

Prominent Families Will Be Joined With Marriage of Albert Beveridge Jr.

Ceremony, Scheduled for June 21, Will Unite Son of Famed Indianian With Girl of Old Boston Name.

BY BEATRICE BURGAN

SOCIETY here, and everywhere opened its mail with delight this week, as invitations to the wedding of Miss Elizabeth Lincoln Scaife and Albert J. Beveridge Jr. were received by notables in Chicago, Indianapolis, Boston and other parts of the country.

Two families of prominence in the midwest and east will be joined when the marriage vows are taken June 21 by Miss Scaife, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Livingston Scaife of Milton, Mass., and Mr. Beveridge, son of Mrs. Albert J. Beveridge and the late Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indianapolis and Beverley Farms, Mass.

When the grandparents of Beveridge were making history in Chicago, the ancestors of Miss Scaife were distinguishing the names of Scaife in Boston. Early Chicagoans point with pride to the Augustus Eddys, grandparents of the bridegroom-elect, and the Franklin F. Spencers, his great-grandparents.

The senior Mrs. Marshall Field of Chicago and Washington is Mrs. Beveridge's aunt. It was at her home in Chicago that Miss Abby Beveridge, the bridegroom-elect's sister, made her debut a few years ago.

Miss Beveridge will be one of the attendants to the bride as she marches to the altar in St. Michael's church at 4 in the afternoon. Immediately following, the guests will gather at the Scaife home for the reception.

Miss Scaife made her debut in Boston in 1928. Following her graduation from Milton academy and debut, she joined the fashionable Vincent Club and Junior League.

Graduate of De Pauw
Young Beveridge followed his father's educational course, being graduated from De Pauw university.

He prepared for college at St. Mark's school and later entered Harvard law school. At De Pauw he belonged to Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

Following his father's approbation of a journalistic career, young Beveridge added a colorful chapter to his life last year when he was in conflict with Japanese gangsters in an underworld section of Yokohama. He was traveling and writing a series of articles at the time for a Boston paper.

Mrs. Beveridge and Miss Beveridge traveled in Europe this winter and now are at their estate in Beverley Farms. They return frequently for short visits at their Indianapolis home, at 4164 Washington boulevard.

Another Outstanding Wedding
Another wedding of ancestral interest is that of Miss Dorothea De la Harrison of Westover, Va., who sailed Wednesday for Cincinnati, England, to marry Lieutenant Robert E. Van Meter, graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy. Lieutenant Van Meter is completing a three-year course at Oxford university on a Rhodes scholarship.

Miss Harrison is a descendant of President William Henry Harrison, whose great-grandson, William Henry Harrison, lives here. Miss Harrison also counts a signer of the Declaration of Independence, a governor of Virginia, and Jefferson C. Davis, president of the Confederacy, as famous ancestors.

She will be accompanied by seven members of her bridal party, including Miss Elizabeth Tryon of Haverford, Pa.; Miss Mary Currie Battle of Richmond, Va.; Miss Helen B. Houston and Miss Margaret Simms Leffingwell of New York. Sailing from Baltimore on the same boat, City of Hamburg, were George L. Denny and Ralph A. Lemcke, both of Indianapolis.

SORORITY SENIORS ARE ENTERTAINED

Seniors members of the Pi Beta Phi sorority at Butler university were entertained by the active chapter Wednesday night, when farewell services were held. The graduating class presented a gift to the house and received gifts from the Indiana Gamma Alumnae Club, the active chapter and the advisory board of the Indianapolis Alumnae Club.

Representatives of the advisory board who were present included Mrs. Robert Wild, vice-president of Delta province; Mrs. Frank Hatfield, president of the alumnae club, and Mrs. Carlos Deeds.

Tricky New Hats Debonair With Sports Frocks

BY PRUNELLA WOOD

THE most impatient woman can keep her mind on her knitting long enough to make one of the cocky new hats that look so debonair above a summer sports frock.

She can pack it around with her in the bottom of a largish handbag, moreover, and click her needles while she clacks her tongue at congenial gatherings.

