ASSAULTS WETS' CLAIM

Economic Value of Prohibition Stressed at Dry Meeting.

The economic value of prohibition was stressed by Fred W. Stutz, Indianapolis school teacher, in an open air meeting at Barth and Raymond streets Wednesday night.

"Liquor interests make wild and extravagant statements regarding the improvement of returns to the farmer. During the time prohibition was in effect figures show that the increased sale of milk alone in the United States brought $720,000,000 to the dairy interests, as compared to $40,000,000 which liquor interests claim will be paid the farmers," Stutz said.

ORDER RADIO ARRESTS

Police Instructed to Seize Motorists Violating New Law.

Police were instructed Wednesday to make arrests under a new law which became effective recently forbidding motorists from equipping automobiles with radios which can receive police broadcasts.

Penalty for violation is a maximum fine of $100 and a maximum jail term of thirty days.

Normal Home Life Denied Pecora, but He Enjoys Rare Intervals With Family

Firebrand Attorney Never Worries Wife With His Investigations.

BY HELEN WELSHIMER
SEA Service Writer

NEW YORK, June 1.—Ferdinand Pecora, the immigrant lad from Sicily who grew up to disturb the even tenor of Wall Street's ways, never prepares his financial bombshells at home, according to his wife, Florence Louise Pecora.

But by the same count, the swarthy curly-headed lawyer who sits in the national spotlight as conductor of the senate inquiry into the affairs of J. P. Morgan & Co., doesn't spend much time with his family. His job doesn't permit normal home life.

"Mr. Pecora is very boyish and human when he isn't engaged on a case," his wife says. "He has a keen sense of humor and he loves to have people around. We're fond of parties, quiet home parties, in those rare intervals when he isn't at work."

A Fight Is His Hobby

"When Mr. Pecora has five hours' sleep we begin to think that he has overslept. He doesn't think much about food. He hasn't time."

"For breakfast he has fruit, an egg, a roll and coffee. Spaghetti, prepared as his mother, who lives up in the Bronx, fixes it is his favorite dish. In fact, he likes anything she cooks better than anybody else's cooking."

"He avoids pastries and sweets, though. Meals of course never are regular."

"He has always loved a good fight better than anything else in the world, but he makes sure that he is fighting for a cause he believes to be right."

"As for clothes, his tastes are conservative, but he likes to have plenty of ties and socks and everything else. . . . He golfs and swims. He likes the opera, for he is very musical. He likes the theater, too, but lately I have had to go without him."

Doesn't Bring Worries Home

When Pecora comes into his luxurious apartment, overlooking Riverside drive, he forgets his cares, his wife says. He won't talk about business or politics.

The chairs in the living room are the great cushioned type, built entirely for comfort. The pictures on the wall show scenes from Italian gardens and bays.

The man whose investigations have put more than one noted financier to the wall for a combat, has earned the right to a little leisure, though he never takes it, the blue-eyed woman, whose hair is the color of copper pennies newly-minted, will tell you.

She was married to Pecora 22½

Here is Ferdinand Pecora in the role of family man, with Mrs. Pecora and their son, Louis, 18.

years ago when he was a struggling young lawyer. They have an 18-year-old son, Louis, a student at New York University.

Pecora, born in the hill town of Nicosia, in Sicily, came to America with his father when he was 5 years old. He learned to speak English at a New York public school, and decided that he wanted to be a clergyman.

He enrolled in St. Stephen's Theological seminary, where he studied for one year. But money was scarce in his father's family and there were six younger brothers and sisters to be educated.

The lad gave up his clerical ambition. He got a job as errand boy in a law office, and decided that he, too, would be a lawyer—not one who sat at a desk and looked up records in dusty books, but one who went into court and fought battles.

Somehow he saved money every week and after a while entered New York law school. When he was 27, back in 1909, he was admitted to the New York state bar.

He liked politics. He joined Theodore Roosevelt's forces, and was appointed vice-chairman of the New York county progressive Republicans. In 1916 he left that party, joined the Wilson ranks, signed up with Tammany Hall, and in 1918 was given a deputy assistant's job in the district attorney's office.

A dozen years passed. He stayed at that desk. Then, in 1922, he was given the position of chief assistant district attorney. Eight more years passed. When 1930 came he resigned to take up a private practice.

But the former Tammany assistant district attorney couldn't escape the limelight. He had been mentioned for several high offices, which somehow he hadn't received. Lawyers respected him.

He had obtained convictions in 80 per cent of his cases while in the district attorney's office. Milk grafters, bucket shops, police graft, ballot frauds—they all felt his lash.

Thomas C. T. Cain became district attorney in 1930 and Pecora left the office. Then his present job, which was going to give him a chance for all the drama that his eager, colorful Latin nature demands, was offered to him.

