repairs and the addition to the house there which he had surveyed during the summer months.

Mr. Coolidge remarked he intended to spend the same time in Plymouth this year as he did every year. He looked forward eagerly to care-free summer days on his late father's farm.

A half dozen times, Ross said, Mr. Coolidge left the study to "prowl about the house." The caretaker said he went down the cellar, where he "puttered around a few minutes before noon." He then did that, the caretaker said, "just as an ordinary man would."

Then he went upstairs to his room. Mrs. Coolidge returned from her shopping, went upstairs without removing hat or coat. Shortly she came downstairs and called Ross. "I don't remember her exact (Turn to Page Two)