WHILE the foolscap cornucopias are very taking to the eye, they are not becoming to every one who tries them, so a more conventional cap might be the better choice for home work. It is distinctly devastating to knitting morale to have a piece of work turn out sour and unbecoming.

Fey caps are simple and smart; so are the watch caps which terminate with a sort of chop frill at the crown of the head.

Making a scarf to complement a cap is a simple matter. The beginner, in fact, would do well to start with her scarf to get the feel of the process before she attempts the slightly more complicated business of shaping a bonnet.

The town-and-country fez, top left, is as simple to make as it is with a watch cap of feminine effect and a straight Ascot scarf. Lower smart to wear. The center photograph shows an active sports outfit, right is a beret with a coronet of striped fabric laid around it. The scarf with triangular tabs matches the coronet band.

Manners and Morals

BY JANE JORDAN

If you're unhappy, write to Jane Jordan. Tell her the facts and she will help you see what to do.

Dear Jane Jordan—What can a girl do to be popular in high school? I'm good looking and come from a good family. I am not bashful, but it seems like I can't be popular. How can I run with a higher class of girls, not rich ones, but those who are popular?

I have nice clothes, good manners and all the qualifications to be popular. There are some girls who aren't as high class as I am, yet they run with a more popular crowd. What can I do?

Answer—A lack of popularity seldom is due to a lack of personal good looks. Many a pretty girl has been obliged to sit by while an ugly young duckling walked off with all her boy friends. It is difficult to say exactly why a well-bred, good-looking girl fails to click.

Usually the difficulty lies in a certain lack of zest for living. She expects her life to be given to her instead of going out to get it for herself.

Watch the popular girl as she goes about the business of charming others. Her enthusiasm about the smallest happening is contagious. You always find her lined up on the aggressive side of life. It is she who plans the picnic, who inspires the lark, who thinks up the escapade; in short, she is what is called the life of the party.

Girls who want to be popular must not be too passive in their attitude toward life. "Be interested and you'll be interesting," is an axiom they would do well to heed. You must develop a lively curiosity about people and affairs. A good conversationalist always is popular, but an intelligent listener is just as much appreciated.

It is not so much the urge to tell as the urge to know that makes an outstanding personality. Those who can't talk fluently should increase their capacity for attention. Develop something that is essentially your own. If you take better pictures than anybody else, if you write better jingles, or even make better fudge, it is something. The more things you are interested in, the more interesting you will be yourself.

The only real boredom comes from emptiness within. It is not enough to sit still and wait for something to happen. The popular person is the person who can make things hum without help.

Dear Jane Jordan—I am only 15 years old, soon to be 16. I live on the south side and go to high school. I want to meet a boy who has an automobile and is very nice. Although I am a modern girl, I do not pet, drink or smoke. My mother is my chaperon wherever I go, and we are real pals. I love to dance. Is there any one who would like to have me for a buddy, but not for a sweetheart?

Answer—It's an interesting commentary on our social setup that the modern girl includes an automobile in the list of virtues which her boy friend must have. I do not believe that the boy friends relish this requirement any more than they do the girl friend who is chaperoned by her mother.

Boys want to be appreciated for themselves, not for their motors, and they want a young lady old enough to be trusted out of her mother's sight. If I am wrong, let the boys please write and tell me so?

Dear Jane Jordan—I am a young man of 20. I have gone with but few girls in my days. I work nights, so I don't have very much time to go with girls. Those whom I did go with didn't seem to have any use for me. How do you suggest I should get acquainted with new girls?

Answer—If you want to make friends, you will have to keep in circulation. Surely you have Sunday free to see your friends. Make friends with the people who work with you. An extra man always is welcome. All you need is to cultivate the contacts which you already have.

Dear Jane Jordan—My biggest problem right now is men. I have been married and divorced, and have had lots of sorrow, with very little happiness over a man. You probably will say forget all about them, but I have tried and it just doesn't work. I am 27 and consider rather pretty. I like to dance, play cards, and have a good time. It isn't that I am man crazy, but I would like to find some one who would be a real pal. STRANDED.