He was given the position of special counsel to the senate banking and currency committee. Last January he and his two assistants, Julius Silver and David Superstein, rented a quiet office. They subpoenaed records from the financial houses of the mighty. And a few days ago they announced their findings.

Pecora has many successes that are well known. The financial crash was one of his investigating assignments. He was influential in summoning Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, to the witness stand in Washington to explain short selling.

The Harvard Bank and Trust Company investigation had its beginning in his office, too. Now he is probing private banking interests.

Meantime, his wife watches eagerly for reports—but won't ask too many questions. For at home, Pecora's only role is that of husband and father.

WATCHMAN DISABLES CAR; FIRED ON BY TRIO

Police Seize Auto Used by Three Burglar Suspects.

Two shots were fired Wednesday night at a watchman who, suspecting that a man and two boys planned a burglary, disabled an automobile they were using by removing parts of the carburetor.

The watchman, J. J. Britton, 2022 Churchman avenue, told police he found the automobile in the rear of his home after seeing the man and boys near the grocery of Art Pritchard, Raymond street and Churchman avenue.

Britton remained with the car and shortly the man and boys came back. On seeing him, the shots were fired and the three fled on foot.

Screen had been torn from a side window of the store, but entrance had not been gained.

The man was about 30, and the boys about 15, Britton said. The car, bearing a license issued to a resident on R. R. 2, Indianapolis, was seized.

Injured Man Is Sought

Police found blood stains in front of the home of Floyd Bryan, 217 East Twenty-first street, after an automobile struck his parked car Wednesday night. Bryan said he saw a young man walk away after the crash. The other automobile was impounded after police found a vacant house at the address given on the license card.

Marble Champions Will See Marvels at Fair

Midway at Exposition in Chicago Offers World of Amusement.

Is "Bozo" grinning or growling? This fearful face will greet the Indianapolis Marble champion, who goes to the Chicago Century of Progress Exposition June 26-29 as guest of The Times.

But it makes no difference whether he is grinning or growling after all. That head is a feature of the "Midway," avenue of shows and pleasure at the great fair. In the background you can see part of the Lighted Concourse, one of the show spots of the fair.

When the exposition closed its contest for a name for its amusement zone, it was found that most of the entrants had suggested that the name be merely "The Midway."

This is because at Chicago's other world's fair, the Columbian Exposition, forty years ago, fame of the "Midway Plaisance" added the word to the language. "Plaisance" was forgotten, but the central avenue of every carnival, every fair's amusement zone, every street of light, gaiety and fun, has been "The Midway" since.

"Bozo" is the guardian of the Midway at the Century of Progress exposition.

From the sky ride towers, the marble champs will look down Lief Erikson drive, transformed into the Midway to appear like a mile of dazzling jewels connecting the two ends of the fair.

Along the Midway the young marble champions will see everything from the "Fort Dearborn Massacre" to oriental bazars and European villages.

KUNKEL TAKES OVER STATE PRISON DUTIES

Michigan City Attorney Replaces Walter Daly as Warden.

By United Press

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., June 1.—Supervision of the Indiana state prison changed hands today with Louis E. Kunkel, Michigan City attorney, replacing Walter H. Daly, as warden.

Howard C. Crosby, Michigan City, became chief clerk, succeeding R. M. Bland. Both Kunkel and Crosby are Democrats. Their predecessors were Republican appointees.

Kunkel said he would make no policy changes until after he is familiar with his job. He may make an inspection tour of Michigan, Wisconsin, and Illinois state prisons and the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan.

Daly is leaving prison work, becoming distributor for an oil company at Muncie. He was on the prison staff thirty-three years and had been warden since 1925.

Empty Your Gall Bladder

And You'll Feel Like a Billion Dollars!

Sleepless nights, dog-tired days, headaches, pains in all parts of the body—indigestion—gas. Do you suffer from one or all? And have you tried every medicine under the sun only to find yourself back where you started?

So wonder, for you like thousands of others have probably been treating yourself for years with the wrong medicine. If you are suffering from indigestion, it is the most important digestive juice missing from your system. It is the "Gall Bladder" which secretes the bile, the most important digestive juice, and without it, your food is not properly digested and your system becomes clogged with gas and acidity.

From Germany's greatest chemists comes a simple, pleasant means to make this digestive juice flow freely, and put you on the sunny side of life. Magnesia Oxide, little white tablets that release pure oxygen. This amazing oxygen—purified by the air you breathe—neutralizes burning acidity and eases that poisonous, burning bile.

Take two Oxids after each meal—and before retiring—drink plenty of water—put your gall bladder to work—and you'll jump out of your skin for joy. Such new health! Such robust vigor! Get Magnesia Oxide today from your druggist.—Advertisement.
