SHARP SLUMP HITS SALE OF
BEER IN STATE

Receipts Drop Rapidly in Wake of Wild Stampede at Start.

Sharp decline in beer drinking in Indiana within two weeks after the advent of the new "three-two" was shown today with announcement of state funds derived from importers' tax and tax on Indiana-made brews.

During the first eight days of the new beer return, ending April 15, importers and domestic manufacturers paid the state $19,761.55. From April 15 to 30, however, this dropped with the five-day period yielding only $18,307.02.

One week average, for comparison with the first eight days, meant only slightly more than $9,000 a week was obtained in taxes the latter part of the month. That is a drop of more than $10,000 compared to the first rush.

Public Resents Price

Resentment of the drinking public against the high price of beer, caused partly by the numerous taxes and "split" with the importers, is given as the chief cause of the minor "boycott."

In Indiana, during the first eight days, more than 131,760 cases of beer were consumed. In the next two-week period this figure dropped approximately half.

Lack of permits and haggling over prices were given today by Paul Fry, state excise director, as reasons for the failure of 3.2 wine to appear in Indiana.

Fry explained that the beer control law does permit sale of 3.2 wine, but an additional permit must be procured. He is having his attorney and the office of the attorney-general study procedure in the issuance of wine permits, he said.

Permits Not Printed

The permits have not been printed and, therefore, sales still are impossible under the law, it was pointed out.

Applications for wine permits are not procurable at the State House. Under the law, the retail dealer must pay another $100 for permission to sell 3.2 wine, it was said.

Two other classifications of wine have been made by Fry and rules covering their sale are being drafted. One class is that of wine tonics, which must conform to the federal requirement of containing 20 per cent solids in solution for a 20 per cent alcoholic content, it was explained.

The other for the natural wines that now can be sold at drug stores having whisky permits. These are the port, sherries and similar types that run from 12 to 20 per cent in alcoholic content and have not been diluted to meet the 3.2 test.

OSLO, Norway, May 8.—The death of twenty-three members of the crew in the sinking of the Russian icebreaker Rouslan, off the south coast of the island of West Spitzbergen, in the Arctic ocean, was revealed today.

The rescued men said the captain of the icebreaker shot himself before the vessel sank. The Rouslan had sent out a final message: "Good-by, sinking," which was caught by radio stations.

Tromsø is approximately 500 miles south of South Cape, on West Spitzbergen.

BIG FOUR IRKS
CITY BOARD BY
PAVING PROTEST

Kirk McKinney Threatens to Push Track Elevation
Program Through.

Charging that the Big Four railroad violated "a gentlemen's agreement" with the works board by signing a remonstrance against improving a section of New York street by widening and resurfacing, E. Kirk McKinney, board president, threatened retaliation today in the form of pushing through a track elevation program.

Remonstrance against the improvement proposal, which would widen New York street from forty to forty-five feet from Highland avenue to East street, was filed today, signed by 40 per cent of property owners who would be affected.

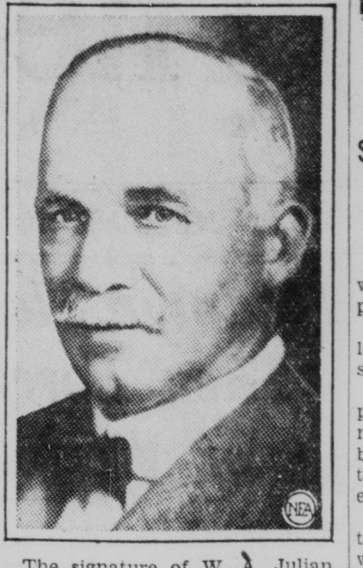

The railroad took the position that the street work would interfere with the track elevation program, part of which has been held in abeyance since 1925, and some of which is involved in litigation.

"We have been bending over backward to appease certain interests," McKinney said. "That day is past. If they are going to fight us, we will fight back."

In addition to the threat of pushing the elevation program, McKinney proposed the railroad be assessed 100 per cent for cost of as much of the New York street work as affects its property.

Way for "a retreat in good order" was left for the railroad, the board stating that the Big Four can withdraw from the remonstrance. That

$4,000,000 in Pledges to Be Obtained in Campaign for Modernization.

Before it closes today, the city-wide modernization campaign is expected to reach a goal of $4,000,000. This is $1,500,000 more than drive leaders sought when the campaign started, April 22.

The money represents pledges of property owners to repair and remodel homes, factories, apartment buildings, and business houses. A total of $3,654,000 had been reported Saturday.

Reports to campaign headquarters indicate more than 6,000 homes will be repaired and remodeled.

Hundreds of tradesmen are employed, and drive leaders estimate several thousand will be given jobs during the next six months.

Industries supplying materials report an increase in demand for paints, lumber and other materials since the campaign started.