Answer—I never tell any woman to forget about men. The craving of one sex for companionship with the other can not be stamped out, so why waste words giving that sort of advice? On the contrary, I think it is absolutely essential to your well-being that you make a satisfactory love adjustment, but I can not find a man for you. That you will have to do for yourself.

Distinctive Tea Pots in Lieber's Antique Display Reflect Artistry of Past

Exhibit Includes Rare Sets Fashioned by Craftsmen of Many Countries; Workmanship Is Exquisite.

BY HELEN LINDSAY

EVEN the sturdy Norseman of primitive days indulged in an occasional "pink tea." Proof of this is to be found at H. Lieber's antique gallery, where probably the only Norwegian tea set in this part of the country is exhibited. Made of heavy silver, the three-piece set is characteristic of those early people. The spoons of the tea pot and the cream pitcher are fashioned like the prow of the old Viking ships. Repousse work on the bowls is done in the same way as the old wood carvings. Grotesque gnomes, like the illustrations in an old Norwegian fairy-tale book, are the legs supporting the pieces.

Other early tea-drinking habits are indicated in the tea sets from different countries. The Tree of Life, the Sacred Pear, and the serpent worshiped by ancient Persians have been developed into the decorations on a Persian set. Beakers that might have accompanied Omar the Tent-makers jug of wine also are shown at Lieber's.

One tea set from Persia of particularly delicate curved lines has a top which is fastened to the pot by a small silver chain.

A silver set from Spain has the lion decoration on the handle. Morning glories have formed the pattern for a set of Sheffield plate, probably dating from 1810. This was used by some English women for intimate tea parties. Not designed for the drawing room, but for friends who were received upstairs, this set is most delicate in design and size.

Work Dates Back to 1800

THE Lieber silver collection has other interesting pieces, fashioned by silversmiths as early as 1800. A Georgian soup tureen with lion-head handles has a lid with a removable handle. The cover can be used as a vegetable dish.

Wine coolers, used now for decorative purposes, once were very necessary articles for the proper serving of chilled drinks. They are made in pairs, of Sheffield plate, and were originally brought in on matching wooden stands, to be placed beside the dinner table.

An art lost in Soviet Russia has brought added value to pieces of Russian enamel work on silver. Two fine examples of this, shown at Lieber's, are a salt, with enamel work in beautiful colors and a small sugar bowl of exquisite workmanship. The lumps of sugar which the bowl once held were not dropped into the tea, as is the average custom. Russians held the lump of sugar between their teeth, drinking their tea through it.

Brown Takes Predominance

BROWN is the predominate color being shown in summer wear at the Sally Shop. It has found its way not only into linen swagger coats and print dresses of cotton or chiffon, but is much in evidence in country club frocks, of plain chiffons, taffets, and mousseline de soie.

A charming dress of this material has the softest ruffled pieces at the shoulder, and is to be worn with a brown taffeta coat, coming just below the hip line. The coat has short, full puffed sleeves and the yoke ends in streamers that tie at the neck.

Brown chiffon is shown in a pleasing ensemble. The dress has a wide stitched belt, and the coat is on swager lines, three quarter length, with full three quarter length sleeves.

A white ribbed crepe jumper dress, made with three quarter length coat of the same material, has a Roman striped linen blouse. The coat is made with a deep pointed yoke.

Ladies' Bicycles "Go Modern"

EM-ROE'S have profited by the new bicycle craze. Interested Indianapolis women are eager to try out the revived sport, and daily sales have been made of bicycles suitable for feminine riders. The new bicycles are made with chrome plated guards and forks; mud guards, electric lights and horns, and a full skirt and chain guard.

The newest development is the large balloon tire, formerly used on children's bicycles, with which women's bicycles now are being equipped. A compartment, resembling the tank on a motor cycle, will hold toilet preparations to repair damages to skin and coiffure.
