

Brown County Habitues of City Are Returning to Haunts as Spring Calls

Prominent Local Cabin Owners Anticipate 'Flowering' of Famed Hills After Fall and Winter Season of Fox Hunting.

When the Brown county habitues begin telling you that the redoubt and dogwood will burst into bloom next week, you may begin developing symptoms of "spring fever." So assume the luxury of languishing until one of your friends at the "hills" takes you in. Then rejoice.

The new season of awakening life in the hills is beckoning to its Indianapolis cabin owners. They are returning to their retreats to wander over the hills and to marvel at its flowering. But the Brown county season isn't just opening. It's never been closed.

Members of the Gnow Bone Hunt and Kennel club have been gathering all winter at their cabin for runs after the elusive fox. Riding to the hounds continues from November through January.

Heeding the baying of the hounds and shrill notes of the huntsman's horn are Fred Bates Johnson, the founder of the club; Kurt Vonnegut, Glenn Van Auken, Lowell H. Patterson, Guy A. Wainwright and Benjamin Hitz, all of Indianapolis.

The chase also is heralded by the shouts of Gaar Williams, cartoonist of Chicago, Abram Boyd of Cambridge City and Clark C. Wright of Chicago.

Ed Volland, described as a "lovable native" is master of hounds. Five bird dogs, eight beagles and one night dog are kept in trim for the week-end hunts, with the native foxes as the prey.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Jameson have been spending week-ends at their cabin all winter. They share their twenty-five acre place with Mrs. Jameson's sister, Mrs. Roy Miller and Mr. Miller.

Located on Bearblossom Creek, their cabin is near the only railroad in the county at Heimburg. During the past week they have been supervising planting of a thousand evergreen trees.

Lilly Is Ready

J. K. Lilly is beginning his pilgrimages to his 400-acre "Hambleton Forest," named for one of the pioneers. Three hundred acres of forest has not been touched by an ax for seventy years.

On the highest point Mr. Lilly has erected a fire watch tower, equipped with telephone where a look-out is kept constantly. Two miles of walking trails and three and a half miles of winding roads through the valley are luring Mr. Lilly from the city.

Harper Ransburg and his family have begun their jaunts to the Hills whose spring beauties, he claims, rival its famed autumn glory. "The hills are blanketed with green moss and fern, interspersed with white 'service berry.' Red and bluebirds are numerous and butterflies are appearing," he reports.

Col. Richard Lieber is another early visitor to the county which he enhances with liberal planting of trees and shrubs.

Other to Go

Others whose families are succumbing to the lure of the county are Q. G. Noblitt, Benjamin Hitz, Bernard Korby, Dr. John E. Wyttenbach, and Dr. Frank Brayton.

Of great interest to the county frequenters is the "New Map of the Quaint and Well Known Part of the Province of Indiana Known as the Hills of Brown County," drawn by C. Carey Cloud of Nashville.

The diagram of the locality avowedly shows "activities and facts with many wisecracks" of the county "inhabited by natives, sumac, sassafras and artists."

School days have come to an abrupt halt as class discussions, laboratory experiments and reference work mark time for the annual arrival of spring.

From now until Easter, young women enrolled in the various colleges and universities throughout the country, are making pilgrimages home for their spring vacations.

Their visits with relations and friends will involve dances, luncheon dates, shopping engagements and exciting activity as contrasted with class routine, and perhaps, "midnight oil."

Miss Dorothy Young, who is attending the Monticello seminary in Godfrey, Ill., is with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard S. Young, 4353 North Pennsylvania street. Miss Charlotte Twitty is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Twitty, 3319 North Meridian street, during the annual holidays at the Goucher college at Baltimore.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Benjamin Marks, 4265 North Pennsylvania street, have as their guest their daughter, Miss Ruth Claire Marks, who is a student at Wellesley.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Pell, who attends the Stevens college at Columbia, Mo., is spending her vacation with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Glenn J. Pell, 7335 North Meridian street. Miss Ruth Pinkham has come from Sweet Briar college at Sweet Briar, Va., to be with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph H. Pinkham, 3736 North Herdian street, during the school vacation.

New Wall Paper in All Its Glory Here; Border Idea Unique; Plaids Used

Stripes Introduced in More Formal Treatment; Delicate Colors Used in Drapery Design.

BY HELEN LINDSAY

THE 1933 wall paper tends to encroach on the effects of gingham, chintz, drapes, pottery and veneers. It is shown in all its newest glory at Coppock Bros., interior decorators.

For the more formal treatment in home decoration, stripes are introduced in the new wall coverings. The low ceilings are relieved in this way, and the paper makes a fitting background for the eighteenth century furniture vogue. Delicate colors are used in a paper with a drapery design, suitable for homes with master bedrooms or other rooms of spacious dimensions.

Dining rooms are treated charmingly with a paper in conventional, disconnected pattern, reproducing pottery designs often found on Wedgwood. Where this paper is used a plain one decorates the room below the chair rail.

Scenic effects in dull monotonies are to be used in papering halls. Coaches, peasant children with donkeys, and other effects decorate this hall paper.

The small house has been especially considered in the season's designs. Very small chintz patterns can be used attractively with larger patterned draperies.

A reproduction of chamberlain in dainty pastel plaids give an informal and intimate air to the bedrooms of the smaller house. Unique in this treatment is the border idea, which, instead of being used around the ceiling line, now frames window facings and doors, and is carried along the baseboard of the room. Where this is used, little other decoration is necessary or suitable.

Coppock's is using a decidedly different idea in decoration of breakfast rooms, with a paper of knotty pine design covering the side walls, and bright colored plaid paper on the ceiling.

Pastel satin striped paper is suggested for dainty bedrooms. With the new wall paper, a tinted plaster ceiling gives a softer, different look. If the ceiling of the room has been papered before, a background of plain paper can be used to cover the ceiling, and tinted to give the seamless, plaster effect.

Puppet Show for Children

As a climax to the week of spring vacation, L. S. Ayres entertained children with a puppet show in the auditorium of the store Friday and today. The old folk-lore tales of "Jack and the Beanstalk," "Cinderella," and "The Three Bears," given by Helen Joseph and her puppets, delighted groups of youngsters at morning and afternoon performances.

Gift Ideas Are Different

DIFFERENT gift ideas greet the shopper in Gran's Gift Shop, on the Circle. A set of bridge ash trays is made of bakelite, with an individual lighter attached to each tray. The trays are made in the shape of card symbols, suitably colored.

A clever pin cushion is a tiny enameled bed, holding two night-capped figures. The gingham coverlet is to be used for pins.

A decorated cake safe, with a porcelain tray and wire handles, also can serve as a sandwich tray when the cover is removed.
