

SHANGHAI NIGHT LIFE SWIFTEST IN ALL WORLD

'Paris of Orient' Gives Free Rein to Every Kind of Revelry.

BY GEORGE KIRKSEY

United Press Staff Correspondent
SHANGHAI, April 28.—For unrestrained gayety, riotous living and nocturnal revelry, Shanghai sets a pace as swift as any of the world's playgrounds.

The night life of Paris, London, Berlin, or New York is no more wild than that of Shanghai, the gayest city of the Far East.

From darkness to dawn one is never at a loss for a place to dine, dance, and frolic. Shanghai abounds in night clubs and cabarets. Called the "Paris of the Orient," Shanghai gives a free rein to all indulgences.

New York night life in its 1928 and 1929 zenith never reached the tempo of Shanghai's frenzied frolic. New York hot spots would have to step up their tempo to compete against Shanghai's nightly revelries.

Shanghai's abundant night clubs make for keen competition.

Off the Rue du Consulat, in the French Concession, there is a short street called Rue Chu-Pao-San with more cabarets per square foot than any other spot in the world.

There is a club to fit practically every purpose. For $5 (gold), about $25 (Mex.), you can stay up all night, dance with beautiful women, buy enough highballs to keep from getting sleepy, and have a rattling good time, if night life is your fancy.

Other places you must dig a bit deeper, but you have the finest food, wines and entertainment in the house for your money.

But if you know the inside you can cabaret in Shanghai a month on $100 American money.

The prettiest girls in Shanghai are Russians, who migrated after the revolution. They are employed as hostesses, and are vaguely similar to the taxi dance hall girl in the United States.

They are, however, more beautiful, better educated and better company than the hostesses in the best American night clubs. Some of them are descendants of Russian royalty.

Most of the other girls are French, Chinese, Eurasians, and Italians.

But most of the hostesses are Chinese girls, and about 75 per cent of the trade is supplied by the better class of Chinese men, who are passionately fond of dancing the American dance steps.

It is surprising to find how well the Chinese girl has learned the latest American dance steps.

It is unusual to find a bad dancer among the Chinese girls. Most of them dress in semi-European style, retaining the high collar and split skirts.

They all wear silk stockings and the slit in their dress reveals their legs to well above the knee.

Most of the bands are composed of Filipinos, although there are a few Russian orchestras.

Contract Bridge

QUESTION frequently asked in regard to the constructive one over one system is "What is the rule and guide for a third hand opening bid?"

As you know, in the one over one system, when you make an original bid in first or second position, you are telling your partner that you have the foundation upon which to build for a game or a slam.

You have definite rebid values in your hand. In other words, you are bidding for your partner.

When both first and second hands pass, and it comes to you third hand, your partner has told you that, while his hand may contain as high as three quick tricks, (and I have passed originally with a hand containing as many as four quick tricks) he doesn't have the type of a hand on which he wishes to start the bidding.

You are now in a peculiar position. If your hand contains little or no strength, then undoubtedly fourth hand has quite a few tricks and will open the bidding. If you can, get in a lead director, or any kind of a bid that may upset your opponents—even a psychic.

You know third hand is the best place in which to employ a psychic. However, they never should be made unless you have a perfect "out."

In other words, in bidding third hand you bid against your opponents, therefore if you think that you have a hand that will upset the opponents, or have a good lead director, open the bidding third hand and you will not get into a great deal of trouble.

In the following hand, North's soundest opening is one diamond. What should East do? Overcall with two hearts?

I don't believe so. I prefer to make the informative double, that is going to tell my partner that my hand contains either hearts or spades—possibly both—and it quickly tells partner that the hand has some possibilities.

South will pass the informative double. West will respond with one spade. East then will bid two hearts, showing his partner that he has no spade support, but that his double was based entirely on hearts and side strength.

West is justified in supporting the heart bid to three. East can reason that his partner would not carry him to three hearts with only spade strength, therefore he either has strength in clubs or diamonds, or is short in one of those suits. East has a good bid of four hearts.

South will open the ten of diamonds which North will win and return a diamond, declarer winning the second lead with the king.

The declarer should not try for the heart finesse, because if it fails—as it will—and South wins, he will return a heart, which will stop a club ruff.

The declarer should immediately lead a club. When the third diamond is led, he can ruff, lead a heart, and ruff in dummy, returning a heart, win with his ace, and then proceed to cross-ruff the hand out, making his contract of four odd.

BABY CHICK SHOW TO BE HELD AT PURDUE

Display to Be Held in Connection With Annual Egg Exhibit.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., April 28.—Between 1,200 and 1,500 outstanding members of the younger generation of Hoosier farmers and farm home-makers will gather at Purdue university May 3 to 5 for the fifteenth annual Boys' and Girls' 4-H Club Round-Up, which will provide a busy three days of instruction, judging contests, and entertainment. Attendance is limited to not more than five per cent of the club enrollment in a county.

Activities will start Wednesday, May 3, with the day devoted to the state of the annual health contest for both boys and girls, which will lead to the crowning of new state health champions; demonstration and judging contests in corn, poultry and eggs, beef cattle, swine and sheep for the boys, and the demonstration contest for girls. The youngsters will be the guests of the athletic department at the Purdue-Chicago baseball game in the afternoon.

Thursday will be a big day with a continuation of the various judging contests and "open house" at the poultry, home economics, and agricultural buildings and the horticultural green houses, with the forestry department co-operating.

Addressed by Director J. H. Skinner and Dean Mary L. Matthews, will feature Friday morning's general session. The new health champions will be presented at the afternoon session. Separate banquets for the boys and girls will be held Friday evening, with the annual "open house" of the schools of engineering and pharmacy and the chemistry department providing the evening's entertainment.

From seventy to eighty entries of baby chicks, with twenty-five in each entry, are expected to compete for the numerous prizes offered on tiny bits of fluff and down. Baby chick producers from all sections of the state, from Illinois, Ohio, Wisconsin, and far-away Montana have entered chicks. Classes have been provided for White and Barred Rocks, White Wyandottes, White Leghorns, Buff Orpingtons, Rhode Island Reds, miscellaneous and display groups, including four of each breed represented. Goslings, ducklings and baby turkeys also will be shown.

The present oil needs of the United States are approximately 2,000,000 barrels of oil a day; present production is estimated at 2,250,000 barrels a day.

THREE AUTOS BURNED

Loss of Several Hundred Dollars Is Caused by Fire.

Loss of several hundred dollars was caused shortly before midnight Thursday when fire destroyed three automobiles, a garage and chicken brooder house owned by L. Jackson, near Sixty-second street and Cooper avenue.

Fire apparatus of the brooder house is believed to have started the fire. Firemen estimated loss on the buildings alone at $800, but lacked figures on value of the automobiles.
