

DELAY LIKELY IN ACTION ON BANKING BILL

Glass Measure Probably Will Not Be Acted on by Special Session.

BY RAY TUCKER
Times Special Writer

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The Glass bank reform bill will not be passed at this session of congress unless President Roosevelt definitely places his influence behind it, in the opinion of Democratic leaders on Capitol Hill.

So far, the President has not indicated he will insist upon it. Although major differences over banking revision have been settled by the administration and Senator Carter Glass (Dem., Va.), author of the measure, the White House fears consideration would arouse controversies jeopardizing other legislation.

Already financial interests and their representatives have announced opposition to several important features.

The bill was reported to the senate Monday by the banking and currency committee, but it does not figure on the program of legislation framed by the President or Majority Leader Robinson (Dem., Ark.).

Though the senate leaders do not want to assume responsibility for delaying action, they will be content if circumstances shelve the measure.

The clause arousing most opposition in the new bill is the deposits guarantee. Bankers' associations already have flooded Capitol Hill with protests on the ground that state trials of this system proved it unworkable.

Eastern financial interests still are antagonistic to the provision requiring regulation of great private banks like J. P. Morgan & Co. and divorcement of investment affiliates from commercial institutions.

Western progressives plan to renew their fight against state-wide extension of branch banking. They also fear that the deposits guarantee will make national banks so strong that they will dominate the corner banks in their home communities.

MANY DRIVEN FROM HOMES BY TORRENT

Although White river stages dropped in Indianapolis today, sub-urban areas still held more than their share of water.

The upper photo was taken late Friday afternoon, after the last families were rescued from River park. Residential section of the park is in the extreme background of the photo, with three-quarters of a mile overflow between the home sites and the photographer.

Lower—Rose and her three-week-old calf had a tough day Friday. The water forced them from their grazing lands, to seek safety on River road at Seventy-ninth street.

FIGHT TROLLEY LINE REMOVAL

Abandoning of Meridian
Heights Run Meets Opposition at Hearing.

Confronted by unexpected opposition, proposal of the Indianapolis Railways to abandon the Meridian Heights car line on Pennsylvania street, north of Thirty-fourth street, was held up Monday before the city works board.

A. W. Kaye, 5147 North Delaware street, and John W. Bowls, 204 East Forty-seventh street, members of the protesting group, were to confer with car company officials today and obtain signatures on a proposal petition. Objections were based on increased transportation costs.

The street car company said school children will be issued ten bus fares for 6 cents if the street car line is abandoned.

The company also has informed the works board it will resurface the street between Thirty-fourth and Thirty-ninth streets on Illinois street made necessary by the proposed removal of tracks in abandonment of that portion of the Mapleton line.

Additional twelve-minute feeder bus service will be added to the bus service on North Capitol avenue to supplant the car service. The board granted the company petition for rerouting of the Butler-Fairview bus line.

WATER RATES SUIT ON AGAIN IN U. S. COURT

Building of Hypothetical
White River Dam Holds
Hearing Interest.

Building of a hypothetical dam on White river as a means of determining the Indianapolis Water Company's water rights valuation, occupied attorneys and witnesses in federal court today in the water company's suit for higher rates.

Builds Hypothetical Dam

The latter elicited from Fuller the explanation that his figure of $1,187,000 as the valuation of the company's right to divert water from White river into the canal, was based on the hypothetical construction of a dam above Noblesville. The purpose of a dam there would be to provide an even flow of water in the river the entire year below the Broad Ripple dam.

At present, he explained, the water company, through adverse possession, has the right to divert the water, but that his figure took into account the problem of the company if it just were starting out. The entire flow of the river is diverted from the section between the Broad Ripple dam and where the canal flows back into the river at Washington street, eight months each year, he said.

Lawyer Rebukes Hufsmith

If the company already did not possess the right to divert the water, he added, it would have to establish the dam above Noblesville to impound flood water in the spring or face damage suits filed by riparian rights owners along the eleven-mile stretch of the river below the canal intake.

Several times during the hearing, William L. Ransom, chief of counsel for the company, rebuked Hufsmith for not permitting Fuller to complete his answers, once remarking:

"If you would just let the witness finish answering one question, that would be a notable achievement."

U. S. PROBING J. P. MORGAN'S INCOME TAXES

Returns Made by Banking
Partners Also Are Being Examined.

(Copyright 1933 by United Press)
WASHINGTON, May 16.—J. P. Morgan's income tax returns, the United Press learned, are being studied by a senate banking committee investigator.

Returns of his partners in the great international banking firm also are being examined.

It is believed likely that the information obtained will be introduced early in the committee's investigation of the bank's operations, scheduled to begin next week.

One of the purposes of the committee's general inquiry into banking and stock market practices is to turn the spotlight on loopholes in the income tax law, and to devise legislation to plug them up.

Chairman Peter Norbeck recently predicted the committee's work would bring the government millions of dollars in additional taxes.

It was before this committee that Charles E. Mitchell, former head of the National City bank, admitted selling stocks to his wife at a loss to avoid income tax payments. He now is being tried in New York on charges that the transaction was illegal.

Charges that Andrew Mellon also avoided heavy taxes by selling stocks at a loss, and later buying them back through a corporation controlled by his family are being studied by the justice department. Returns of other wealthy persons also are being investigated.
