

GARNER WILL KNOCK ON WOOD TO KEEP ORDER

Promises Democrat Senators Gavel No Longer
Will Pound Rock.

By Scripps-Howard Newspaper Alliance
WASHINGTON, March 3.—Speaker John N. Garner already has agreed to a far-reaching reform in his conduct of the senate as Vice-President.

He has promised Democratic senators to use a wooden instead of a stone base on which to hammer his gavel in pounding for order.

The confusion worse confounded by Vice-President Charles Curtis' use of stone has, the senatorial committee told "Jack," almost ruined their health and frayed their nervous system.

The stone sounding board was a gift to Curtis when he assumed office four years ago, and he immediately put it in its present place. His predecessors always were content with hammering on wood, but the man from Kansas wanted to be different, and do things in a big way.

He meant to have order even if he had to resort to a rock pile to get it. And he did that, resort to the rock pile, not get order.

Curtis Pounds on Rock

Members of the senate often have commented sharply on the Kansas' peculiarity in this respect. Time and again, in the midst of a noisy debate or set-to, the hammerings and pounding of the Vice-President have upset senate proceedings more than parliamentary procedure and language on the floor.

Even after some semblance of peace had been precipitated by his stony intervention, Curtis did not quit his belaboring of the boulder. "Uncle George" Norris showed his dislike for the vice-presidential disorder in a debate with Senator Otis Glenn (Illinois).

While they argued the merits of the Barry case so vehemently that it became almost a curbstone quarrel between the two men in the rear of the chamber, the gavel began to ring out its anvil chorus. In a temporary lull several senators sought to propound questions to Norris.

Held "Peril to Health"
"Will the gentleman yield?" asked the presiding officer as he gave a last hammer.

The Nebraska whirled and replied: "No, not even to the chair."

So a solemn group of Democratic senators waited upon "Jack." They explained that in these critical times nothing was more essential than health. They estimated that the rock pile must have robbed them of several years of life.

And "Jack," with a twinkle in his baby-blue eyes, promised to go easy on them when he mounts the rostrum.

COMEDY RELIEVES DRY LEGISLATIVE ROUTINE

House Wits Solemnly Delay Action on Bill for Two Years.

The house of representatives set a new high for clowning Thursday when it made a bill a "special order of business two years from now at 10 a. m."

The motion came as the house considered a bill providing for election of a nonpartisan county educational board of five members to administer and supervise education, including the appointment of county superintendents. The bill, also abolished township advisory boards and gave the education board the right to employ or discharge teachers and set salaries.

Representative J. Clayton Hughes (Dem., Elkhart) moved for indefinite postponement and Representative J. Clegg Ellyson (Dem., Hammond) made the two-year motion. Since a motion of that kind takes precedence over postponement, the house solemnly adopted it.

The veteran Representative Martin T. Krueger (Dem., Michigan City) dryly suggested that "the Governor suspend the next legislative election for two years," to the accompaniment of applause.

BEATS 'DEPORTATION'

Eleanor Wesa, 14 (above), of Newcastle, Wash., made up her mind she wouldn't go to Russia, though her father planned to take her there.

Eleanor, American born, appealed to juvenile and immigration authorities, churches and women's clubs. After a long fight, she became a voluntary ward of the juvenile court, and thus gained the right to stay in America.

STATE 'SET' FOR REPEAL PARLEY

Senate Passes Measure to Provide for Convention;
Goes to McNutt.

Completing the trio of measures dealing with alcoholic beverages, the bill providing for a state convention to vote on repeal of the eighteenth amendment today is on its way to Governor Paul V. McNutt for approval.

By a vote of 35 to 7, the state senate, acting under suspension of rules late Thursday, adopted the house measure setting up machinery for the constitutional convention.

Conference committees today are ironing out discrepancies in language, preparatory to formal enrollment.

Delegates to the convention, to be called by the Governor this spring, must declare in advance whether they are for or against repeal and file formal declarations with the county clerk.

One delegate will be elected from each of the ninety-two counties, with another delegate representing each 10,000 of population. Total number is 414.

Wet leaders wanted fewer delegates and the dries wanted more. The plan, as set forth in the new law, is a compromise.

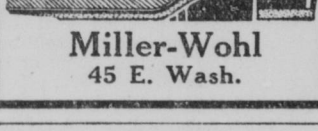

Passage of the bill in the senate was uneventful, the few dry senators apparently believing that further opposition was useless.
