

—WHAT'S IN FASHION—

Fur on Coats—Long and Short

Directed by AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—The new coat fashions surely do make women look old-fashioned and up-to-the-minute and charming all at the same time, don't they! Particularly if they've been picked out with special consideration for the figures that are going to wear them.

With so many different versions of the silhouette, and so many uses of fur, every single figure can look its best. So if you still have the fun of choosing one ahead of you, right this minute is a good time to settle a few things.

If you're slim and tall, for instance, you can wear any of those good-looking wide-at-the-top fox shawls. But if you've been looking with an admiring eye at some of the flatter furs . . . mink or kolinsky or caracul . . . by all means have one of those.

Wear one bundled around your neck with shoulder tops or maybe entire sleeves of fur. And just see how willowy your waist becomes!

Furs Balance Figures

If you're not-so-slim, you have to go a bit more carefully on wide-topped effects. But you certainly will be rewarded for careful choosing. Fur trimming in just the right place can give you the most youthful slimmest silhouette you've had in years.

If you're big at the top, and small in the hips, you're already fashioned over the new lines. So don't get too-big sleeves or a very wide-at-top collar.

But if you're just the other way 'round—small in the bust in proportion to your hips—you can improve your figure immensely by wearing sleeves with fullness at the top, and with fur trimming that gives width at the top. This has a definite tendency to put your hips in proportion.

These not-so-slim figures look better in short furs, flat as mink, kolinsky or squirrel, or curly as caracul and Persian. Made in one of the new square shawl styles, or one of the high-up scarf types.

Practical Colors Used

Color shouldn't be much of a problem. By far the greatest number of women have voted "black" this year, because it goes with most everything.

If you think you're too sallow for black . . . or you've just had black and want a change, get brown.

In this-season's dark shades, it's quite as practical as black, and will go with any color dress except black.

Then for the colored coat there's that good dark green that's easy on all complexions. And gray . . . maybe you think that's "out" for you.

But if you like it, try the new grays. You'll find they're much easier to wear than the pearl gray of a few years back.

So look yourself over . . . look the coats over . . . be sure you look wide-shouldered and slim waisted . . . and you'll be right!

Club Will Meet

The Comptometer Club will hold its monthly business meeting at 8:30 tonight at the home of Miss Mary Eiler, 1129 North Alabama street.

Home Shoes

It's a wise woman who changes her shoes the minute she gets home nights. Put your "working" shoes on to well-shaped shoe trees, not the kind that have tips and spring centers, but wooden ones that actually hold the entire shape of the shoes. Since your shoes spend a major portion of their lives on these trees, it will pay you to get some really scientifically made trees.

Holding Shape

It is a mistake to wear any woolen dress longer than a few days without having it pressed, if not cleaned. To press a dress, don't use too wet a cloth over it. It is advisable to put a dry cloth over the dress and sprinkle the dry cloth lightly just before you put the hot iron over it. Even inexpensive little woolens keep their shape much better with pressing attention.

Brighten Your Home

Since now is the time of year to think about "freshening up your winter wardrobe" it's a good idea to brighten up your home, too. Add a bright new pillow to the couch in the living room, have the curtains laundered, put a new print in your bedroom and perhaps buy a few gay-colored dishes to go with the breakfast set. The winter months will seem shorter and your home more cheery.
