

CUNNING HUEY MAKES SENATE AID FILIBUSTER

Grabs Rest and Then Leaps Back On to Floor With a Grin.

BY HARRY FERGUSON
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Senator Huey Long (Dem., La.), administered soothing, honeyed words to fellow senators Thursday and then cunningly maneuvered them into a parliamentary position where they had to help his filibuster whether they liked it or not.

Most of them didn't, but there was nothing they could do about it as the Kingfish stretched out in his chair, patted himself on the back and grinned in contemplation of his generalship.

There was no sign of weakening as Long carried his filibuster against the Glass bank bill into the third day. His voice still was a roaring wind of oratory in the great cave of the senate.

Nerves Beginning to Rasp

Senators' nerves were beginning to rasp under the three-day barrage. The threat of cloture—limiting debate to one hour for each member—was brought by Senator Arthur Fletcher (Dem., Fla.), its fate remained uncertain today. Meantime, a powerful ally moved into the Long camp when Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Dem., Mont.), an acid-tongued debater, rose and said:

"I am willing to declare myself. Unless some sort of relief legislation is passed, I am willing to stand here and see that nothing passes."

That is the crux of the Long filibuster. He and Senator Elmer Thomas (Dem., Okla.) have announced they will filibuster the Glass bill until the senate agrees to consider some form of currency inflation to aid the farmer. For three days Long has held the floor.

Glass Is Dejected

Fifteen feet away from him sits the frail, 75-year-old Senator Carter Glass, dejection stamped on his finely carved features. He considers his bill vital to economic recovery, but Long has hopelessly enwrapped him in words.

The Kingfish's parliamentary move Thursday was designed to give him a breathing spell. All afternoon he had shouted, as members of the house came over to stand along the rear wall and watch the spectacle. He said he was making this fight behalf of the forces-of-the-road people—their fellow who runs a store at the cross roads.

"I am a fork of the road fellow myself," he revealed. "Some of you fellows are too. Why, in the name of heaven, can't we fork-of-the-road fellows stick together?"

Then abruptly Huey changed his tone. His face was one vast smile. His words dripped with sweetness as he announced that out of the bigness of his heart he would allow the senate to consider the first deficiency bill.

Senator Hale, in charge of the measure, took the bait promptly and accepted the offer. Thereupon a debate lasting an hour and a half began while the Kingfish rested. He strolled out of the chamber for a moment, and during his absence the senate resumed consideration of the Glass bill.

For one awful moment it seemed the Kingfish had slipped up and lost the floor. There came a crash like the clasp of doom in the cloakroom, and Long catapulted himself into the chamber, talking while still in flight.

"You senators better not leave," he said. "Let the senate be in order so I can talk. If you leave you're going to miss what I say. And you wouldn't want to do that, would you?"

BANKRUPT LAW BILL HURRIED TOWARD VOTE

Reform Measure Is Given to House Committee for Quick Approval.

By United Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—The revolutionary La Guardia-McKeown bankruptcy reform bill, designed to scale down debts and prevent destructive business liquidation, was placed before the house judiciary committee for approval today.

Leaders of both parties united in pressing for speedy and favorable action.

Chairman Hatton Sumners said he expected the committee to approve the measure as soon as disputed legal points could be ironed out.

Speaker John N. Garner prepared to give the legislation right of way. He said he saw no reason why the house should not consider it next week, "providing the judiciary committee reports it in time."

Preparations were being completed to initiate parallel action in the senate. Democratic Floor Leader Joseph T. Robinson told the United Press he did not expect the senate judiciary committee even would go through the formality of holding open hearings.

Sponsors of the proposal were heartened by support from all sides. The rank and file of Republicans, urged on by a special message from President Hoover, are favorable. Democrats believe the proposal would meet with the approval of the Roosevelt administration.

In addition to the wide-spread appeal of the bill is causing pressure which will be hard to resist. The measure proposes a real moratorium for individuals struggling beneath unpayable debts; it offers corporations a way out from apparently unsolvable problems of finance. It would involve losses to creditors, but advocates of the bill believe it will prove best in the long run for them, too.

PROPOSES EIGHT-HOUR DAY LAW FOR WOMEN

Senator Egan to Introduce Measure, He Announces.

While labor leaders throughout the land are urging a five-day week and six-hour day, Indiana legislators will be asked to pass on an eight-hour day for women workers.

The announcement that he will introduce such a measure came from Senator Fred A. Egan (Dem., Gary). It brought considerable comment from his colleagues who were of the opinion that an eight-hour day law for women workers had been enacted long ago.

The only law protecting women workers in Indiana, however, merely provides that they not be allowed to work in factories after 10 p. m. or before 6 a. m.

Jealousy of Rival Musicians Probed as Motive in Bandmaster's Murder

Love for Victim's Wife by Another Seen as Cause of Crime.

By United Press

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—Police turned from the loves of Frances Schildhauer today to the music of her bandmaster husband, in search when he was struck by an automobile Monday at Kentucky avenue and West street.

Drummers, trumpeters and clarinetists underwent questioning by detectives, who hoped to disclose some hidden professional jealousy, some hatred that grew to the blare of fife and drum, as a motive for the mysterious assassination of handsome Captain Edwin O. Schildhauer a month ago.

Despite recovery of bloodstains in the Schildhauer home, Police Captain John P. Steg said there was nothing to support the theory that the bandmaster had been slain in his home and his body transferred to the lonely spot in Cicero, where it was found, pierced with bullets.

Three Detours Removed From State's Highways

New Pavement, Grading Projects Completed, Says Barnhart.

Three detours were removed from state roads this week with the completion of new pavement and grading, according to announcement by Hugh Barnhart, state highway director.

Twenty-two miles of detour were left when new pavement was opened from two and a half miles south of Muncie to Richmond. On Road 15, new pavement removed a detour between Warsaw and North Manchester. Construction of several small bridges and grading removed a third and a half mile detour on Road 70.

Detours still in effect are:

Road 7—Detour from Columbus to 6.5 miles southeast is 7.5 miles, good gravel. Road 12—Detour from just west of Chesterton is 1.4 miles for westbound traffic; 2.2 miles for eastbound traffic.

Road 21—Detour from south of Muncie to 1.5 miles east is 2 miles, good gravel.

Road 22—Detour from Burlington east to 2 miles, good gravel.

Road 23—Detour from Elwood to four miles west of Road 9 is six miles, two miles paved, four miles fair gravel.

Road 24—Detour from Morgantown to Nashville is fifteen miles, fair gravel, narrow, paved, four miles paved, one and one-half miles paved, four and one-half miles paved.

Road 37—Detour in south Indianapolis on week-end to avoid construction at
