Vegetables Divided Into Classes for Endurance

BY W. R. BEATTIE
Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

WHEN to plant early vegetables in gardens is a question that must be settled by each gardener for himself.

Naturally, there are certain rules by which the gardener can be guided, but experience one year after, another is the best guide.

We have about three general classes of vegetables as regards earliness of planting. These are: First, the ones that are resistant to cold; second, those that are only moderately resistant; and third, those that are injured easily by frost or even by low temperatures.

In the first group we have onions, peas, lettuce, spinach, kale, cabbage, broccoli, collard, turnips and mustard greens.

Potatoes Moderately 'Tough'

In the second group we have potatoes, beets, carrots, radishes, cauliflower, celery, snap beans and sweet corn.

The third group includes lima beans, summer squash, melons, cucumbers, sweet potatoes, tomatoes, peppers, eggplant and okra. Potatoes are placed in the second group because, although they will not stand frost, they may be planted fairly early, because they require about two or three weeks to come up after planting.

The first group can be planted considerably in advance of the date when the last killing frost in the spring may be expected.

The second group may be planted about the time of the final killing frost.

The third group should be planted only after all danger of frost is past, and after the soil has warmed up.

The Way to Judge

For example, in regions where average date of the final killing frost in spring, the crops included in group one could be planted the first week in April, those of the second group from April 15 to 20, and those of the third group, about the first week in May, or perhaps the last week in April, provided the sea-

Squad Organized 18 Years Ago to Perform for 'Congress.'

The Ben-Hur Life Association drill team, composed of twenty-four members, under the direction of Louis H. Mills, captain, will give an exhibition drill at Elkhart for the annual Ben-Hur congress, May 19 to 21.

The team is one of the leading groups in the city and has made many exhibition drills throughout the state. They have been holding regular practice following the association's regular business meeting each Wednesday night at the lodge hall, 322 East New York street, in preparation for the trip.

The drill squad was organized eighteen years ago, and two of the charter members of the team still are active. They are Captain Mills and his wife, Mrs. Gladys Mills. Mills has been captain of the team six years.

Special benefit entertainments, including card parties, paper sales, and demonstrations are being sponsored by the team to help defray the expenses for the trip.

Corinthian O. E. S. to Entertain

Corinthian chapter, O. E. S., will entertain the members of Indianapolis chapter on Wednesday evening, April 5, and the officers of Indianapolis chapter will exemplify the ritualistic work on that evening.

Security Benefit Group to Hold Initiation Rites

Meeting Place Is Changed to Odd Fellows' Hall on East Side.

Marion Council of the Security Benefit Association has announced the change of their meeting place from 101 East Maryland street to the Odd Fellows hall, Hamilton avenue and Washington street.

The first meeting in the new hall will be held Thursday night with J. J. Mescal, president, presiding. All members are asked to attend the meeting at which initiation will be held.

The council has also announced their program for the month, which will include a card party, Thursday, April 13; an entertainment by the Ben Hur Life Association drill team of Arries Court No. 5, Thursday, April 20, and presentation of a one-act play, "The Branch of Promise," which will be given by the Marion Council.

EAGLES WILL HOLD PROGRAM

Boxing and Wrestling to Be Attraction for Lodge
Tonight.

Boxing and wrestling card, including a battle royal, will be the main attraction at tonight's meeting of Indianapolis Eagles aerie at the lodge home, 43 West Vermont street. A musical program also is being arranged.

The program will conclude a series of pep meetings preliminary to an initiation next Sunday afternoon when a class honoring Dr. J. J. Briggs, aerie physician, will be inducted. He has obtained applications of nearly a score of employees of a local company, and several other candidates also will be in the class.

Drill teams and officers staffs from other Indiana aeries have officiated at several monthly initiations during the winter, but next Sunday it is planned to have the local exemplified by officers of the aerie, headed by President Grover V. Vandenberg.

General arrangements for the pep meetings and initiations are in charge of Fred J. Snyder of Indianapolis, Seventh district chairman.

players, April 27, to be followed by entertainment specialties, dancing and cards.

The degree team of the council, which is captained by Everett Taylor, Wednesday gave a pie social and dance in the old hall on East Maryland street, and an attendance of more than 100 members and their friends were present.

SCIENCE LEADERS TO HEAR UNIQUE CONCERT

Stokowski to Direct Philadelphia
Orchestra by Wire in Capital.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—With the Philadelphia symphony orchestra playing in Philadelphia, and with Leopold Stokowski and the audience miles away in a great hall in Washington, the National Academy of Sciences and guests on April 27 will hear a unique symphony concert.

This symphony program will be a novel supplement to the annual spring meeting of the National Academy, which brings together science leaders.

Engineers of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company will play an important part in the symphony as Stokowski and his musicians. Three telephone lines will connect the Washington hall where Stokowski and the audience are located with the Philadelphia hall where the musicians perform.

Stokowski will be able to control the audience in a manner that would be impossible if the orchestra were playing directly to them. The multiple telephone lines will allow the transmission of overtones and music qualities lacking in ordinary long distance telephone transmission.
