

COLD AND BAD ROADS BRAVED BY WAR WRITER

Jehol Life No Bed of Roses,
U. S. Correspondent
Quickly Learns.

This is the second installment of Frederick Whiteing, United Press Staff Correspondent's story written while with the Japanese army in Jehol Province, China. The difference in dates is due to the time occupied by mail transmission from Tokyo.

BY FREDERICK WHITEING
United Press Staff Correspondent

WITH THE JAPANESE ARMY, PEIPIAO, Jehol, Feb. 28.—This town, just within the eastern border of Jehol, is connected with Chinchow by a railway, the short part of which in Jehol is the only rail line in the province.

I arrived today from Chinchow on a freight train which left that city about 7 a. m., though I had been waiting at the station from dawn. The train was laden with ready-made tracks, and four-wheel trucks, for freight cars, for a light railway which is to be laid from Kohokuinzu.

Travel With Conductor

From Kohokuinzu I came here on a little train of three or four flatcars with a gasoline engine. In the train from Chinchow, I traveled in the conductor's van, packed in with a score of other newspaper men, many uncomfortably close to a little stove which was red-hot and cold by turns.

Among us was a young Japanese lieutenant. He spoke with freedom to a foreigner who could converse in his own language.

He had been in command of one of the small motor trains which carried the first Japanese troops into Peipiao.

Chinese Cheer Japanese

He told how in a village four kilometers before Peipiao, three men had come to him and said their people were peaceful villagers and asked for protection. He reassured them.

The two or three hundred villagers, overjoyed, had rushed out in welcome, waving an improvised Japanese flag made by sewing a red center on a square of white cloth—on one side only, as it had been made in a hurry.

Sniper's Shot Comes Close

WITH THE JAPANESE ARMY TRANSPORT HEADQUARTERS, CHIAOYANG, March 1.—Last night was spent in a Chinese bathhouse at Peipiao, enlightened by conversation with two Chinese brothers who knew a little English and possessed an old torn American school reader, and by the stares of customers of the establishment.

The bathhouse had plenty of warmth, a good view in this bitterly cold country, and plenty of hot tea, useful in washing down some bits of provisions I had. The bath water looked dirtier than I myself was, so I passed it up.

Tells of Food Shortage

Tonight I am staying in an abandoned Chinese building, not far from headquarters. I arrived at nightfall after traveling most of the day with a column of motor trucks, carrying soldiers and provisions. I am much busier here than the constant jolting over a bad road.

The dark, deserted streets, with an occasional fitting, shadowy figure, present an eerie appearance, and I am glad to be with the business-like Japanese soldiers, whose sentries are posted here and there. I called on the transport colonel here. He told me of conditions in Chiao-yang, occupied only a few days before; food was short, and the people had feared starvation if the Chinese soldiers had been on their hands much longer. The colonel gave me some of his own rations.

Sniper Nearly Successful

A jovial major, who told me he had had nothing to eat since yesterday, had just received a bottle by airplane and he insisted on making me take a drink, which warmed me up considerably and counteracted the numbing effects of the journey. While we were talking, a sniper slipped up among the motor trucks, and fired at the sentry just outside the colonel's door, hitting his bayonet.

With the aid of the civilian official accompanying me from the Kwangtung army headquarters, I have managed to make a fire in the stove-bed in the doorless building I am in tonight.

Only Women and Girls in 'Maedchen in Uniform'

Emilia Unda, Hertha Thiele and Dorothea Wiek Have Made Themselves Famous in a Foreign Made Movie.

BY WALTER D. HICKMAN
Do you know that "Maedchen in Uniform" is one of the greatest pictures ever to be made from the standpoint of characterization as well as emotional scope of the story.

Please do not put this movie down as just "another German-made picture," but classify it as one of the movie sensations of the last five years.

Here is realism, emotionalism and power of characterization that we seldom encounter except upon the legitimate stage.

Do not get the impression that "Maedchen in Uniform" is a war movie. It is not, because it is the story of the strict and death dealing discipline demanded in a girl's school in Potsdam where Prussian army officers sent their daughters before the war.

There is not a single male character in this story. At least three women have made themselves famous in this movie. I may be, and I think I am, in the minority, but I give the honors to Emilia Unda as the strict, stern and machine-like principal of the military school for girls.

Watch Unda as she terrorizes and makes inhuman machines out of the girls. Watch her when she realizes that she had made animals out of the girls. Watch her when she crumbles up and hobbles away on her cane.

Here is acting at all times of the Bernhardt type. Her work has tremendous scope and power. Then watch Hertha Thiele as the student Manuela, a sensitive, human, natural girl who is forced into an attempt at suicide when she realizes the horrible creature she is being frozen into by Unda.

