

300 Invited to Lecture on Vikings

Howard Benton MacDonald to Give Slide Talk at Marrott.

Howard Benton MacDonald of New York will give a lantern slide lecture at 8:30 tonight in the Crystal ballroom of the Marrott on "The Viking Empire." Mrs. Demarchus Brown will introduce the lecturer.

Mr. MacDonald is being brought here by Mrs. Wilbur C. Johnson, 1733 North Pennsylvania street. Three hundred invitations have been issued for the entertainment.

The lecturer, who is coming from St. Louis on a lecture tour, is connected with the Swedish American steamship line.

In his speech tonight he will trace the early history of the Viking empire, and show colored lantern slides of the North Cape, Iceland, Norway, Finland, Moscow, the "City of Ruins and Roses," and other points concerned with Viking history.

Having traveled twice around the world, covering a distance of 300,000 miles in sixty-seven different countries and territories, Mr. MacDonald will reveal his experiences and discoveries.

A number of dinner parties have been planned to precede the lecture.

Senate Votes to Pension the Horse of Paul Revere

"Of Thee I Sing" as Now Being Presented at English's Is Safest Entertainment Buy in Ten Years in This City.

BY WALTER D. HICKMAN

EVEN the senate is full of compassion for Jenny, the noted horse that took Paul from one house to another on the night of the famous ride.

The senator from Massachusetts arises to bring up the matter of Jenny's pension, a bill introduced in 1894 and had its first reading in 1892. But Senator Jones calls attention to the fact that Jenny has been dead since 1895 and immediately the Vice-President calls upon the senators to stand and bow their heads in tribute to noble Jenny. And the Vice-President reports that this surely comes under the head of "un-finished business." I am just trying to tell you "Of Thee I Sing," the Pulitzer prize winner, by George S. Kaufman and Morrie Ryskind, with music by George Gershwin and lyrics by Ira Gershwin, is now with us at English's. As now being presented at English's, "Of Thee I Sing," as to cast and production, is the safest buy in this city for at least ten years.

Here is the merriest burlesque and satire on party politics and Washington government I have ever encountered in the theater. The scene showing the Vice-President presiding over the senate and attempting to pension Jenny is one of the gem scenes of the play.

The first half of the play tells of the efforts to nominate a bachelor president of the country on a platform of "Putting Love Into the White House." The party candidate is John P. Wintergreen, as played by Oscar Shaw, and the torch light paraders carrying banners inform you that "even the dogs love Wintergreen."

The Vice-Presidential candidate is the "forgotten man," played so magnificently by Donald Meek. His play name is Alexander Throttlet-bottom and when he is Vice-President he is still forgotten.

Throttlet-bottom does not want to run for Vice-President because his mother might hear of it and he is assured that she never will.

Here is one of the largest companies we have had in many seasons at English's. To me it is pretty nearly perfectly cast with Oscar Shaw as the President, Meek as the Vice-President, Cecil Lean as Matthew Arnold Fulton who becomes secretary of state, Harriette Lake as Mary Turner who becomes the first lady of the land, John Cherry as the chief justice, and Adrian Rosley as the French ambassador.

All of the principals can sing, dance and act whenever the occasion rises and Donald Meek as Vice-President even beats a drum. Back of these principals is a singing and dancing chorus and a line of beautiful girls for the contest to decide which shall be first lady of the land.

This bathing beauty contest to find a wife for the presidential candidate is one of the cleverest spots in the show. Diana Devereaux, a rather dumb blonde, (nicely played by Gail Darling, who is strong on looks) wins the beauty contest, but Wintergreen turns her down and marries Mary Turner. And that causes interference on the part of the French ambassador, which is gorgeous fun.

It's good to have Lean, Meek and Shaw with us in the same company because they know how to put this great piece of kidding over. Have forgotten to mention the work of Al Sexton as Sam Jenkins. Just right.

I know you will about fall out in the aisles when the election returns are thrown on the screen. I know I did, especially when Mickey Mouse in California trailed Wintergreen by one vote.

Remember this is the safest amusement buy we have had here in years, years and years. Now at English's.

Other theaters today offer: "Whistling in the Dark" at the Palace, "Hot Pepper" at the Apollo, Gene and Glenn on the stage and "Tonight Is Ours" on the screen at the Indiana, and "The Billion Dollar Scandal" at the Circle.

DRUG STORE ON FIRE
Damage to Stock and Fixtures Is Estimated at $200.

Damage of about $200 to stock and fixtures stored in the basement of a Hays pharmacy at Thirty-fourth and Illinois streets, resulted from a fire Monday night.

James Cowden, 2001 North Delaware street, assistant manager, discovered the blaze. Smoke which filled the store made it necessary to suspend business temporarily.

Lehr Again Hits Stride at Lyric

Humdinger of a Show Is Verdict Given by Critic.

After a letdown last week, due mostly to a badly arranged script of a farce with whiskers, Reynor Lehr is back this week with one humdinger of a show.

From a costume standpoint, that is the staircase finale of the show, Lehr is giving the best along this line he has yet revealed. And Lehr proves that he is not a dress suit comedian but can go comedy rube with a bang. Watch Lehr when he goes acrobatic. I know he surprised me. And then to prove he can manipulate a whip, he becomes an expert. His expression, "I just can't help it," is the sidewalk expression of the week. I have heard it already on buses, on the street, and in stores. The chorus has come into its own and is now working as a unit.

The girls are reflecting individual personality and not forced frozen smiles. They look like they enjoy their work. All of their numbers are pretty near right this week. One of the principals has a good rube song and eccentric dance, done in good taste. The quartet stops the show again. Then there is a male singing and piano team in the Lehr unit this week who would stand more acquaintance. In other words, the Lehr unit this week is over with a bang.

Jim and Walt, Indianapolis entertainers, who have made the grade on the stage and on the air, are now real showmen. They know how to keep their act fresh and interesting.

They know the value of novelty. Jim, the blind brother, is playing the accordion this time. Splendid. Of course his piano work has never been questioned. Their material this week is the best they have ever given us.

Boice and Marsh go in for extreme burlesque. Both are expert showmen. They never become too bold. They know how to be over the top. Their violin dance ending is a nifty. Both class and burlesque is mixed in this number.

I missed the first act, the Six Buccaneers. The movie is Spencer Tracy, Marian Nixon and Stuart Erwin in "The Face in the Sky."

Now at the Lyric.
