

Beauty and Simplicity of Nature Reproduced in Home Show Garden

Woodland Haunt, Japanese Scene Among Creations of Amateurs to Be on Display at Exhibit Opening Tonight.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN,

A STROLL through a formal English garden into a picturesque Japanese scene and on through a typical Indiana woodland haunt is invited by amateur women gardeners at the Indianapolis home show, opening tonight at the fairgrounds.

The woodland scene designed by Indiana Federation of Garden Club representatives is typical—from an old rail fence to the native wild flowers, rambling in rock ledges and shooting from beneath lichen logs.

Mrs. M. S. Goulding and Mrs. Eugene Foley planned the scene in keeping with the simplicity of untended nature. Moss and water cress grow from the log, falling across the bog. Water marigolds lift up their flamboyance from the pool, and ferns trail from sandy ridges.

Fabled Pan pipes his song in the English formal garden nook of the Indianapolis Garden Club. Silver birches and red cedar form the background for the sprightly figure, who looks down on a carpet-like lawn, edged with primrose, iris, grape hyacinth and mertenias.

Brick Wall Encloses Plot

Miss Burgan Mrs. W. Richardson Sinclair uprooted a flowering plum sapling from her own garden and Miss Elizabeth Bertermann contributed a flowering crab to lend color to the background of green. Mrs. Bowman Elder personally supervised the erection of the low brick wall, enclosing the plot.

The authentic Japanese garden on the J. I. Holcomb estate provided the theme for the arrangement of the Neophyte Club project. The low bushy evergreen trees, typical of the Oriental garden, spread over the scene. Long-legged cranes stand in the pool, watered by tinkling falls. Sacred figures are enshrined in a natural worship spot, and a stone lantern sends out its light.

The stepping stones of the semi-formal garden of flower beds and evergreen, designed by the Irvington Club lead into the more modern, minimalist walled-in garden of the Forest Hill Club.

American Garden Quaint

A checkerboard terrace is effected by blocks of alternating bent grass and Bedford stone.

Mrs. Rex Young completes the scene with a statue at one end and a bench at the other. Mrs. W. N. South visioned the arrangements of the Irvington plan.

A quaintly American garden with a rambling rose trellis is depicted by the Marigold Club, whose scheme was devised by Mrs. William Gabe and Mrs. Hugh Fatout. Evergreen trees in graduated heights and brightly colored flower beds form the setting for a lawn bench at one end.

Planning and construction of the gardens was supervised by Fred C. Horne, amateur garden chairman.

Clever Merchandise on Display in City Stores; Inspired by 3.2 Arrival

Clothing, Accessories, and Gadgets of All Kinds Appear on Many Counters; Hosiery Colors Show 'Brew' Trend.

BY HELEN LINDSAY.

THOUGH arguments gain impetus on the question of the potency of 3.2 beer, there is no controversy concerning the genius exhibited in the clever new beer merchandise. The endless procession of inventions for the proper serving of the new legal drink marches right on, in clothing, accessories and gadgets of every description.

New beer aprons, made of white duck or linen, take a vital place of interest in the display at Charles Mayer's. These are voluminous affairs, made with a bib, in which a wire is inserted. They can be fitted about the waist over even "party clothes," and whisked off at a moment's notice. The wire in the belt can be removed when the apron is laundered, and replaced without difficulty. The aprons bear pertinent inscriptions and decorations, in large black figures.

Packages of eight coasters, in colored bakelite, are shown at Mayer's, attractively wrapped in cellophane. A spun aluminum cooler has a large compartment for ice, with a tray fitted into the top which will hold four bottles.

Accessories Are Inexpensive

FOR serving of other summer beverages, Mayer's displays a tray of inexpensive accessories. There is a combination bell, bottle opener and corkscrew; a wooden "muddler," for mixing of cooling drinks, and bottle stoppers, reproductions of comic characters. The stoppers are equipped with small wooden "triggers," which furnish mild amusement by opening or closing the eyes and mouths of the figures.

All the tricks of the most de luxe soda fountain can be had at home, with the use of an ice cube crusher sold at Mayer's, together with a lime or lemon squeezer, and a fizz syphon, which will allow the extraction of any small portion from a bottle of ginger ale without ruining the contents of the remainder of the bottle.

Even Hose Show Beer Motif

RYE, malt and swaggar are the new colors shown in the No-Mend hosiery at the William H. Block Company. In a recent window display of these new shades, introduced as a feature of the return of beer, Block's covered a table covered with a red checkered cloth, on each side of which were the swinging doors of the old-time saloon.

Cardboard models in "gay ninety" reproductions were pictured, holding foaming steins. Cut-out designs showed the new hosiery colors.