Watch the suicide attempt scene from the standpoint of direction as well as individual and mass acting. Here is one scene I never will be able to erase from my memory. Here is gigantic, real, cruel, unmerciful theater if it ever existed. Many critics give the acting honors to Dorothea Wiek as the sympathetic school teacher who fought as strongly as she could the inhuman machine discipline of the principal of the school. I admit she does wonderful sympathetic work, a character that knows the tremendous sex longing of girls and women, but I do not concede she reaches the high dramatic peaks that Unda is able to achieve.

If you are serious minded, love to study life, then by all means go to the Ohio today and see "Maedchen in Uniform."

CORNER STONE LAID FOR CITY DENTAL SCHOOL

Delegates to Association
Convention Witness
Ceremonies.

Delegates to the seventy-fifth annual meeting of the Indiana State Dental Association attended laying of the corner stone of the Indiana university school of dentistry at noon today.

The new building is located at the Indiana university medical center on West Michigan street. It will be dedicated formally this fall.

Dr. William Lowe Bryan, president of the university, and J. W. Fessler, president of the board of trustees, spoke at the services. Arrangements were made by Dr. Frank A. Hamilton, president of the Dental Alumni Association and former president of the State Dental Association.

U. S. Leads in Dentistry

President Bryan called attention to the fact that the world conceals pre-eminence to America in dentistry.

"The nations bow in unison to America, or, rather, they hurry to get a seat in the chair of an American dentist," he said.

During today's afternoon session at the Claypool, officers were to be elected. Three delegates and their alternates to the house of delegates of the American Dental Association also were to be selected.

At 6:30 tonight, delegates will meet at the jubilee dinner at the Indianapolis Athletic Club, celebrating the founding of the association, which is the oldest state association of dentists in the United States.

Special Guests Here

Among special guests at this dinner will be Dr. G. Walter Dittmar, Chicago, president of the American Dental Association; Dr. Harry B. Pitney, Chicago, secretary of the American Dental Association; Dr. Homer C. Brown, Columbus, O., member of the A. D. A. committee on legislation; Dr. A. B. Patterson, president of the Illinois State Dental Association, and Dr. Fred A. Millard, president of the Kentucky State Dental Association.

The dinner address will be made by Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical

BLOOD PRESSURE IS NOW NORMAL

Fat Women Often Have High Blood Pressure

If you are fat and have high blood pressure read this letter from Mrs. E. S. B., of Dodge City, Kansas—then use your own judgment—it was written January 1, 1932.

"The reason I am taking Kruschen Salts is: I was overweight. I naturally was sluggish in every way. I had high blood pressure and was so nervous I did not enjoy myself. I could not sleep and day after day I spent in bed with headaches. I had tried everything I ever heard of to remove fat from my body and nothing did me any good.

"I read so much in the papers about Kruschen Salts but to myself it was like all the rest, but I finally decided to try it. And Sept. 1931, I started taking Kruschen and dieting as you suggested.

"I have lost 30 lbs. and I am honestly way I never felt better in all my life. I sleep fine and my blood pressure is normal. My nerves are also better. I have recommended Kruschen Salts to lots of people and I know they are taking them with good results."

A jar of Kruschen Salts that costs but a trifle lasts 4 weeks and can be obtained at any drug store in the world.—Advertisement.

Association and author of a daily column in The Times.
Mrs. Gayle B. Wolfe, Indianapolis, was chairman of the committee of Indianapolis dentists' wives, which served as hostesses today for a luncheon bridge at the Columbia Club.

Assisting Mrs. Wolfe were Mesdames A. L. Harter, Russell P. Velt, Edward L. Mitchell, Glenn J. Peil, William A. Kemper, Harry G. Jones, Paul Scollard, Philip Falender, Gerald Hiatt and E. E. Voyles.

DEMAND CITY COUNCIL KILL LICENSE LAW

Small Poultry Dealers in City Threaten Trade
Restraint Suit.

Threats of a restraint of trade suit Monday night forced the city council to consider an ordinance repealing one which established a license fee of $200 for itinerant poultry dealers.

The ordinance was passed recently on the insistence of a group of established wholesale poultry firms which claimed their business was being ruined by "catch-as-catch-can" itinerant dealers, not even on the tax duplicate.

Small dealers organized and appeared before the council Monday night charging restraint of trade and threatening to file suit to enjoin arrest unless the council repealed the ordinance.

Proposed ordinance to establish a minimum and maximum taxicab rate was referred to the city legal department to ascertain the council's power to fix rates. Four leading cab companies are backing the proposal. Similar attempts in the past have been defeated.

An ordinance to bring all commercial vehicles weighing not more than 2,000 pounds under the $4 license fee was introduced by Clarence I. Wheatley.
Purchase of 10,000 tons of coal for the city hospital with an appropriation of $28,142.26 was approved by the council. Three other ordinances were passed to balance funds of various departments.
