Keepsakes Put on Exhibit at Gathering of 10 o'Clock Club.

The history of early Indianapolis mingled with that of Cincinnati, New Orleans and "the Carolinas" today in a delightful tale of memories, when the "Ten o'Clock" study group of the Woman's Department Club met at the home of Mrs. Edward A. Brown, 5420 Central avenue.

The meeting, scheduled as "A Garden of Memories," featured keepsakes brought by the members, and a background of stories about them which picture life of colonial days and Civil War history, and the early days in Indianapolis and other cities.

The meeting was held in an appropriate background of keepsakes, antique furniture given the hostess by her grandmother.

Prominent among the keepsakes displayed were those brought by Mrs. Alvin Coate, which marked the history of four generations. Mrs. Coate displayed three pewter plates, made in 1746, and owned by a maternal ancestor during the Revolutionary war days, in South Carolina. The plates were concealed in barrels of dried apples, which were

Manners and Morals

BY JANE JORDAN

If you're too close to your own problem and need an outside viewpoint, write to Jane Jordan. Her interest in you does not end with the first letter. Write as often as you wish.

Dear Jane Jordan—I am just another woman in trouble. I am married and have been for about sixteen years. My husband and I lived happily until he traveled around and another woman came into our life. She wrote for money, of course. I lived my life for my husband and loved him dearly. My life was all for him. Now I am hurt so badly that I hardly can live.

I still love him and hate to give him up. He doesn't want to give me up, but I certainly am at a standstill. When a woman loves a man, she really loves. Can you assist me?

JUST A WIFE.

Dear Just A Wife—Believe me the most sensible thing you can do is to overlook your husband's indiscretion. Of course, he doesn't want to give you up. It's a rare husband who doesn't indulge himself in a little fling after sixteen years with one woman. Nine times out of ten it means nothing, and he gets over the attack as readily as a child recovers from the measles.

More often than not, extra-marital affairs would die a natural death if the wife would let them alone. But, she poor creature, is so crushed by the death of her illusions that she can't refrain from making a scene. The scene puts the man in the wrong, and to justify himself, he places more difficulty on his pitiful little stab for excitement than really belongs to it.

The wife who has led a happy life with her husband holds all the winning cards, if only she knew how to play them. For one thing, she has established a set of pleasant habits which her husband will be loath to break unless she forces him to it by tears and recriminations.

Women are too prone to put all their eggs in one basket, as you have done. They have no life except in their love, and when that fails nothing is left. They do not want to live. How foolish! Life is full of other interests and other opportunities for self-expression.

The chances are that you may spend many more happy years with your husband if you are wise enough not to let this one inconsequential slip throw you off your balance.

Dear Jane Jordan—I have been going with a boy for almost two years. I am much in love with him and I always am thinking of him. I know he loved me, just by his actions. Not long ago we quit going steady, because he Leonard Fels of Cincinnati, as a token of gratitude for her work as a teacher.

Mrs. Avey, whose name was changed to Aveery, later was a teacher in Indianapolis at old School 3, which was located on the site of the Federal building.

In 1908 Mr. Fels' oldest grandson married Mrs. Avey's oldest granddaughter, Miss Mary Avey, who at that time was assistant to Miss Rhoda Selbeck, in the art department of the old Shortridge high school. The health of the bride couple was drunk from the old silver cup.

Mrs. Morton also displayed a pair of double knitted blue and red mittens, knitted by her grandmother in 1870.

Fashions of seventy-five years ago were recalled when Miss Bessie McClain exhibited her keepsakes, which were a fringed shawl of green and blue changeable taffeta silk, and an Etruscan gold bracelet, decorated with filigree. These belonged to Miss McClain's great-aunt.

Mrs. Edward L. Pedlow told of the realization of a childhood desire, when she displayed her keepsakes, which were a border of an old shawl, with mitered corners, which she has made into a table runner and a part of an old coverlet, which seems to have been dyed with copricine.

Mrs. Pedlow admired the shawl when she was a little girl, as she watched her grandmother clean her linen closet, and later received it as a gift.

Other interesting articles displayed were two beaded bags, bought many years ago in New Orleans by Mrs. O. L. Watkins' grandmother, and specimens of hand-made pottery, belonging to Mrs. Leonidas Smith.

Women Are Quicker on Mental Job

Men Show Better Grasp of Whole Problem in Test at Indiana U.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Jan. 18.—Women are superior to men in those mental tasks which require attention to details and a quick adaptation to a rapidly changing situation. But men are superior where quick responses are not so important as a grasp of the problem as a whole—where it is necessary to hold the attention for a prolonged period to carry a thing through to its logical conclusion.

These sex differences were observed in the psychological laboratories of Indiana university, here, by Dr. Hanna M. Book, who reported her findings in the current issue of the Journal of Social Psychology.

In a test such as that of comparing two parallel columns of figures, where each item is finished quickly and one must go on to the next, women were found to excel. Men were better on maze tracing, where the whole pattern must be kept in mind until a solution is found.

After a nerve fiber has been excited by any stimulus such as those constantly occurring during mental work, there follows a brief period during which the nerve fiber is inactive and can not respond to further excitement. This refractory or inexcitable or non-irritable period is extremely short, measured in mere thousandths of a second, and is very difficult to determine.

So far sex differences, if any, have not been noted. But Dr. Book explains the sex differences in mental activity she has observed as being possibly a result of sex differences in the refractory period.

Women, she said, probably have shorter refractory periods. Therefore, their nerves transmit a greater number of impulses per unit of time, which, being physiologically a more intense stimulus, would account for their ability to respond quickly to more details and to rapid changes in environment.

Men have longer refractory periods and therefore fewer impulses per unit of time, which would account for a slow, massive, deliberative sort of thinking in men.

"In general, if the task is fractional, that is divided up into parts, the women are better; if, however, the task is continuous, the men are superior," Dr. Book said.
