

Many Interesting Fields of Discussion Explored in Women's Club Meetings

Today's Topics Include Gardening, Legends, Travels and Literary and Psychological Reviews; Numerous Sessions.

Subjects of club programs today were varied and covered such interesting fields as gardening, legends, travels, literary and psychological reviews.

Mrs. Charles J. Lynn and Mrs. Archer S. Sinclair gave informal talks on their own gardens at a meeting and tea of the Indianapolis Garden Club at the home of Mrs. Kin Hubbard, 5437 North Meridian street.

At the tea hour Mrs. Bowman Elder and Miss Elizabeth Bertermann poured. The tea table was decorated with spring flowers and lighted tapers.

Mrs. J. A. Sutherland, president of the Over the Teacups Club, was hostess for a luncheon meeting today at her home, 2636 Sutherland avenue. She was assisted by the vice-president, Mrs. E. R. Shoemaker.

A study of St. Lawrence river was presented by Mrs. W. D. Gatch and Mrs. William L. Richardson, who are both Canadians.

Mrs. Van Nuys Will Be Honor Guest at Tea

Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys, former president of the St. Margaret's Hospital Guild and chairman of the family aid committee for the last two years, will be honor guest at a tea to be given today in the Lincoln room of the Lincoln.

Mrs. Preston C. Rubush, president of the guild, will show moving pictures of her recent trip around the world, and a musical program has been arranged by Mrs. A. F. Head, chairman of the entertainment committee.

The tea table will be centered with a silver bowl of spring flowers. Mrs. Rubush and Mrs. George C. Rubush will pour.

Mrs. Van Nuys will leave soon for Washington where she will live during Mr. Van Nuys' tenure as United States senator.

Legends to Be Discussed

Mrs. James M. Pearson, 4250 North Illinois street, was hostess to the Clio Club, which was entertained with a discussion of London by Mrs. David M. Edwards, who lived there for a year.

The program of the Friday Afternoon Reading Club included description of various legends by Mrs. Frank Montgomery, and "Unearthing America's Ancient History" by Mrs. H. P. Clarke.

Hostesses were Mrs. C. E. Lupton and Mrs. G. F. Gross. Responses to roll call pertained to Abraham Lincoln.

"Discovering Ourselves" was the subject of Mrs. Walter Gungery at the meeting of the Irvington Quest Club, at the home of Mrs. L. A. Randall, 320 North Irvington avenue.

Play to Be Presented

Mrs. E. A. Trillipo reviewed "A White Bird Flying" by Bess Aldrich at a meeting of the Friday Afternoon Literary Club with Mrs. Herman Roesch, 2302 North La Salle street, as hostess. Club members reported on current events.

A blackface play presented by members of the Irvington Social Study Club featured the Valentine luncheon held at the home of Mrs. Robert Drum, 5740 Oak avenue.

Members of the club included Mrs. H. G. May, Mrs. G. C. Roberts and Mrs. Walter Fison, program committee, and Mrs. D. H. Giffin.

Covers were laid for club members, who were served at small tables. Red roses, the flower of the organization, were used in the decorations.

Manners and Morals

By JANE JORDAN

Jane Jordan will answer questions about love and marriage in this column. If you have a problem, write your letter now.

Dear Jane Jordan—I have been married six years and have no children. I am working every day and bringing home the bacon. My husband isn't working. When I come home at night, I would like to be noticed. I come in and get supper. My husband eats and I wash the dishes while he sits and reads.

I ask him to help, but the answer is no. I want affection, but he doesn't show any; it is like making love to the wall. I get nothing, and it is getting on my nerves. I am tired of living with four walls by myself. Please tell me what I can do to make him loveable and helpful around the house?

A WIFE.

Dear A Wife—A man seldom makes love to the woman who de-flates his ego. Many a woman who is successful as a wage earner fails as a wife because she unwittingly destroys her husband's high opinion of his own powers.

When a woman earns and a man does not, the man loses prestige in her eyes as a provider. No matter how hard she tries, she can't keep back a slight feeling of contempt for his plight. He is quick to feel the loss of her admiration and his love cools.

You expect your husband to be grateful for the fact that you earn his living, but the situation is too humiliating to be productive of gratitude. A man can be grateful when a woman pushes him forward to success on his own account, but not when she does the succeeding herself. He is willing for his wife to succeed in small ways, but he can not bear it when she surpasses him.

If you really love your husband, get busy and bind up the wounds to his vanity that your unfortunate economic experience has caused. You can't make him loveable and helpful by telling him how much he owes you, but perhaps you could awaken his affection again by convincing him that he is pretty grand in spite of everything, and that you wouldn't trade him for a big butter and egg man even if you had the chance.

The tragedy is that you can't do it truthfully, can you?

Dear Jane Jordan—If a boy asks a girl if she loves him, and the girl does love him, should she tell him so? I have known a certain boy for a long time, and when he asked me if I loved him, I didn't know what to say except yes. I wish I hadn't now. I wanted to ask him if he loved me, too, but I didn't have nerve enough.

If he ever asks me again, should I ask him, too? Every time I see him I invite him over and he says that he'll come sometime, but never does. He always is on my mind, and I try to plan a way in which to make him come, but always fail.

As I am bashful, I can't very well ask him for a date. How should I go about asking him, and how can I find out if he loves me?

BASHFUL.

Dear Bashful—It always is wise to let the young man make the first declaration of love. It also is smart to let him make his own dates without urging from you. All you can do is to look pretty and act interested when he pays you attention. If he loves you, he won't need prompting to inspire him to make dates.

Dear Jane Jordan—About two years ago I went with a girl and fell for her hard. Then we split up. In the last year I've seen her but once. I go out often with other girls. Although some of them are better looking and better company than she was, I just can't forget her. Of course you'll tell me to forget her, but that's a lot easier said than done.

JUST TWENTY.

Dear Just Twenty: Time will take care of your forgetting technique. In time the trick will be to remember her, not to forget her. If you really want the girl, I can't see why you don't go after her. Is there any good reason why you can't patch up your difficulties?
