Hundreds of Scouts and their friends today paraded through the downtown district to the Indiana theater where a special show was presented for them.

Japan's aims in North China, including the welding of all Jehol province into Manchukuo even before her seizure of the Chinese province is accomplished, are shown in this map, distributed by the Japanese Chamber of Commerce in New York.

This "official" map, released while Chinese troops still fight Japan's advance, reveals Nippon's aim to extend her "puppet state" to China's Great Wall.

Don Miller, Recovering, Now Is Able to Walk

Convalescence From Broken Neck Rapid; to Return to College.

Return to college in September is the ambition that is about to be realized by J. Don Miller, Jr., who has been treated since Dec. 15 for a broken neck, incurred in a fall in the college gymnasium at Haverford, Pa.

Young Miller is the son of Dr. and Mrs. J. Don Miller, 3142 Broadway. He was returned to Indianapolis from the Bryn Mawr hospital last week and is convalescing at his home here.

The young man's recovery has been of great general interest, since such an injury is usually fatal.

According to his mother, who has been with him at the hospital since the accident, he suffered no discomfort from the trip home, and now is able to sit up three hours daily, and to walk a short distance.

He has regained completely the use of his legs and right arm, and physicians promise normal use of the left arm within a few months.

X-ray pictures reveal rapid healing in the fractured vertebrae, and within a few months a complete recovery is expected.

Young Miller is unable to do any school work during his convalescence, and is confining his hopes to a return to Haverford at the beginning of the next semester.

Bartenders Shunned 'The Fan'; All Work and No Play There

Customers Came in Steady
Stream to Popular Old-Time Saloon.

This is the last of a series of stories on Indianapolis saloons in the bygone days.

BY JAMES A. CARVIN,
Times Staff Writer

Imagine, if you can, a long bar at which customers are lined three and four deep, while a staff of bartenders labor ceaselessly at passing out drinks.

And this same place had a reputation which caused it to be shunned by members of the bartenders' union, because of the pace which was necessary to keep the customers satisfied.

This saloon where there was so much business was the old-time bar known as The Fan, located at 22-24 North Delaware street. It was owned and operated by Chris Zimmerman.

One of the staff of bartenders employed in The Fan is Lonnie Lyster, 116 North Noble street. Lyster also owned his own saloon at one time, located at Maryland and Davidson streets.

Bar Was Popular

"In the days when saloons took the places of clubs as gathering places for men, The Fan was one of the most popular in the city," says Lyster. "I know, because I worked behind the bar there. During the rush hours it was impossible to wait on a customer immediately. Each had to wait his turn."

"Why, if one of the bartenders was sick or laid off for some reason or other, we couldn't get a substitute. When we would go down to union hall to get a man, they would walk away when they learned what saloon it was."

"Work in The Fan?" they'd say. "No, thanks. That place is too busy. Maybe after half an hour or so you could persuade a man to take the job for a day."

Always a Crowd

"We opened at 6 in the morning and stayed open until midnight and there were few minutes during the day when there wasn't a good crowd in the place."

Zimmerman later operated the Oakley Club, near Maywood, a popular roadhouse of the day, Lyster said.

Police records show that he made his threat good. He came to the city, obtained a gun, and returned to the club. Confronting Zimmerman, he opened fire without warning and killed him.

Another favorite barroom was Considerable "cash" passed over the bar each day in Johnny Cash's saloon at 25 North East street, in pre-prohibition days. The photo of the saloon's interior is the property of Lonnie Lyster, a former bartender and saloon owner in the city.

Johnny Cash's place at 25 North East street, Lyster recalls.

"It was a well-patronized bar and had a large trade among the working men, but it didn't approach the crowds of The Fan," Lyster said.

Also intimately acquainted with Indianapolis saloons of days gone by is Frank Dougherty, who now operates a poolroom at 134½ North Pennsylvania street.

Dougherty's acquaintance with bars of the city was due to his activity as a champion pool and billiard player. Most of the good barrooms of the city were equipped with pool tables and, forty years ago, Dougherty was among the best players in the state.

Old-timers also recall the saloon operated by John Heinlein, at 23 West Ohio street. It was one of the most popular resorts of news-paper men and politicians.

Many of the city's reporters, who later were graduated to other fields, used Heinlein's as a base of operations, keeping in touch with their city editors and "runs" by telephone.

Many of the political coups of the day were hatched over a glass of beer in Heinlein's, as politicians held impromptu conferences with henchmen.

And no reporter ever needed to be told "to drop into Heinlein's and see what's going on."

LAY PLANS FOR TOM MOONEY'S 'LIBERTY TRIAL'

Defense Attorneys to Call
100 Witnesses; Billings
Will Testify.

By United Press
SAN FRANCISCO, March 28—Defense attorneys mapped plans today to subpoena 100 witnesses for the forthcoming trial of Tom Mooney, who placed his life at stake in a gamble for liberty.

Warren K. Billings, sentenced to life imprisonment with Mooney as an asserted participant in the 1916 San Francisco Preparedness day bombing, in which ten persons were killed, will be brought from Folsom prison as a defense witness, Defense Attorney Leo Gallagher told the United Press.

At his own request Mooney will go on trial April 26 on an old murder indictment, pending since the original trial. Death by hanging is permissible under the indictment.

All Were Named

"We will subpoena Rena Mooney, wife of the prisoner; Israel Weinberg, Los Angeles jitney driver, and Edward D. Nolan of Cleveland," Gallagher said. All had been named in original indictments.

Gallagher, who will be joined a week before the trial by Frank P. Walsh, veteran New York labor attorney, said they also will subpoena eighteen witnesses who at the original trial testified Mooney and his wife were standing on top of a building a mile and a half from the scene when the explosion occurred.

Evidence Never Refuted

"Their testimony never has been refuted," the attorney asserted. "There is a photograph, showing Mooney and his wife on top of that building. A clock in the background fixes the time. We will introduce that photograph—and let the prosecution call its witnesses that the photo was faked, if they have any."

Who will form the prosecution still was in doubt today. With District Attorney Matthew A. Brady disqualified by his own expression of faith in the defendant, word was awaited from State's Attorney-General U. S. Webb who may appoint a special prosecutor. If he fails to act, the trial judge may appoint one,

Weather conditions at 9 a.m.: North-northwest wind, 7 miles an hour; temperature, 45; barometric pressure, 30.30 at sea level; general condition, clear; ceiling, unlimited; visibility, 8 miles.

ILLUSION:
A "strong man" once gave public performances in which he stopped a 9 lb. cannon ball shot from a fully charged cannon. The audience gasped when the gun flashed and the human Gibraltar stepped forward out of the smoke uninjured, with the 9 lb. shot in his hands.

EXPLANATION:
The trick lay in the way an assistant prepared the cannon for the performance. He used the regulation amount of powder and wadding, but placed the greater part of the charge of powder ahead of the shot. The cannon ball was propelled only by the small charge behind it which was just sufficient to lob the 9 lb. ball over to the strong man.

— NO TRICKS
.. JUST COSTLIER
TOBACCO

It's fun to be fooled—
... it's more fun to KNOW

A performance sometimes staged in cigarette advertising is the illusion that cigarettes are made easy on the throat by some special process of manufacture.

EXPLANATION: All cigarettes are made in almost exactly the same way. Manufacturing methods are standard and used by all. A cigarette is only as good as the tobacco it contains.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

In costly tobaccos you will find mildness, good taste, throat-ease.

Smoke Camels critically, and give your taste a chance to appreciate the greater pleasure and satisfaction offered by the more expensive tobaccos. Other cigarettes, we believe, will taste flat and insipid to you forever after.
