

VANGUARD OF FOREST ARMY MAY START MOVING TOWARD WORK CAMPS BY TONIGHT

Labor Department Officials in 16 Big Cities
Are Selecting First Contingent of 25,000 to Be Enlisted.

BY FREDERICK A. STORM,
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The vanguard of President Roosevelt's army of 25,000 unemployed was being enrolled today to work in the forests for $1 a day and their keep.

Labor department representatives in sixteen big cities of the east and middlewest were selecting the first contingent of 25,000. It is hoped to have some of them headed for conditioning camps by nightfall.

The first recruits were unmarried men between 18 and 25, with dependents.

Robert Fehner, director of conservation relief work, explained that the first 25,000 were being enrolled in large cities because labor department representatives there already had obtained names of needy cases from relief agencies.

In a few days enrollment offices will be set up in smaller communities and in the west to permit selection of the rest of the army.

Remain for Six Months

The recruits will take an oath to remain in the conservation corps for six months, unless released earlier, and to obey all regulations on penalty of dismissal.

The recruits will be sent at once to regular United States army camps near their home cities.

They will remain there two weeks for physical examinations, instruction in their new work by forestry experts, and to be outfitted with clothes. Then they will be dispatched to the work camps in the forests.

There will be about 1500 work camps, with between 100 and 200 men assigned to each.

38 Camps Are Located

The forest service last night announced the location of the first thirty-eight camps: George Washington national forest, Virginia, three; Monongahela national forest, West Virginia, three; Natural Bridge forest, Virginia, three; Umatilla, Tennessee, two; Pisgah, North Carolina, four; Nantahala, North Carolina, two; Cherokee, Tennessee, two; Choctawhatchee, Florida, two; Okefenokee, Florida, two; Ouachita, Arkansas, six; Ozark, Arkansas, three; Allegheny, Pennsylvania, three, and one each in undetermined locations in Georgia and South Carolina.

AKRON MEN TO WHITE HOUSE

Roosevelt Hears Three Survivors' Stories of Disaster.

New York dignitaries gathered for a solemn high mass of requiem for the lost.

The heavy cruiser Portland, in charge of the search, advised today that ships under its command had picked up four pieces of wreckage from the Akron.

The wreckage included an empty gas tank, a spare radio transmitting power tube, a life raft from the Akron's airplane compartment and bits of wood.

The navy department at Washington was advised today that airplane pilots have sighted "wreckage covering a considerable area about three miles abreast of Barnegate Beach."

Naval officials insisted there still remained a possibility that some survivors might be found on floating wreckage far from the place of the Akron's final flight, New Jersey, where the Akron went down early Tuesday in a lightning storm. But none pretended to any confidence that more would be found alive.

Cardinal to Preside at Mass

The mass of requiem was arranged at St. Patrick's cathedral, with Cardinal Hayes presiding in his capacity as chaplain bishop of the United States army and navy.

Though primarily for relatives and friends of the seventy-one missing men, and for the two whose bodies were found, the ceremonies were open to the public.

The Rev. F. T. Russell, president of St. John's seminary in Brooklyn, whose brother, William, chief machinist's mate of the Akron, is among the missing, was called upon to serve as celebrant at the mass. Other officiating clergymen were all naval chaplains.

Army and naval and marine detachments from the New York navy attended.

Admiral W. W. Phelps, commandant at the navy yard, and his staff were among those who met to mourn the lost in the worst of all disasters.

At Lakehurst, services were held Wednesday for Lieutenant Commander David E. Cummings, who died when the blimp, J-3 crashed on a rescue mission. He was to be buried in Arlington national cemetery, Washington, today.

Still Search for Bodies

The first investigation into the disaster to get under way appeared likely to be the inquest into the death of Robert W. Copeland, chief radio operator of the Akron, who died aboard the German tanker Phoebeus after he and three companions had been rescued.

Real Admiral Phelps appointed Lieutenant Commander J. H. Hoffman head of a court of inquiry to make a formal report upon the death of Copeland, whose body was at the Brooklyn navy hospital morgue.

The destroyer Cole returned to New York late Wednesday from the scene of search of Jersey, but expected to put out again today.

It reported that wreckage it had found had been delivered to the cruiser Portland, in charge of rescue operations.

An officer of the Cole predicted that with warmer weather, bodies of Akron victims soon would come to the surface. Only one body, aside from Copeland's had been recovered.
